Promotions must be based upon some definite standard of accomplishments. Irregular attendance, lack of interest and mental laziness are the most prolific sources from which failures spring. During the few remaining weeks of school, strenuous efforts will be made by the teachers and pupils to assure promotion to every child.

The committee on teachers from the Board of Education is filling vacancies on the faculty as rapidly as possible. When completed the full list will be announced in the local press.

The Seniors took advantage last Wednesday of an old custom prevalent in most secondary schools and colleges and appeared during the forenoon in the plainest of ordinary work clothes. Some people are at times shocked when orthodoxy or tradition is forgotten for the moment, but a little innocent fun once in a while relieves many a tense situation in school and harms no one.

April 28 has been designated by the state authorities as Bird and Arbor Day. It is not a legal school holiday.

Scores of rural children have enrolled in the various club contests inaugurated by the agricultural department of the high school. Word was received this week that State Club Leader, T. A. Erickson, will soon visit this county to complete the club organization. The children will then all be called together and final instructions issued. To say nothing of state and special prizes, the Pennington county fair association has generously donated $200 for premiums in the various contests.

State examinations in all subjects will take place on May 26, 29, 31 and June 1.

1512 pupils have enrolled in the local schools to date. Of these almost 1400 were attending during March.

The high school changed the program this week, so that the forenoon session continues from 8:20 to 12:00 and the afternoon from 1:15 to 2:30. This order of work will continue until the close of school.

The local school is conservative in retaining the traditional line of secondary school work and in not hastily adopting the newer ideas. It is evident that modern languages are rapidly displacing Latin and Greek all over the country. Thief River schools offer a moderately rich curriculum, but there remain many improvements and additions which other well organized schools consider essential and which in time will appear here.

CONSUL OF SWEDEN VISITS THIEF RIVER

Carl E. Wallerstedt of Minneapolis, Transacts Business For Heirs of Deceased Countrymen.

Mr. Carl E. Welterstadt, consul of the kingdom of Sweden, resident at Minneapolis, was a visitor in Thief River Falls on Saturday. Mr. Wellerstedt was here looking after the interests of certain residents of Sweden who are interested in the estates left by Andrew Peterson and Fred Edenblom, the former of whom died here in July, 1914, and the latter in August of the same year. Both decedents left estates in which relatives in Sweden are interested, and it was for the purpose of clearing up these matters that the council made this trip. The Peterson estate has already been settled, but Mr. Wallersted asks to be appointed administrator for the Edenblom heirs. There is a contest on this appointment and the matter will come up before the probate court. Attorney O. A. Naplin will represent the consul in the final adjustment of the matter.

Mr. Wallerstedt is prominent in the consular service of his country, having represented the government at points in Holland and Belgium before coming here. While he admitted being well acquainted with conditions in the part of Europe now being swept by war, he said that as an officer of the government of Sweden it would be impossible for him to say anything concerning the conflict. He would not even intimate in which direction his sympathies lay or predict anything concerning the outcome or duration of the struggle.

CENSOR NOW OPENS MAIL FROM CANADA

Communications Reaching Thief River People Carefully Scrutinized For Military Secrets.

The Canadian censorship of communications of all kinds has become so strict that nothing now goes out of that country without first having been opened and searched for military secrets. Daniel Shaw president of the Jefferson highway committe for this district, rceived a lettr from Winnipeg having to deal with matters pertaining to that enterprise, and across the top of the envelope was a sticker in which was printed in large type the word "Censored." Two or three people here who have friends in the Canadian army also find that their mail has been similarily treated before being forwarded. The stampings recording the sending and receiving time of the missives would indicate that no particular delay has hen caused in the transmission of mail through the exercise of the precaution, which has only been applied to mail for the United States during the past week or ten days.

WILL TRY FOR PLACE ON WHITE SOX TEAM

Thief River Man May Land Catcher's Berth on Duluth Team of Northern League.

H. W. Hoffmeister, proprietor of the Evelyn Cafe, left Saturday for Duluth, where he joined the White Sox base ball team of the Northern league. Mr. Hoffmeister signed up with that organization early this spring and has taken his place with the practice squad for the final tryout before the season opens, which will be during the first week in May. The position which he will be given the first chance at will be that of catching but in case this division is already overcrowded it is possible that he will play in the outfield.

Mr. Hoffmeister has played with the Thief River Falls team for three seasons and during that time acquitted himself in such a manner as to call the attention of base ball managers to his work. He is a dependable, coolheaded player and a decided asset to any team. While every one in the city hopes he will make the higher position for which he will make a try, they would not be greatly disappointed if he should fall just short, because they would very much like to see him in a Thief River uniform during the coming summer. There is going to be a pennant winning team right here at home this season, and "Dutch" would be welcomed as No. 1 on the list of eligibles.

BUILT STEAMBOATS FOR WEST CANADA SERVICE

Thief River Falls Man Says That Canadians Show no More War Excitement Than Americans.

Peter Eberhart, who has been supervising the building of steamboats in Canada during the past five months, returned to Thief River Falls on Monday. Mr. Eberhart has been stationed at Big River, about 90 miles northwest of Prince Albert, in a section as yet largely devoted to lumbering, fishing and trapping. He says that while the lumbering industry is considerably the most important, that of fishing is also the mode of livelihood followed by a large number of the people. The trapping of fur-bearing animals is also followed in the forests to the north and west, and he has seen some of the finest specimens brought in.

"The war is causing but little more excitement in that section of Canada than it is in the United States," said Mr. Eberhart. "There seems to be no doubt in the minds of the people there as to which side will win, and they stand ready to help the mother country with men and money until the end for which she is fighting is achieved. There is absolutely no talk of quitting—at least not in the western section of the Dominion. When it is taken into consideration that the Canadians are not compelled to fight, the response there has been remarkable. The people are vastly proud of the record their troops have made, and on no hand do you hear a complaint of the sacrifices made."

Mr. Eber hart will remain in Thief River Falls for the present, looking after his property interests here.

RAGS AND FLOOR OIL CAUSE SMALL BLAZE

A small fire gave the department occasion for a run on Friday evening. The blaze was at the residence of E. O. Gullingsrud, 403 Main avenue north, and was extinguished before any particular damage was done. The occurance, however, serves to emphasize the warnings recently sent out by the state fire marshal relative to the danger of permitting oily rags to lie round the premises where damage may be done in case they catch fire. The Gullingsrud family had been oiling the floors in one of the rooms, and upon completing the job hal permitted the pan containing the oil to remain in the house with the polishing rag still immersed in the liquid. The combination caused spontaneous combustion, and only the fact that this occured early in the evening before the household had retired prevented a serious loss. Read the warning of the fire marshal over very carefully and heed the advice given. Doing so may prevent not only a money loss, but something even more serious.

Stock is Moved.

O. P. Johnson, who has been conducting a second hand store at 107 Main avenue north, removed his stock to the basement of the Evenson block, at the corner of Third street and Main avenue, the fore part of the week.

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN BY AUTOMOBILE CLUB

Thirty Sign as Members of New Organization —Membership Fee Fixed At $2.50.

The Thief River Automobile club held its first meeting of the season on Friday night, elected officers, fixed the price of membership, and transacted a lot of other preliminary business. The committee on membership reported that there were 30 signers on the list at this time, and that between 70 and 80 could be expected by the time the club was in running ordr.

The following officers were elected for the year: John Bratrud, president; C. R. Crandall, vice president; C. L. Hansen, secretary; George Johnson treasurer. The dues were fixed at $2.50 for the season, and a decision reached to refund the difference to those who had paid in $5.00 as such fee.

It was decided not to seek membership in the state association at this time, as it was the opinion of many of those present that the cost of such membership could be better diverted to use upon some of the roads in the neighborhood. The condition of these will be a matter which the club will particularly look into and some steps will be taken by the organization to remedy those needing it the most.

THIEF RIVER FALLS PEOPLE GET INSTANT ACTION.

Those who have used it in Thief River Falls are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. Because it acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL Adler-i-ka relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. F. G. Stebbins, druggist.

RED LAKE AND RIVER SURVEY

Provision For This Is Made in River and Harbor Appropriations Passed by Congress.

MAY MEAN DAM AT OUTLET

Any Aid by Communities, Individuals Or Other Interests to be Taken Into Consideration in Final Disposition Of Matter.

The river and harbor bill which passed the house of representatives on Saturday contains a provision for a survey of the Red Lake and the Red Lake river. This item was introduced on December 6, 1915, by Representative Steenerson, and is known as H. R. 567. The title is: "A bill providing for a survey of Red Red Lake and Red Lake river, with a view to devising plans for flood protection, improving navigation, and for other purposes."

The text of the bill as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that the secretary of war is hereby authorized and directed to cause a preliminary survey and examination to be made of Red Lake, Minnesota and Red Lake River, from its outlet at Red Lake, to its junction with the Red River of the North at Grand Forks, North Dakota, with a view to devising plans for work whereby the level of said lake an the flow of said stream may be controlled in the interests of navigation, and in making such examination and survey any proposition by local interests looking towards sharing in the expense of said project shall be taken into consideration."

This is the first step taken by the government toward controlling the flow of water in the Red Lake river, and one which will mean considerable to the sections drained by that stream. An excellent topographical survey has already been secured by the state of Minnesota, but anything in the way of water control will have to be made by the federal government, as the Red Lake river is accounted a navigable stream.

Thief River Falls citizens conversant with conditions at the outlet of Red Lake state that the recommendations of the engineers will undoubtedly include the building of a dam at that point. While this would have but slight effect upon the usual spring surplus of water, the flow during the summer could be largely regulated by the maintenance of such a dam.

The subject has thus far not created any great amount of interest in this neighborhood, but now that the first step for a survey has been taken it is likely that action toward the aiding of the project will be entertained by people in all cities along the course of the stream.

NEW PROPRIETORS FOR PEOPLES DRUG STORE

Ray Lambert and F. H. Lambert Purchase One of Stores Formerly Conducted by J. P. Curtis.

Ray Lambert a pharmacist formerly in the employ of J. P. Curtis here, but who during the past six months had been located at Virginia, Minn., returned last Friday. In company with his brother, F. H. Lambert, he will engage in the drug business in this city, the People's Drug store having been purchased by them from Mr. Curtis.

In connection with a general line of drugs the new proprietors will put in a full line of magazines and periodicals, and will add a department of sporting goods, particularly base ball and tennis supplies.

Ray Lambert enjoys a large acquaintance in this city and neighborhood, which will be a decided asset to him in the new business venture. F. H. Lambert is a resident of California and will not be actively connected with the business here.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE IS OPENED FOR BUSINESS

Fine Quarters in Library Building and First Students Are Already at Work.

The Thief River Falls Business college opened to the public this week in the basement of the library building, where commodious quarters have been arranged under the supervision of G. M. Langum, principal, who is devoting his personal attention to the work. The rooms have been equipped with handsome fixtures for the conduct of banking, counting house and general business, and students will be given practical work in these branches as well as in stenography, typewriting and business methods. A night school will be conducted and classes in English have been arranged.

A feature of the equipment plan is the fact that fixtures and desks have been manufactured by the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company and the work, turned out in short order, has been freely complimented. In fact, Mr. Langum contemplates placing orders for duplicate equipment for his other business colleges, the one in North Dakota and one at Detroit, Minnesota.

The special committee named to cooperate with Mr. Langum in the work of starting the college off under favorable auspices and with a good enrollment, visited the institution Monday and as soon as the details have all been carried out, a reception is planned at the Commercial club rooms at which local people interested in the college will meet and later visit the school.

Prospects for one of the most successful colleges in the northern part of the state are considered good and the enrollment for this time of the year, is very satisfactory. Some twenty young people have indicated their intention of taking up the work and others are expected during the school vacation. This should swell the enrollment to 50 for the summer months and that this will be doubled by fall is the belief of those interested.

THIEF RIVER LADS TO FIGHT FOR KING GEORGE

Oscar And Alfred Gunderson, Who Left Here Ten Years ago, Have Joined Canadian Army.

Oscar and Alfred Gunderson, age 22 and 18 respectively, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Gunderson, who left Thief River Falls with their parents ten years ago to reside on a farm near Kincorth, Sask., are at present training with the Canadian army at Maple Creek, Sask., to fight for King George.

ALFRED GUNDERSON
To Fight With "Tommies"

News to this effect was received by Edwin Alnes the first of the week, when a vigorously censored letter containing meager information reached him. The letter was sent by Alfred Gunderson, a former schoolmate of Edwin Alnes, together with his photograph which is herewith produced.

The letter as sent by young Gunderson from Maple Creek on April 10, 1916 follows:

"Well I am now a soldier for the King. Oscar and I enlisted the 22nd of February. We expect to leave for England in July."

Both of the boys have attended the Thief River Falls public schools and their parents are well known residents of the city. Mr. Gunderson was formerly owner of the Bennett Livery stable on Third street and conducted this business for a number of years. After selling out to Jenson & Sons they removed to North Dakota and then to Canada.

MERCHANTS AGREE TO CLOSE AT EIGHT O'CLOCK

Will Remain Open Until 10 O'clock on First and Fifteenth of Each Month.

An agreement has been entered into by the merchants of Thief River Falls whereby they pledge themselves to close their stores at 8 o'clock in the evening, except on Saturdays and on the first and fifteenth of each month. The agreement goes into effect on May 1.

Following are the signers: Peter Neste, M. N. Benson, Gilbert Sandum, H. K. Strand, Arthur F. Loken, J. L. Inman, I. E. Hovick, Carl Christofferson & Co., Oen Mercantile Co., Laing Hardware Co., Henry O. Loken, Spink Hardware Co., Wallace W. Watson, Theo. Salverson, John Wold.

AT THE THEATRES

Pantages at Princess.

The Pantages vaudeville troup, appearing at the Princess next Saturday and Sunday, is direct from Chicago, and the same troup that is showing in the best theatres of that city and Winnipeg.

Colored Feature at Lyceum.

"The Beloved Vagabond," a gold Rooster play featuring Edwin Arden, will be seen at the Lyceum next Thursday evening. The story concerns one Paragot, deprived in his youth of his faith in man; of his search for its recovery throughout the land; of his sad return, and of something he found in a cottage. This is an intensely interesting play, full of love and recklessness and absenthe and adventure. The ending is as startling as the plot is mystifying, and the entire production provides an entertainment of the highest order.

Real Castles and Things.

In the DeLux picture, "The White Rosette," appearing Saturday at the Princess, you will see a real castle, a draw-bridge, a moat and other contraptions of a medieval age. There are knights, ladies, barons and lords, the whole affording one of the most romantically interesting photoplays ever produced. Helen Rosson and E. Forest Taylor are featured.

Mary Miles Minter.

This great little screen star will be seen featured in "Emmy of the Stork's Nest" at the Princess on Sunday night. This is a story of the Kentucky hills, showing a counterfeiter's den and a life among the mountaineers. There is a wild, free girl of the woods, a fashionable city man whose fashionable clothes at first cause her intense amusement but whose personality earns her respect and then her love; an intercepted note; a misunderstanding; a desperate chase by the sheriff; a fatal plunge over a towering cliff, and the final explanation that clears up all. It is a story brimming with thrills and romantic interest.

SANITARY ENGINEER TO ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

J. A. Childs of State Board to Make Investigation—Miss Grenager Also Here.

J. A. Childs, a sanitation expert with the state board of health, will arrive in Thief River Falls on Monday for the purpose of making an investigation into the conditions surrounding the city's water supply. Mr. Childs will make a particular study of the sewage disposal system with a view to discovering whether or not there is any possible chance of contamination from this source. The council at its last meeting instructed Dr. J. E. Douglass, city health officer, to procure the aid of an expert from the state department if it were possible, in order that something definite might be ascertained with regard to the best means of safeguarding the people's health. Mr. Childs will make his report direct to the council, said report being in all probability forthcoming at the first regular meeting in May.

Miss Grenager Here.

Miss Gudrun Grenager, a visiting nurse connected with the Minnesota Public Health association, arrived in the city on Monday evening and has taken up the task of looking into conditions in the homes and schools of the city. Miss Grenager is here at the request of the Pennington County Health association, and will remain for a month. This lady's work is largely of an advisory nature and as there is no epidemic of any kind either present or threatened at this time, she will devote most of her time and attention to telling the people how these may be escaped in the future.

Miss Grenager will give an address on the subject of "Medical Insepection in the schools," at the high school auditorium on the evening of Thursday, April 27. She is making her home while in this city at the residence of S. J. Swanson, 124 First street west.

At this meeting on the 27. Dr. H. W. Froehlich will give an address on general health topics. As county physician, Dr. Froehlich include in his remarks such items as will prove of particular interest to dwellers in the rural communities, and these are particularly invited.

Notice Of Judgement Sale.

Pursuant to a real estate tax judgment of the district court of the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, entered the 15th day of March A. D. 1916, in proceedings for enforcing payment of taxes and penalties upon Real Estate in the County of Pennington remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January 1916, and of the statutes in such case made and provided, I shall on Monday, the 8th day of May 1916, at 10:00 o'clock a. m. at the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls and County of Pennington, sell the lands which are charged with taxes, penalties, and costs in said judgment, and on which taxes shall not have been previously paid.

T. P. Anderson
Auditor of Pennington County.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Strengthened by Thief River Falls Experiences.

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Thief River Falls people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Thief River Falls people.

Mrs. George Williams, 412 Main Ave. N., Thief River Falls, says: "I think highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and have all reason to, as the cure they made in my case has been permanent. It is a little over four years ago that I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I was bad off with my kidneys and back and wasn't able to work for a whole summer. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that cured Mrs. Williams. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—A20-27.

LOCAL PERISCOPE

Dr. O. F. Mellby was a professional caller at Holt on Saturday.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church will hold a food and apron sale at Christofferson's Grocery store, 221 LaBree avenue north, on Saturday, April 22. The ladies of the Queen Esther circle will hold a candy sale at the same time and place.

Edward Thorstad, who has been acting as chief clerk at Salverson's Cash store on Third street, left Tuesday afternoon for Lockhart, where he will act as manager of Mr. Salverson's store. He was accompanied by Theo Salverson, who will remain in Lockhart for a few days attending to business matters. Mr. Salverson contemplates on closing his store in Thief River Falls some time in August.

On April 13, 1916 at Pasadena, California, a baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kratka, Jr. Their home is at Indian Springs, Nevada, where Mr. Kratka is employed as civil engineer. Mrs. Frank Kratka was formerly Miss Gynor McConnell, at one time instructor in the local public schools, while Frank Kratka is well known here having grown up in Thief River Falls and a graduate of the local high school with the class of 1909.

We have just received a carload of good Burbank seed potatoes. For sale at the Thief River Produce company, located in building formerly occupied by the Hamm Brewing company on Soo tracks.—A20.

"The girls of Pennington county are very bashful" said Clerk of Court Harry Ives this morning. "For the past four months I have offered to donate a free marriage license to the first girl, who will appear here and make application, but have had no response as yet." The clerk's office has been a dead place during the past week as far as wedding permits are concerned as not one license was issued.

Nels Berg, who has been suffering from cancer of the cheek, and who has been receiving medical aid at Winnipeg, returned last evening in a serious condition. He was accompanied by Mrs. Berg, who went up to Winnipeg in the morning. Mr. Berg was taken ill last December, when a lump started to form on his left cheek. He then sought the aid of an Indian woman at Winnipeg, who had cured several hopeless cases of the dreaded disease, and has remained in her care for several months. This Indian woman, who formerly owned land where parts of Thief River now stand, has gained a wide reputation for curing cancer by means of using certain poultices to draw the disease out from its lodging.

Send your orders for Easter lilies and cut flowers to the Olympia Candy kitchen. The most complete line in the city. Try our ice cream and special brick ice cream. Orders filled quickly and delivered.—A20.

Members of the local Masonic lodge who left Wednesday afternoon for Grand Forks to attend the staging of the Third degree of Masonry by 12 Past Masters of the Grand Lodge were: T. L. Melgaard, cashier of the Citizens State bank, Edward Erevig, bookkeeper at the Citizens bank, Arthur Loken, of Loken Bros., Department store, B. Dan Bjorkman, of the Model Steam laundry, Highway engineer W. E. Monks and James Prichard. Masons from all parts of the country tributary to Grand Forks made a pilgrimage to that city to attend the exercises, and it is estimated that about 300 were present. A large class of candidates received the degree. The ceremonies bgan at 7:15 p. m. and were held at the Masonic Temple.

THE OPEN COURT

Wants Bounty On Crows.

Thief River Falls Times.
Dear Sirs:

The farmers all over the county are more than anxious to see that our Commissioners put a bounty on crows this season, and if they do, it is high time the bounty was in effect as one crow killed now means something to the farmers. It will not only stop the damage they do to the grain, but it will stop a big increase of young crows. There has been a bounty on crows heretofore but it was not in effect until the crows had a good increase. Now is the time to have them killed and we are in hopes that our County Commissioners will not overlook this matter or bring the crow season in with chicken season so the hunters can shoot chickens for crows.

Yours very truly
G. W. Eastman.

DR. J. A. GATES IS THIEF RIVER VISITOR

Candidate For Lieutenant Governor Looks Over Field in Northwestern Minnesota.

Dr. J. A. Gates of Kenyon, candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, was in Thief River Falls on Friday, getting acquainted with our people and distributing a few cards in the interest of his candidacy. Among the former neighbors who the doctor found here were George C. Johnson and John Bratrud, and these gentlemen took the candidate in tow.

A Thorough Gopher.

Dr. Gates is essentially a Minnesota product and has had the legislative experience which should go far to fit him for the position he seeks. He was born in the state, is a graduate of the university, and was a member of the legislature of 1905, 1907 and 1909.

FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

DR. J. A. GATES,
Kenyon, Goodhue County.

In speaking of his prospects for success at the primaries, Dr. Gates said that he had everywhere met with the most encouraging reception. Indications are that the race for this office will be three cornered, and the doctor believes that his chances are fully as good as those of either of the other candidates seeking the nomination. He seems a very pleasant, capable gentleman, and made a good impression upon all whom he met while here.

ANDERSON DECIDES TO WITHDRAW FROM RACE

Fergus Falls Man Will Not Be Candidate For Congressman Steenerson's Job.

A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls, has decided not to enter the field as a candidate for congress at the coming election.

It has generally been understood among the newspapers of the district that Mr. Anderson was already in the field, but he has never made any announcement to this effect and, while appreciating the many tenders of support that he has received from friends he does not feel that it would be desirable for him to make a contest at this time.

It is believed that the response to the announcement that Mr. Anderson would be a candidate was not of a nature sufficiently enthusiastic to warrant him in opposing the renomination of Congressman Steenerson. It is generally admitted that the latter has made an excellent representative and one whose popularity it would be almost impossible to overcome in the Ninth district.

Mr. Anderson's action in thus withdrawing leaves Steenerson without an opponent at this time, and it is doubtful if one will be forthcoming before the primaries. It is generally conceded that the present congressman is entitled to renomination and election, and it is not likely that any opposition will develop within the ranks of his own party.

EIGHT AMENDMENTS TO BE SUBMITTED

Important Constitutional Provisions To Come Before Voters at General Fall Election.

The voters of the state should begin studying the provisions of the different constitutional amendments which will come up to be voted on at the general election this fall. There are eight of these propositions, and most of them are of great importance. Amendment No. 1, which provides for the creation of a revolving fund of $250,000, for the purpose of draining, protecting from fire and otherwise improving the vast land holdings of the state in the northern counties is one to be particularly considered. This amendment came within a few votes of passing at the last election, and as its provisions and aims are now more fully understood there is little doubt of its adoption when the people again have a chance to express themselves concerning it.

No. 1.—Amendment to section 2, article 8, authorizing the setting apart of a revolving fund of not over $250,000 from the school and swamp land funds, to be used in constructing ditches and firebreaks in, through and around unsold school and swamp lands and in clearing such lands.

No. 2.—Amendment to section 6, article 8, relating to the investment of school funds and authorizing the investment and loaning of school funds on improved farm lands within the state.

No. 3.—Amendment to article 9, authorizing the legislature to provide by law to protect and regulate all public waterways and rivers, and for the mining and sale of any iron ore or other minerals situated under the waters of any public lake or river.

No. 4.—Amendment to section 2, article 6, increasing the number of associate justices of the supreme court from four to six, and that the clerk shall be appointed by the court.

No. 5.—Amendment to section 11, article 4, permitting the approval in part by the governor of single items of an appropriation bill.

No. 6.—Amendment to section 13, article 1, relative to the taking of private property.

No. 7.—Amendment to section 1, article 4, so as to reserve to the people the direct power of the initiative and referendum as additional means to secure and control legislation, and as an additional means by which the people may amend the constitution.

No. 8.—Amendment to section 7, article 6, changing the length of the term of the judge of probate court.

SEVERAL FILINGS MADE ON SAME HOMESTEAD

Court Commissioner William Michelet of Thief River Falls, took 34 homestead filings for lands in the Mud Lake district on Thursday. The applicants were mostly squatters who have been living on the lands for some time, and Commissioner Michelet made the trip to Holt in order that they might make their filings without delay. They came to the Marshal county village, transacted their business and were all back again the same evening.

Mr. Michelet says that an entry was made on every foot of the Mud Lake bottom before him that day, and for certain sections there were two or three filings. Beside the 34 applications taken on Thursday, there have been several placed on file at the office of the commissioner in this city, there being in the neighborhood of 75 accepted by him altogether. The land office at Crookston will first decide upon whom the land belongs to, but this will harly settle the matter in most cases and the department at Washington will likely have to pass upon many contests before the ownership is finally determined.

Photographs Wanted.

The secretary of the Commercial club is anxious to secure good pictures of farm homes, buildings, silos and especially scenes showing cattle and stock in the pastures or yards. These will be used for publicity purposes and arrangements have been made to have them appear in the different booklets gotten out by the Immigration Department of the state. All interested in boosting for the advantages of Pennington county as a stock and dairy country are urged to co-operate in the publicity work. Bring or mail your photos to the secretary of the Commercial club at once.

Thank You.

The undersigned hereby wish to express thier thanks to the citizens who so cheerfully assisted in the saving of their property during the high water which threatened Saturday and Sunday. The aid was timely and is greatly appreciated.

JUDGE DECIDES MALT LIQUORS ARE NOT BEER

District Court in Aitkin County Ruling, Holds That Beverage is Soft Drink.

Owners of near beer and soft drink establishments in Thief River Falls, will be interested in knowing that a decision recently rendered by the district court in Aitkin county holds that these beverages are not classed as "intoxicating" and that the state law referring to the sale of malt drinks as unlawfull does not apply to them.

The case referred to was brought by the authorities of Aitkin county against Arthur Woodrow, the claim being made that he was violating the Hanson law by the sale of a certain beverage manufactured by a brewery. This law provides that the sale of malted liquor may only be conducted in a licensed saloon. Affidavits from prominent chemists, among them those of the state dairy and food department, testified that the beverage was not alcholic or fermented liquor and not made from malted grains, and the defendant was discharged.

This is not the view taken of the matter by County Attorney Youngquist of Polk county, however, and he is insisting that the purveyors of malted drinks and near beer go out of business or be prosecuted.

Steenerson and Kellogg File.

Halvor Steenerson, congressman from the Ninth district, filed for renomination on Monday in the office of the secretary of state.

Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul filed Saturday for the Republican nomination as United States Senator.

How Many Miles
Are There In A Gallon Of Gasoline?
That Depends on the Type of Motor in your Car.

WHEN you buy a Buick six cylinder, valve-in-head motor car you not only get the last word in comfort, style, power and speed, but we guarantee that you get an automobile which will give you the highest gasoline mileage.

It is an admitted fact that the valve-in-head motor does give 15 per cent more power than any other type of gasoline motor which means 15 per cent more mileage per gallon of gasoline.

This is not a theory but a fixed engineering principal resulting from the perfecting of the Buick valve-in-head motor.

Thousands of users of Buick valve-in-head six cylinder cars give evidence daily that they are getting 20 miles an hour or more per gallon of gasoline consumed while touring with full passenger load and many users report over 25 miles per gallon.

The Proven Economy of the Buick Valve-In-Head Car Should Make it Your Preference.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide.

THE NURSE'S STORY

LANGDON, opening the door of the witness-room, glanced in. A sharp little frown of anxiety etched two fine vertical lines between his eyes; but at sight of the tall, trimly clad woman talking to the doctor a smile of relief replaced the scowl. He came forward eagerly.

"Thank goodness you were able to get here," he said, taking her hand in both of his. "It means so much to us to have you; but I didn't like to insist, or call the law to my aid. How is the recalcitrant patient?"

"Oh, the patient is doing splendidly, thanks," she answered with a smile, "but I should have come anyway, duty or no duty. How is Miss Page bearing up?"

"The patient is doing splendidly."

"Very bravely, all things considered," said Langdon: but now his tone was grave with a hint of wistfulness.

Another day of the trial was begun. As on the day before, so fraught with terrible revelations, it was Mrs. Page who was the first witness.

"I have only a few questions, Mrs. Page," said Langdon gently. "How long after your husband's death was it that you learned the whereabouts of your daughter?"

"It may have been an hour—or perhaps less. A letter came from Philip and said, 'Don't worry. Mary is safe in Dr. Jamison's home. For obvious reasons I advise you not to come here till later. Will then explain all.' I went and got my hat and cloak to go to her, but James Pollock drove up in his automobile just as I was going down the path to the gate. He said he hated to disturb me at such a time, but that I must remember that Mary was his fiancee, and he was getting tired of Mr. Langdon's attitude. 'I am the one who should have taken care of her last night,' he said, 'and I demand that you immediately stop Langdon's interference.' I told him that my poor child had suffered enough: that I would not in any way interfere in the future. In fact, I—I blamed him for the awful tragedy of the night before. It seemed to me that but for him my daughter would be safe and well and my husband living, and I told him so. He said that if I would not deal with Langdon, he would, and that he would expect Mary to keep her word to him. Then he left. At the gate he met a boy coming in with a note, and after some talk, he gave the boy some money and took the note himself. He tore it open and read it; then, crumpling it in his hand as if angry, he flung it aside and got into his motor. As soon as he was out of sight I ran out and picked up the note. It—it was addressed to me, and it said: 'I am taking Mary to Dr. Foster's sanatorium outside the city. She bears up bravely under the news of her father's death. Will call later. Philip.' The next I remember is lying on the bed in my own room and hearing our doctor say, 'It's all too much for her. I wish to God she had some relatives or someone to help her.'"

"That is all, Mrs. Page, unless the State has some questions to ask." His voice rose interrogatively, but the prosecutor shook his head.

"Dr. Angus Foster!"

Only the fear of the dire threat of the judge to "clear the room if there was any disturbance" held the spectators silent at the sound of that name, for Dr. Foster had played his role in many another court-room, while his fame was a byword all over the world. Kings of Wall Street owed their grip upon affairs to his care when mental breakdowns seemed inevitable.

He was not a tall man, but the dignity of his carriage, and the way he held his shoulders, lent him an appearance of great height as he took his place in the witness-box and held up his right hand to take the oath.

"Dr. Foster, you specialize in diseases of the brain, do you not?"

"I do. In both mental and nervous ills."

"Have you a sanatorium just outside this city?"

"I have."

"Have you ever seen the defendant before?"

"I have seen Miss Page on several occasions. The first time was when I saw Mr. Langdon, whom I had known for some years, drive up with a girl beside him in the motor. She seemed to be asleep or only partially conscious. She opened her eyes as I came up, and got unsteadily to her feet, and then I noticed that her heavy veil hid the fact that her face was livid from some great suffering. After we had given her into the charge of Nurse Walton I took Mr. Langdon into my office, where he told me briefly of Miss Page's attack of madness, and the incidents that had led up to it. While Mr. Langdon was still talking I saw an automobile drive furiously up to my gate and a man leap out. My exclamation drew Langdon to the window and he cried sharply, 'My God! that's James Pollock!'"

"Did you already know who he was?"

"Yes, I had heard of him from various men who had been my patients, and Mr. Langdon had already told me that Mr. Pollock was engaged to Miss Page, and also something of how that engagement had been brought about."

"Was Mr. Pollock brought to your office?"

"No. I went out into the hall to meet him and took him into the general reception-room. I told him Miss Page's condition necessitated absolute rest for at least twenty-four hours. He became insulting and abusive and accused me of keeping Miss Page a prisoner, so I decided the best thing to do was to let the young lady herself decide whether or not she wanted to see him."

"Did you go at once to Miss Page?"

"No, I left Mr. Pollock in the reception-room and returned to my office, where I apprised Mr. Langdon of the situation. Together we went to the room assigned to Miss Page. She was in bed, and seemed comfortable and calm. While I was talking to her, however, finding out a little of her nervous condition, Mr. Langdon, who had been sitting near the door, gave a sharp exclamation and darted out into the hall. Miss Walton the nurse went to the door after him, but before she reached it we could all hear the sounds of a loud altercation. When I reached the scene myself, I found Mr. Langdon barring the way and Mr. Pollock attempting to force himself past to get to Miss Page's room. He declared it to be his right to be with her and said that Mr. Langdon was an interloper, a kidnapper, and a great many other things."

"Did you interfere?"

"I did. It took me some time to quiet Mr. Pollock, but he returned to the reception-room eventually, and Mr. Langdon and I hurried back to Miss Page who was very much excited and was crying out that she did not want to see 'James'—or anyone except her mother and Mr. Langdon. She quieted down when we came in, especially after she had been reassured that no one would disturb her."

"Did you give any orders to that effect?"

"I did. I told Miss Walton to sit where she could watch the door, and that if James Pollock made any attempt to come down the hall she was at once to ring for help and bar him out."

"Did Miss Walton seem to consider the order unusual?"

"Well, not exactly that. She seemed agitated and upset by the name, but evaded my question as to whether she knew him. However, as I had always found her trustworthy and a splendid nurse, I paid but little attention to her excitement."

"You say you paid but little attention to her excitement. Did you have any inkling as to what might have caused that agitation?"

"Not at the time, but later when Miss Walton told me what had happened, admitting—"

"May it please the court," interrupted the Prosecutor, leaping to his feet. "Dr. Foster is retailing hearsay, and I object to the question of my learned colleague." There was a tinge of satisfaction in his voice at being able to interrupt the famous alienist who was said to know as much of law as of medicine, and the doctor flushed with annoyance. But Langdon showed no discomfiture; there was, in fact, a smile of satisfaction curling the corners of his lips as the judge leaned forward and said slowly:

"Strike out the question beginning, 'You say you paid but little attention to her excitement,' and its answer. Continue, Mr. Langdon."

"That is all, Dr. Foster," said Langdon promptly, and the District Attorney had only one question:

"When Mary Page was brought to your sanatorium, was she not perfectly sane?"

"Temporarily so, but her nervous condition was such that extreme mental suffering was very evident. We doctors have many definitions of that word 'sane', sir."

"That is all." And as the doctor stepped down from the witness-box with a covert smile, the name of the next witness was called by the bailiff.

This was a new player in the vast drama whose every act was seemingly a fresh tragedy, and the reporters whispered the name among themselves as they bent over their copy, striving to place her among the scores who had been drawn into the net flung by the police and Langdon after the strange murder of James Pollock. Her name slipped from lip to lip through the spectators as well and more than one man in the back of the room stood up to stare when the tall brisk woman came confidently from the witness-room and took her place on the stand.

"Miss Gertrude Walton!"

She gave her name with gravity, her age with a smile, and her occupation with pride, as "trained nurse."

"Miss Walton," said Langdon, "you specialize in nervous cases, do you not?"

"I do."

"How long have you been doing that sort of nursing?"

"For twelve years. I began it by—by—nursing my sister through a terrible illness when she seemed likely to lose her reason. I have never forgotten her suffering, and I have specialized in nervous cases ever since."

"Are you attached to the staff at Dr. Foster's sanatorium?"

"I am."

"You have been there a good many years, have you not?"

"Yes."

"When was the first time that you saw the defendant, Mary Page?"

"On the morning when she was brought to the sanatorium for treatment."

"Miss Walton, did you know James Pollock?"

For the first time her quiet confidence forsook her, and a red spot crept into each cheek, and there was a visible hesitation before she answered slowly:

"Mr. Pollock asked me if I was Miss Page's nurse."

"I had never MET Mr. Pollock, but I had heard a great deal about him. His—his name was very familiar to me."

"Then the first time you saw him was when he came to the sanatorium asking for Miss Page?"

Again there was a hesitation before the answer:

"Yes."

"Will you tell the court, please, what happened after Dr. Foster ordered you to keep James Pollock out of the room of your new patient—Miss Page?"

"I—I felt that I ought to know what he looked like that I might make no mistake, so I went down the hall towards the reception-room. As I reached the door, however, it was opened and Mr. Pollock stepped out. At sight of me he paused, then asked me if I was Miss Page's nurse. I said I was, and when we were in the reception-room, Mr. Pollock told me that he was the fiancee of Miss Page, and that Mr. Langdon was taking advantage of Miss Page's nervous condition to influence her against him. He told me that—that—he would make it well worth my while to help him remove her to another sanatorium which had been selected by her mother, and pointed out the fact that Mrs. Page had not come with her daughter as indicating her dissatisfaction with Dr. Foster's hospital."

"Did you agree to help him?"

"Yes."

"What instructions did he give you?"

"He—he told me to give Miss Page a sleeping draught that night, and said that when the hospital was quiet at eleven he would have his automobile outside and if I would let him in, he would carry Miss Page to it, and take her to the other sanatorium. He also asked me if I would take the case, as a private nurse, and when I said yes, he wrote the name down on a piece of paper for me."

"Do you mean," interrupted the judge, "that you were ready to throw up your position with Dr. Foster, and allow one of his patients to be stolen from his sanatorium without investigating the truth of the man's statements?"

"You mean about Mr. Langdon?" she stammered. "Oh—I—I knew that was not true. I—I agreed because of—of a certain plan I had in mind. Then—he—led me to expect that he would pay me well and left."

"Miss Walton, do you recall the name of the sanatorium to which Mr. Pollock wished to take Miss Page?"

"Yes. It was Professor Zellar's sanatorium at Ortonville."

"Did you carry out your plans for that night?"

"No. The plan I had formed miscarried, because of the watchfulness of Mr. Langdon, who unwittingly hindered me."

"I gave Miss Page a sleeping-draught at ten o'clock and then put on my own hat and laid my cloak ready. At eleven I went down to the reception-room and unlocked one of the French windows which was almost immediately opened by Mr. Pollock. He followed me back to the bedroom, and picking up Miss Page whom I had carefully wrapped in blankets he carried her out to his automobile. As soon as he was on the veranda I closed the window and started to run to the front of the house, but I was stopped by Mr. Langdon, who was spending the night at the sanatorium and had already discovered Miss Page's absence. He—he caught me by the arm and demanded to know where she was. I tried to get away—because—because moments were precious just then, but he wouldn't let go and finally I told him that Mr. Pollock had just carried Miss Page off. At that he rushed out of the house and down the drive, and sprang onto the running board of Mr. Pollock's motor, which was just starting up. Mr. Pollock struck at him, but he hung on, and kept on fighting till the motor swung around the curve and into the main road, and then the force of the turn flung Mr. Langdon off. By that time the detectives were in the road and fired after the car but it didn't stop—"

"Why—why—" she stammered, confused by the sudden interruption. "The ones I sent for. I wanted Mr. Pollock caught in the act of kidnapping Miss Page, but Mr. Langdon held me back too long and prevented my giving the signal agreed upon."

A wave of sound that was the composite exclamation of those in the room swept like a breath of wind through the court and faded to silence, and Langdon asked:

"You had a special reason for wanting David Pollock caught by the police, had you not, Miss Walton?"

"Yes!" she cried, and her voice took on a sudden fierce note of suffering and anger. "I wanted him punished, and I thanked God for the chance that had been put into my hands!"

"Why?"

"Because he ruined my little sister, and left her to die of shame and heartbreak!"

"Your Honor!" It was the prosecutor's voice. "I object to that question and answer. It defames the character of a dead man, and has no bearing upon this case. What is more, it cannot be proved!"

"You are perfectly right," said the Judge sternly. "Let the evidence of the witness be stricken out from the words 'signal agreed upon.'"

Langdon bowed his head submissively, but there was a gleam of triumph in his eyes, for he knew that though the words might be stricken out of the record, they could not so easily be erased from the minds of those who had heard them.

They had, in fact, laid bare another tragedy, and the words of Miss Walton earlier in the day, "I began by nursing my sister through a terrible illness when she seemed likely to lose her reason," gained a poignant meaning, that made more than one juryman move restlessly, and brought a whisper of sympathy from the spectators.

The court clerk monotonously read the corrected evidence and then Langdon, after a moment's thought, said:

"Miss Walton, when your plan miscarried and Mr. Pollock succeeded in carrying off Miss Page, what did you do?"

"I ran back to the hospital veranda where Dr. Foster was standing, having been drawn out by the sound of shots, and told him as quickly as I could what had happened, and where they had taken Miss Page."

"Did he make any comment upon the address you gave him?"

"Yes. He gave a sharp exclamation when I handed it to him and said, 'Great heavens! I've heard of that place—and what I've heard was anything but good.' At that one of the detectives took it and when he had read it he whistled and said, 'Zellar's! My God, we'd better follow pretty quick, if you want to rescue the girl. We've had our eye on that joint for some time.' At that Dr. Foster said, 'We will follow quickly, for my car can be here in a minute.'"

"Will you tell the court, please, exactly what happened when you reached the sanatorium?"

"Dr. Foster stopped the automobile at some distance down the road and put out the lights. Then we all slipped into the grounds as quietly as possible and the four men hid in the bushes while I went boldly up to the door and rang the bell. I asked to see either Dr. Zellar or Mr. Pollock, and was taken into an office where both men were sitting. Mr. Pollock seemed relieved to see me, as he said Miss Page was very much excited and had been sobbing and screaming, but he was obviously suspicious of me. I—I—told him, however, that I had had a fierce battle with Langdon to hold him back from pursuing them, and that it was he who had fired the shots; so at last he seemed convinced and took me up to Miss Page's room. She was hysterical and feverish and clung to me desperately. She was sitting on the edge of her bed, in a narrow room whose windows were heavily barred, while the door had not only a lock but two bolts as well."

"I'll get her out of here, if I have to kill you."

"Yes, and Mr. Pollock would have locked us both in, had it not been that I protested, saying that if Miss Page grew violent in the night I must be free to get out and call for help. But even though he left the door unlocked he lingered just outside for a long time, and I was unable either to soothe Miss Page or give the signal, for fear of arousing his suspicions. At last I heard him go downstairs, and I told Miss Page that Dr. Foster and Mr. Langdon were outside, and when she had sunk back crying with relief I carried the lamp to the window and gave the signal. Then I started down stairs to let the men in."

"Were the halls deserted?"

"Yes—both deserted and dark. But just as I was slipping back the bolts of the front door, the door to the office was opened by an attendant and in the light that streamed out he could see me plainly. I tried to slip the last bolt before he could reach me, but it was stiff and I couldn't move it. With an oath he grabbed me by the arm and dragged me into the office. Both Dr. Zellar and Mr. Pollock were there, and he told them what I had been doing. At that Mr. Pollock grabbed me and shook me and demanded to know what I was up to. He hurt me and frightened me so, I couldn't think of anything to say and I just screamed, thinking that those outside would hear me and break in. They did hear me, for they began to hammer on the door and demand entrance, and I screamed again. But at that Mr. Pollock clapped his hand over my mouth and Dr. Zellar caught my wrists, and between them they dragged me into a little room beyond the office and flung me into a chair. Then I saw that Dr. Zellar had a revolver in his hand and he thrust it into my face, promising to 'do for me' if I made any noise. They went out and locked the door, but as soon as they were gone I ran to it and listened, and I heard the doctor tell his assistant (the one who had caught me at the door) to go upstairs and watch 'the girl'. Then he and Mr. Pollock had a conference and decided to let Dr. Foster and Mr. Langdon in, but to deny that Miss Page was there. 'I'll go upstairs and wait till you get rid of them,' said Mr. Pollock. Then I heard a door close and everything was quiet.

"Soon I heard Dr. Foster's voice saying, 'Miss Page has been forcibly dragged from my sanatorium and brought here. I demand her instant release, and I have my car outside to take her back to the hospital.' At that Dr. Zellar laughed sneeringly and said, 'Is it your usual method of getting patients to run about at night and kidnap them from rival sanatoriums? I could hear Dr. Foster give a little muttered oath of anger, but Mr. Langdon broke in sharply saying, 'This is no time for listening to any tomfool insults from you, Zellar—what we want is Miss Page, and by heaven, I'll get her out of here, if I have to kill you and break down every door in the place.' 'Even that wouldn't get her,' said Dr. Zellar, 'for this Miss Page, as you call her, is not here.' 'You lie!' shouted Langdon, 'we know she is. The nurse has already signalled us to that effect.' 'I'm afraid your friend has been drinking a little too much,' sneered Zellar, speaking apparently to Dr. Foster, for it was the latter who answered: 'I suppose,' he said drily, 'that you will deny also that a woman screamed to us for help a few minutes ago.' 'One of the patients had a nightmare,' said Zellar, but he spoke uneasily.

"Suddenly Mr. Langdon shouted, 'Nurse Walton! Nurse Walton!' And in answer I beat upon the door and cried, 'In here! In here!' Almost instantly it seemed I heard the sound of running feet, and the door was unlocked and I stumbled out almost into Mr. Langdon's arms. But before we could either of us move away from the spot Zellar said grimly, 'Stand where you are, all three of you!' And we saw that he was covering us with his revolver. Then there came a most terrible cry from upstairs—the long scream of a woman either half crazed or in deadly fear. Even Zellar was horrified by it, and his arm wavered a little as he turned his head. At that Mr. Langdon sprang upon him, and bore him back against the table. They fought desperately, both Dr. Foster and I trying to help, and at length Mr. Langdon succeeded in twisting the arm of Dr. Zellar so that his fingers went limp and the revolver fell to the floor. Dr. Foster snatched it up and Mr. Langdon cried, 'Keep that beast covered till I get Mary,' and went running out of the room and up the stairs. It was then that I remembered the two detectives and realized that we had help outside, so I hurried to the door and flung it open. They were right there, half crazy with anxiety, and when I shouted, 'Up stairs,' they went up two at a time with me close behind."

"Will you tell us, please, what you saw when you reached the upper landing?"

"We saw Mr. Langdon and Mr. Pollock on the floor engaged in a furious struggle, while from the door of Miss Page's room came the sound of little hands beating against the wood, and almost continuous screams or bursts of hysteric laughter, interspersed with oaths in a man's voice! The detectives went at once to Mr. Langdon's aid, and when they had seized Mr. Pollock one of them covered him with his revolver while the other ran with Mr. Langdon and myself to the door of Miss Page's room. It was locked, and our cries to Mary to let us in only brought more terrible screams from her, so the detective, warning us back, fired his revolver downward through the keyhole, shattering the lock, and we burst into the room.

"Miss Page was standing at the window sobbing and laughing and tearing at the iron bars with hands already cut and bleeding from her efforts. Half crouched by the bed, was the ugly attendant Dr. Zellar had sent to watch her, and lying shattered on the floor beside him was a whiskey bottle. He was obviously brutally drunk, but either Miss Page's madness or our entrance terrified him into a momentary sobriety, and as we ran towards Miss Page he darted out of the room."

"How long was it before Miss Page quieted down?"

"It was some hours. When we found that neither Mr. Langdon nor I was recognized by Miss Page I ran downstairs for Dr. Foster. As I came out in the hall the detective who was guarding Mr. Pollock turned towards me and the latter instantly leapt over the banisters and rushed into the office. The detective and I were close behind him, and as we reached the door we saw Mr. Pollock leap upon Dr. Foster and strike the revolver from his hand. Then he switched out the light and called to Zellar to 'come quick.' Before we could stop them both men ran out through one of the long windows."

"Miss Page was sobbing and laughing."

"Did you see either of them again?"

"No. We at once locked all the doors and windows and then Dr. Foster hurried upstairs to Miss Page. It was some hours before he could quiet her even with strong sedatives, and when at last she was asleep it was so [illegible] dawn that it seemed best for us [illegible] stay right there until morning."

"Did you hear Dr. Foster give any opinion as to this second attack of madness on the part of Miss Page?"

"Yes. I asked him what could have caused it, and he pointed to the broken whiskey bottle, saying that the brutal attendant was undoubtedly drunk even before he had entered the room, and had probably continued drinking in Miss Page's presence. 'This,' he said, 'proves conclusively to me that Miss Page is suffering from what we term "repressed psychosis," superinduced by the sight of intoxication.'"

The Lily is a Simple Cream Separator

IF you ever owned a cream separator before you knew the Lily, you will appreciate Lily simplicity. It used to be tighten this, and move that —adjustments that you never felt quite safe in making yourself. Although even a wasteful separator was much better than hand skimming, you were far from satisfied.

Most of those adjustments are now done away with. There is only one place where wear affects the work of the Lily and that is on the hardened steel point that carries the weight of the whirling bowl. And since this point is made of finest tool steel, tempered like a fine razor, you can see that the adjusting will not take much of your time.

Go to the dealer and see this feature and the many others —the simple splash oiling system, the easy operation, the ease of cleaning. The Lily is a real cream separator.

Get 50 cents' worth of Karo from your grocer, and send the labels to us together with 85 cents and we'll send you this $2.25 Solid Aluminum Griddle by prepaid parcel post.

HERE is a clean cash saving of $1.40—and thousands of housewives have already taken advantage of this remarkable chance to get an aluminum griddle for less than the wholesale price.

This Aluminum Griddle needs no greasing. It doesn't chip or rust. It heats uniformly over entire baking surface—doesn't burn the cakes in one spot and leave them underdone in another. It doesn't smoke up the kitchen—and the cakes are more digestible than when fried in grease.

At great expense we are seeking to place a Karo Aluminum Griddle in the homes of all Karo users, so that Karo—the famous spread for griddle cakes and waffles—may be served on the most deliciously baked cakes that can be made.

You know Karo, of course. Nearly everybody does—65,000,000 cans sold last year alone. And you doubtless know the wonderful cleanliness and duribility of Aluminum ware.

If you are a Karo user already then you know all about this wonderful syrup—you know how fine it is as a spread for bread; how delicious it is with griddle cakes, waffles, hot biscuits and corn bread.

Get 50 cents' worth of Karo from your grocer at once, and send the labels and 85 cents (P. O. money order or stamps) to us and get one of these Aluminum Griddles by prepaid parcel post.

Remember that our supply is going fast—so get your Karo today. We will also send you free one of the famous Corn Products Cook Books.

St. Hilaire News

RIVER ON SPREE AT ST. HILAIRE

Stream higher Than For Years and Considerable damage Is The Result.

TWO BRIDGES ARE UNSAFE

Gateway of Lower Structure Torn Out and a Considerable Portion Of The East Bank Washed Away.

Considerable damage is reported having resulted from high water at St. Hilaire. Not for many years has the Red Lake River been on such a rampage, and when to the unusual volume of water there was added the weight of the ice floes coming down stream, the wonder is that the damage was not greater.

Both the bridges over the stream at St. Hilaire were damaged. In the case of the new bridge the damage was confined to the east abutment, and this cannot be remedied until after the water goes down, which will delay the completion of the structure for a week or more. The crib or gateway of the lower bridge was completely torn off and washed away from the rest of the dam. At the race or upper dam considerable damage was done and at times it looked as though the entire race would be taken out. All the gates were destroyed and part of the structure itself was badly damaged. A portion of the bank on the east side below the dam was also washed away.

Owing to the damage to the bridges and the high water, the people living on the east side of the river were compelled to drive around by the south bridge in order to get to town, and then in many places they had to travel in water two feet deep. T. K. Hovet, who resides on the tract known as "the island," was entirely cut off from the village when the race bridge went out.

The coulee running through the west portion of town was also much higher than in any previous years. Although this did no particular damage, the school children were forced to go around by the Great Northern bridge, as all other passages were overflowed. A large part of the grade at the creamery was washed away by the water running over the road. Hans Rod, who, resides north of the creamery, was forced to move to other quarters up town.

Free Concert.

The St. Hilaire band appeared in their new uniforms Tuesday evening on main street and rendered a few very choice selections that were enjoyed by a crowd of people who had gathered for the occasion. This was quite an incentive for the people to patronize the concert Thursday evening, as generally a sample of a good thing calls for more. The band made a very fine impression and also a very fine appearance and the people are all very proud of the organization.

Ice Cream Social.

The pupils of the eighth grade served lunch last Friday afternoon to a large crowd of people. The proceeds of the affair are to be used to defray the expense of the annual commencement exercises.

Pound Social.

A number of the friends of Mrs. Gus Nelson met at the rest rooms Saturday afternoon and surprised Mrs. Nelson by donation of pounds of various articles. A luncheon was served and a pleasant afternoon spent.

Ice Cream Parlor.

A. Berkhall has fitted up the room in the rear of the drug store as an ice cream parlor and it is now in constant demand. This adds greatly to his very attractive establishment and there is no doubt that this will prove a great success.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

Wheat Seeding to Start.

Crookston.—With favorable weather there will be some wheat seeding done in this section next week. Work will not be general, but well drained farms in some localities will be in shape, and probably 40 per cent of the farmers will be able to start work. In sections that are flooded nothing to speak of can be done much before May 1. The wheat acreage will probably be reduced from 15 to 20 per cent below average, but the total acreage will not be affected materially, as more barley and flax will be seeded, and the corn acreage will be greatly increased to provide additional fodder.

Filed Twice—Cost $150

Little Falls.—Charles A. Lindburg, representative in congress from the Sixth Minnesota district, filed his petition for the Republican nomination for the United States senate with Secretary of State Schmal Friday.

With the petition was the announcement of Lindbergh's withdrawal from the race for governor. He had paid $50 for his governorship filing. This additional $100 to cover the filing for senatorship.

Piggers are Fined Heavily.

International Falls.—The Koochiching county treasury has been swelled $1,000 by recent fines imposed upon blindpiggers who were rounded up in raids conducted by Sheriff White and County Attorney Jevne. In the last fifteen days fifteen alleged lawbreakers were rounded up hauled before Judge Frank Palmer in municipal court.

Ten pleaded guilty to keeping unlicensed drinking places and were fined $75 and costs each, as follows: Lewis La Monde and O. M. Paulson of Littlefork, Ed. Falk, James Brennan, R. G. Ruggles and John Campbell of Ranier, John Ranchter, J Gleason, M. Rowan and Eddie Bowen of Ray.

Red River Navigable?

Grand Forks.—Officials of the war department at Washington are unwilling to have the Red River of the North declared a non-navigable stream, according to word received by Secretary C. W. Graves of the Commercial club from Congressman Helgesen.

They are willing to persent a bill permitting the erection of a series of small dams at this point. Such a bill will be introduced by Congressman Helgesen at the request of the local Commercial club and the city council.

Bridge is Being Rushed.

St. Hilaire.—The timber for the north bridge, the non-arrival of which has delayed construction work for over two weeks arrived the later part of last week and is now on the ground at the bridge. The Northern Construction company, who have the contract, added an extra crew Monday morning and are now making all possible efforts to have the bridge completed in time for spring traffic. Manager I. Helseth, of the construction company states the floor joists and stringers will be laid in a few days ann unless unforseen complications occur, the arch will be up by Saturday evening.

Wholesale Timber Thefts Charged.

St. Paul.—Charges of wholesale timber thefts and trespasses on state land in northern Minnesota, with hints of collusion on the part of scalers under the state surveyor general and falsifications by state land examiners, all prepared by Oscar Arneson, chief clerk in charge of state lands and timber, for his superior, State Auditor J. A. O. Praus, are waiting the return of the latter from Washington for presentation at a special hearing before the state timber board.

Alleged operations range from violations of state laws and contracts, by failures to properly mark timber cut from state lands under permits, to plain thefts of timber from state school land. The bill offered by Mr. Arneson intimates that recovery will be impossible in many cases, and gives color to reports at the state capitol that irregularities in transactions involving state timber have been going for years.

ITINERARY OF BANKERS DURING MAY MEETING

Ninth District Group Will Meet At Thief River Falls on May 16 Other Dates.

The Ninth district group of Minnesota bankers will meet at Thief River Falls on May 16, and bankers from all nearby sections are planning to be present. The program has been arranged and shows four interesting subjects to be discussed, including county organizations, education, advertising and legislation.

All of the state bankers' conventions this year are expected to be well attended. The dates and the meeting places of the six districts are as follows:

First district group, Winona, May 9 and 10.

Second district group, Windom, June 14 and 15.

Third district group, St. Peter, May 19.

Sixth district group, Bemidji, May 17.

Seventh district group, Morris, May 11.

Ninth district group, Thief River Falls, May 16.

The meetings will be of unusual interest this year, and a large attendance is expected at each. The banks of the Twin Cities and some of the Chicago banks will be represented, and the arrangement of the dates will enable these representatives to go in special cars to a number of the meetings.

On Monday, May 8, they will go to Winona; leaving there on Wednesday, May 10, they will go to Morris for the meeting on May 11, and back to the Twin Cities on the morning of May 12. On May 15 the party will go to Thief River Falls; leaving there the morning of May 17, they will arrive at Bemidji in time for the meeting in that city, returning to the Cities, May 18. Special cars will be run to St. Peter the evening of May 18 for the meeting of May 19.

Among the representatives from the Cities will be speakers who will take places on the programs on subjects not discussed by local speakers.

Several singers will furnish quartet and solo selections, and men recruited from the banks will assist when desired in the entertainment features which always follow these meetings.

MAN AND BOY DROWN IN RED LAKE RIVER

August Wentzel and His Son, Paul Lose Their lives at Fisher During High Water.

The only loss of life in northwestern Minnesota as a result of the high water the past week is reported from Fisher. August J. Wentzel, 38 years of age, and his son Paul, age 13 were attempting to save some cord wood and lumber which was floating around in the barn yard, and had converted a square wagon water tank into a boat into which they placed the wood as gathered. In some unaccountable manner the water tank tipped and in the next second father and son found themselves struggling in the icy water, at a depth of eight or nine feet.

After the boat tipped Mr. Wentzel was seen to come to the top of the water. At the same time he had his son in his arms, but before he could cry for help he sank from sight, it being believed that the sudden shock caused by being thrown into the chilly waters brought on a severe cramp which he could not shake off.

INSURANCE RATES LOWER FOR NORTHERN MINNESOTA

Thief River Falls Among Cities Benefited by Recent Order of State Commission.

The state commissioner of insurance has succeeded in securing a reduction of the rate of insurance throughout the cities of northern Minnesota, and an order has gone out from the office of that official notifying all municipalities coming under the ruling.

The class of risks affected by the order were mercantile buildings and stocks, and, in most towns, dwellings. Public buildings, lumber risks, mills, elevators, and some manufacturing risks, were already on equal basis, no matter where located in the state.

In the city of Thief River Falls the following changes have been made in the rates on buildings.

1	story	brick	reduced	from	47 to 39
2	"	"	"	"	49 to 41
1	"	frame	"	"	99 to 82
2	"	"	"	"	1.04 to 86

Towns in the same class as Thief River Falls are: Crookston, Moorhead Little Falls, Long Prairie, East Grand Forks, and others.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Why Swear, Dear? Use 'Gets-It' for Corns!"

It's the New Plan. Simple, Sure as Fate. Applied in a Few Seconds.

"Why, John, I never knew you to use such language! I've told you several times it's no use to try those bandages, salves, tapes, plasters, and contraptions for corns. Here's some 'Gets-It', it's just wonderful how easy, 'clear and clean' it makes any corn come right off. Takes but a few seconds to apply. It dries at once. Put your sock on right over it,—there's nothing to stick or roll up, form a bundle of your toe, or press on the corn. It's painless, simple as rolling off a log. Now put away those knives, razors and scissors, use 'Gets-It' and you'll have a sweeter disposition and no more corns and calluses."

"You Wouldn't Lose Your Temper, John, If You Used 'Gets-It' for Those Corns!"

Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.

Maxwell

A Handsome Car.

WHEN you pay several hundred dollars for an automobile, why not get a good-looking one—one that you will be proud to own, proud to drive and proud to take your friends out in? Maxwell owners have a just pride in the handsome appearance of their automobile for Maxwell Motor Cars have the same attractive lines, the same graceful design as the higher priced types.

In addition to good looks you want, of course, a reliable, sturdy and economical car. But there is no doubt in your mind on these points since the Maxwell a short time ago established the World's Motor Non-Stop Mileage Record. Any car that can run continuously for 44 days and nights, averaging 500 miles per day—22,000 miles in all and without once stopping the motor—is bound to be a well designed and well made car.

Any car that can perform such a wonderful feat on an average of one gallon of gasoline to every 22 miles is bound to be an economical car.

We have such confidence in the Maxwell car and the company behind it that we have staked our judgment and future on the ability of the car to make good for you. It will; we know it. All we want is a chance to prove it.

Phone us today, while you have it in mind.

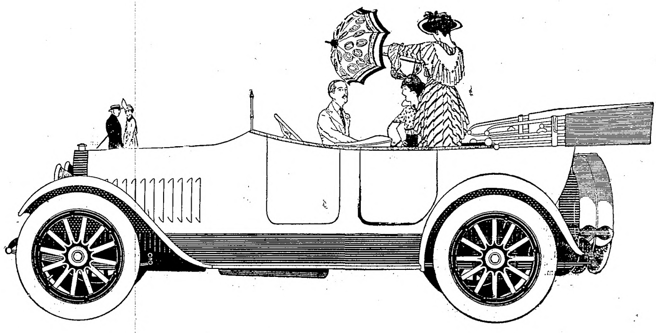
CHALMERS MOTOR CO Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

Quality First



She's active, lacks "nerves," and very modern—the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers

She's active, full of life, lacks "nerves," and delivers a terrific wallop with only the slightest effort.

I mean by that a power-wallop. Because she turns up 3400 revolutions per minute. Her crank shaft speed surpasses that of any other American car.

Though there are three built in the U. S. A. that get a bit beyond 3100 r. p. m.

It's like an electric fan, which turns up 4000 r. p. m., or a turbine which does around 4300.

Of course, the Chalmers engine doesn't hit 3400 all the time. 3400 is the maximum. When the car is running 5 miles an hour she turns up 250 r. p. m.

At 10 miles an hour she does 500 r. p. m. At 15 she does 750. At 20, 1000. At 30, 1500.

So you see the engine isn't hitting the highest speed at the slower car speeds—those speeds you drive 90 per cent of the time.

In a way it's like horse-power. You say the horse-power of your car is 40. You mean by that the maximum is 40.

Yet at 10 miles an hour you are using probably less than 10 h. p. While at 20 miles an hour you are using about 17 or 18 h. p. And so on.

3400 r. p. m. is just another way of stating horsepower. It's the modern way. Because it shows power through supreme engine speed and not through large bore and stroke, which means a brute of an engine, and hence a vehicle of great weight.

The day of such a car has gone by. You and I want a light, spunky beast that responds to the slightest touch of the accelerator, that pulverizes hills, that drives straight as a sunbeam, that has the lure in her lines, and obeys.

That's the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. I've never had any person buy one and tell me she wasn't there. For she is—100 per cent.

Run in and I will show you a car that has doubled my business.

Ask me about our service inspection coupons. They are negotiable with all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

Hendry To Grand Forks.—J. W. Hendry, master mechanic at the Soo round house, was an over-night business caller in Grand Forks last evening. He returned this morning.

Evening at Forks.—Arthur Alnes, day expressman at the Soo depot, left Wednesday afternoon for Grand Forks for an over-night's pleasure trip. He returned this morning.

Former Resident Here.—Sig Becken, former expressman at the Great Northern station here but now agent for the G. N. at Erskine came up Tuesday evening, returning home the same evening.

On Duluth Line.—C. A. Philstrom, traveling auditor for the Soo making Thief River Falls his headquarters, spent the fore part of the week visiting stations along the Duluth line in his official capacity.

Changes At Plummer.—By the resignation of A. E. Beaudry as agent at Plummer, G. A. Krueger has been appointed to fill this position. Others on the Soo staff at that station are: Glen Richardson, who occupies the second trick and Webster E. Nash, third trick.

Removing Snow Fences.—Section foreman Arthur Belland and crew, this week began the removal of the snow fences along the Soo tracks in his territory. The fences will be repaired during the summer so as to be in first-class condition by next fall. Many of the fences on the first line defense are standing in ponds of water and will have to be removed later on.

Remodeling Car.—The large automobile manufacturing companies "have nothing over" J. W. Hendry, master mechanic at the Soo round house, in putting out 1916 cars. For some time Mr. Hendry has been remodeling his "White" gasoline buggy and has added fore doors to the machine besides making many other improvements which puts it in the 1917 class.

New Smokestack.—A smokestack 63 feet high 3½ feet in diameter and weighing about 6,200 pounds was erected at the Soo round house last Friday by Bridge Foreman John Carlson. The old pipe was worn out by weather and heat and gave indications of toppling over sooner or later. In order to hoist the pipe to its proper position it was found necessary to employ the use of the switch engine together with a rope and tackle. The new smokestack was shipped from the Soo shops at Shoreham.

Emmigrants Transferred.—Two carloads, containing the property of emmigrants enroute to Greenbush from the southern part of the state, were transferred from the Great Northern cars onto Soo cars at the mill yards on Monday. The cars contained a number of cattle and were taken to the lumber yards where they were watered and fed and were to be taken to Greenbush on Monday's freight. On Sunday, however, several pilings were taken out by the ice and weakened the bridge to such an extent that trains were not permitted to cross. The cattle and other farm implements were then loaded into Soo cars on the spur track at the lumber yards and taken to the Soo junction where it was again transferred into G. N. cars and taken to their destination.

ASKS RAILROADS TO BAR BOOZE CARGOES

Calderwood Asks Ban on Liquors Intended for Dry Sections of Northern Minnesota.

If the railroads traversing the "dry" territory of northwestern Minnesota will heed the request of W. G. Calderwood of the state prohibition committee, this section will be more effectually dry than would be possible under the Indian lid or county option law.

He asks the roads not to ship any liquor into the territory covered by the Indian treaty of 1869, and names 37 railroad points within the area still supposed to be dry under that act.

Thief River Falls Included.

The letter sent was addressed to the great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo railroads, and to the Northern and Western express companies. The list of additional towns to which liquor should not be shipped accompanies the letter, as follows:

Badger, Brooks, Benoit, Dugdale, Dorothy, Erskine, Fox, Flaming, Fertile, Fosston, Greenbush, Holt, Hazel, Lees, Mandus, Middle River, Melvin, Mentor,, McIntosh Newfolden, Plummer, Red Lake Falls, Rosewood, Roseau, Salol, Strathcona, Steiner, St. Hilaire, Strandquist Stone, Tilden Junction, Thief River Falls, Warroad, Wiley, Winger, and Viking.

SUBSTITUTE FOR PARIS GREEN IS SUGGESTED

Paris green costs more than twice as much this year as last. It is selling at 50 cents a pound, even in large quantities. It is doubtful whether it can be purchased for less than 45 cents a pound. Fortunately, says A. G. Ruggles, of University farm St. Paul, arsenate of lead, a better stomach insectide than Paris green, has not advanced in price. The powdered form may be obtained for about 25 cents a pound, and 1 ½ pounds of the powder is used in making 50 gallons of spray mixture.

"n experiments at the University farm," adds Mr. Ruggles, "we have found arsenate of lead better than paris green as a remedy for potato bugs, and all orchard insects. It is not necessary, therefore, to allow injurious biting insects to live simply because paris green is so high."

The orchardist should get his spray materials as early as possible. It is not easy to tell when arsenate of lead may go kiting after paris green.

VOLUME 6 THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 27, 1916 NUMBER 9

NEW CHARTER IS UP TO COUNCIL

Commission Finishes Work and Submits Result to People For Their Approval.

INCLUDES CITY MANAGER

Goes Into Effect Upon Adoption for Purpose of Electing Officers. Otherwise Provisions Apply After first of Year.

The committee appointed by the district court for the purpose of drafting a new city charter for the city of Thief River Falls, has reported to Mayor Gambell, and he in turn has submitted the document to the city council for approval.

By the provisions of the new code the city government is left in the hands of the mayor and six councilmen. These are to be elected for four years instead of two, as is the case at present, half the members being retired every two years. The mayor will be a voting member of the council, but has no veto power. Elections are to be held on the even numbered years instead of the odd years as has heretofore been the case. This is decidedly a wise provision, as it will mean that all elections will be held at the same time in the fall of the year, thus doing away with the expensive spring voting.

The charter will go into effect for the purposes of electing city officials at once upon its adoption. For all other purposes its provisions will not be effective until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, 1917.

Must Have Majority.

The charter guards against the election of officers by simple plurality. Any candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast is to be declared elected, but in case where no majority is received the candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall again come up for election, the previous balloting being in such case regarded as a primary. With few unimportant changes the election of officers will otherwise proceed the same as at present.

Contains Recall Provision.

Provision for the recall, initiative and referendum is made in the new charter. This is practically the same as in other cities operating under the city manager plan. Among these are to be found Morris, Minn., Dayton, Ohio., Cambridge, Mass., San Diego, Cal., Clarinda and Iowa Falls, Iowa., Clark, S. D., Grand Haven Mich., and many others. These cities vary in population from 1,324 to 116,577, and in every instance, where the scheme has been given a fair trial it has proven highly satisfactory.

The city manager will have charge of the city clerk's office, as well as all the departments of the city government, except that of police. Of the latter the mayor will act as the administrative head. The manager will also be the purchasing agent, under the direction and control of the council. The charter makes no attempt to enumerate the duties of the manager, as such provision would have a tendency to limit the council's duties and privileges in this respect.

Some of The Changes.

In the matter of annexing platted territory to the city, the old charter provides that this can only be done upon the petition of one-fourth of the voters of the district affected, while under the new provision this may be done by ordinance.

The management of the water and light plant will undergo some important changes, and these will be gone into in detail at a later date.

One important change concerns the manner of making assessments for sidewalk improvements. Under the old system these have been collectable in five years, which in many cases has proven a hardship. The new law provides that these shall be extended to cover any length of time as circumstances may dictate, twenty years being the maximum allowed. The proceedure now necessary in order to secure the building of a sidewalk has also been simplified and the manner in which other similar improvements may be made has been revised and readjusted.

Provision is made for the easy and convenient distribution of funds. In case it is found that one fund is being made to stand undue amount of the expenditures, money may be taken from any other fund at the disposal of the council for the purpose of equalizing the burden.

City Treasurer Abolished.

No berth will be provided for a city treasurer under the new order. The council will elect the depository for the city funds biennially,and the bank chosen as such depository shall select the person who will act as city treasurer.

The city manager will have supervision of the assessing of the city. An assessor will be appointed, but the work performed by him must all come under the inspection of the manager.

Appointees in the police department will hold office until discharged for cause or their voluntary resignation. This provision is for the purpose of taking this important department entirely out of politics. The health department will consist of the manager, the mayor and a health officer selected by the council.

The fire department, library board and municipal court will be administered as at present. The park board, however, will have larger powers under the new system, becoming a body in every way similar to the library board. Under the provisions of the old charter this board has been simply an advisory body.

The salary of the Mayor is placed at $120 per year, with the provision that when the city shall have grown to a population of 8,000 this sum shall be doubled. There is also a provision for a contingent fund of $300 at the disposal of the mayor, said fund to be expended at his discretion for the furthering of the general welfare. The councilmen will receive a per diem fee of $2.00 for each meeting, the total in no case to exceed $100 in any one year.

On Cash Basis.

The intention is to put the city on a cash basis at once and to have it remain in that condition. The charter prohibits the council from spending any money in excess of the levy made for a particular purpose.

Much Work Required.

The entire charter shows that the commission devoted the most painstaking study to the subjects under consideration. Charters from other cities of the size and class of Thief River Falls were gone over with care and such matter as was found suitable worked over and incorporated in the document. It has been no slight task, and every one of the members of the commission is entitled to the thanks of the people of the city for the excellent work accomplished. There is but small doubt but that the charter will be endorsed by a practically unanimous vote when it comes up for approval, as every paragraph it contains has been adopted after most careful consideration and with a view to making the administration of city affairs less cumbersome and more economical. H. C. Rowberg, the attorney of the commission, has devoted his best efforts to providing a constitution for the city which will not only stand every test, but which is elastic enough in its provisions to insure its covering any and all conditions liable to arise for many years to come.

The Commission.

The members of the commission appointed by the judges of the district court are as follows: Lars Backe, chairman; E. J. Overland, clerk; A. H. Akre, Math. Barzen, Milton Forder, Bernard Knudson, O. F. Mellby, Halvor Loken, Anton Langseth, H. G. Heiber, T. L. Melgaard, G. A. Penny, Fred Roth, Daniel Shaw, N. W. Tarrant.

DAHLE IN CHARGE OF SHERIFF AGAIN

Man Charged With Manslaughter is Locked Up Because of Withdrawal of Bondsmen.

Jens Dahle, the Star township farmer, out under bail to answer to a charge of manslaughter before the grand jury at the fall term of the district court, is again in jail, his bondsmen having asked to be released. The parties going on the bond to insure his appearance at the time specified claim that they have reason to believe that Dahle contemplates removing from the county, and base their suspicions on the following facts: He was on Saturday evening found by County Attorney H. O. Kjomme and Deputy Sheriff Paul Medderigh in the vicinity of the Soo depot, having come into town from Goodridge in an immigrant car bound for Canada. The officials had been notified of the fact that Dahle would probably be in the car, but he had evidently gotten wind of the fact that they were on the look-out for him and escaped from his hiding place. He was soon picked up, however, and placed in jail for safe keeping. Upon learning of this the bondsmen refused further to be held responsible for his safe appearance and he will have to remain where he is until Judge Grindeland comes down and issues another commitment or gives opportunity for the furnishing of another bond.

The bondsmen who demand their release are: Sven Dahle, Knut Dahle, Emil Grame, Aslak Svanajord, Andrew Nelson and Ole O. Omlid. The amount of the bond is $1,000.

Dahle is accused of having caused the death of Ole O. Vatne at the latter's farm in Star township on February 22, by hurling him to the floor with such force as to break his back.

DEPOT PROJECT IS NOT FAVORED

Great Northern Officials do not Seem Disposed to Improve Existing Conditions.

REVETMENT STOOD STRAIN

Water Did Not Break Through Works But More Funds are Needed To Extend System—Auto club Wants Trailers.

The Commercial club meeting on Thursday evening resolved itself into a sort of clearing house for committee reports. All the committees outstanding did not come in, but a number of important ones made a final disposition of the matters in hand and were discharged.

No New Depot.

G. Halverson, chairman of the committee having in charge the matter of explaining to the officials of the Great Northern railroad that a new, up-to-date and more commodious depot is needed at Thief River Falls, reported that so far they had been unable to get up any alarming amount of enthusiasm among the officers of the road. He stated, however, that after long and arduous endeavor he had managed to get a reply to his letters, this setting forth that the matter had been referred to someone somewhere, and that it would probably be looked after in its regular turn. The club did not like this attitude apparently, for a motion to take the matter up with the railroad and warehouse commission was passed without opposition. It is understood that this body has been apprised of conditions here and have already given the matter some consideration, with the result that they are convinced that a new terminal is not only advisable but absolutely necessary.

The Revetment a Success

Mr. Halvorson also reported that the revetment in Highlanding township justified its expense during the high water a week or so ago. The work had withstood the pressure of ice and water and had prevented a large section from becoming overflowed. He recommended that the protection be further extended as the sections in the neighborhood not protected by a similar levee were inundated with the result that considerable damage was done. If this work is to be extended more funds will have to be provided as those on hand when the work was begun have been exhausted. These funds have been gathered by private subscription thus far.

Autoists Want To Work.

J. H. McKinney, chairman of the good roads committee, reported that the members of the automobile club were beseiging him for an opportunity to go to work improving the roads. He said that there is no doubt but that much good work would be done by the automobile owners as soon as the roads were in condition to be tackled, and suggested that the club provide a couple of auto trailers for the purpose of hauling sand and gravel. It is likely that these will be secured and there is no doubt but that they will be used to good advantage. Mr. McKinney and his committee have done good work in the organizing line and are in readiness to put real muscular effort into play as soon as it is possible to do so. The suggestion has been made that those willing to lend a hand in the improvement of the roads be divided into squads and take charge of different sections, and this will probably be the program followed.

No Enthusiasm For Peat.

The committee appointed to investigate the possibility of establishing a small peat land experiment station in the country reported that they had been unable to scare up any enthusiasm among the farmers for the project. These latter objected generally to the expenditure of much money in any one place, and as it looked as if it would be impossible to secure any unity of purpose among them, the committee requested that the matter rest for the present.

Reports Every Meeting.

In order that the work of the club may be expedited as much as possible, it was decided to ask all committees to report regularly every two weeks hereafter.

To Remodel Building.

The frame building at 215 La Bree avenue north, recently gutted by fire, will be moved about two blocks to the south on the same avenue and converted into a flat. A full size basement will be provided under the structure at the new location, steam heat installed and the entire building placed in first class condition. The interior will be partioned off into rooms and accommodations provided for two families, one on each floor. The Gopher Realty company of Duluth are the owners.

A NEW BUILDING FOR POSTOFFICE

Order of Elks Contemplating Erection of Fine Structure on Corner of Second and LaBree.

LOCATION MOST DESIRABLE

Intention Now is to Put Up $20,000 Building, Stock For More Than Half of Which is Subscribed By Local Elks.

If the plans now under consideration by the local lodge of Elks materialize, a fine modern building will be erected on the site at the southwest corner of LaBree avenue and Second street. This is one of the finest locations now unoccupied in the down-town section and the building to be erected will be one of the best in this part of the state.

Representative of the Elks lodge of Thief River Falls went to Grand Forks to see the owner of the property which it is the intention to acquire, and succeeded in securing an option holding good until July 1.

While the plan at present is subject to many revisions and corrections, the idea is to put up a building costing about $20,000. There is, however, a strong probability that this will be increased to $40,000. The owner of the lots has signified his willingness to take a very considerable portion of the purchase price in stock of the company to be formed. The Elks will hold a meeting the latter part of the week at which it is expected the matter will be definitely settled.

For Use As Postoffice.

Should the building be erected it will be with the understanding that the government will lease a considerable section of the lower floor for a term of years for use as a postoffice. The present quarters are too small for the amount of business now transacted at this point, and it is absolutely necessary that more room be provided. This was decided upon by the department some time ago, but no suitable quarters were procurable and the postoffice has been forced to put up with the cramped conditions.

Last week Roy DeForge of Bemidji, postoffice inspector for this district, was in the city and investigated the conditions. His report to the department will include a recommendation that larger quarters be at once secured. The postoffice has been where now located for the past ten years.

The trouble experienced in getting a satisfactory proposal for the housing of the postoffice is no doubt partly due to the requirements of the department. These, among other things, include that the lessor furnish the fixtures, lighting and heating, for which the government pays a stipulated sum. It is thought, however, that a contract can be entered into which will prove satisfactory to all parties.

Senior Class Play.

At a meeting of the Senior class held the first of the week, the matter of selecting a class play came before that body and was disposed of very rapidly. "Seven-Twenty-Eight or Casting the Boomerang" is the title of the play in four acts. Parts have already been assigned and practising was begun at once. It is expected that the high school thespians will be ready to perform about May 15. Mrs. C. A. Pitkin will have charge of the

BIG MEETING IS ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Ex-Governor Eberhart to be Guest of Honor and Will Deliver Principal Address.

Preparations are going forward for the making of the annual dinner of the Commercial club on Wednesday evening, the most notable event of its kind in the history of the organization. Ex-Governor A. O. Eberhart will be the guest of honor and will deliver the principal address of the evening. It was the intention to have Gov. Burnquist here for this occasion, but previous engagements made it impossible for him to attend, and the ex-governor was substituted. Mr. Eberhart has had wide experience as a speaker at similar functions, and as he is one of the best known men in the northwest, he will no doubt be greeted by a large audience.

The arrangements are not all completed and the exact disposition of details will perhaps not be known until just before the meeting. The supper will be in charge of Julien Provencher of the Evelyn hotel, which is a sufficient guarantee that this important part of the entertainment will be properly looked after. It is the intention to have the speaker's party seated at a table at the west end of the hall, where they will be waited on by members of the Junior Commercial club in white uniforms. The members of the club and their other guests will help themselves as at the regular stand-up lunch affairs, so justly famous. As the menu for this event is on a more elaborate scale than any that have preceeded it, a charge of 50 cents will have to be made for the supper.

There will be a short musical program. The club quartet will sing a selection or two and it is the intention to provide some instrumental music. Dr. J. N. Nesse will render a vocal solo, and it is likely that others will be requisitioned to help out this part of the program.

It will be a meeting of unusual importance and interest, and it is hoped that all members will be present and bring a friend.

POSTAL ROUTES TO CHANGE ON MAY 1

Star Routes to be Replaced by New Service to Goodridge Mavie And Germantown

On the first of May the postal service between Thief River Falls and Goodridge, Mavie, Germantown and Grygla, will be changed. The star routes heretofore running out from this city will be replaced by three star routes, one running from Goodridge to Grygla, one from Mavie to Germantown, and the third from Mavie to Kratka. This will provide excellent service for a part of the territory heretofore covered by the two star routes to be abolished, and two new rural routes from Thief River Falls will be established to take care of the balance.

There will be two different kinds of service between Goodridge and Grygla—motorhehicle and ordinary conveyance. The schedule for the motorvehicle service provides that it leave Goodridge not later than 9:30 a. m. daily except Sunday and arrive at Grygla in two and one-quarter hours, or not later than 12:15. This carrier will leave Grygla again at 2:15, arriving at Goodridge not later than 4:30.

The ordinary conveyance will leave Goodridge at the same time as the motorvehicle service, but is allowed five hours in which to make the trip. Returning, this carrier must also be in Goodridge at 4:30 p. m.

Mavie to Germantown-Kratka. — The Germantown service from Mavie is as follows: Leaving the last named town at 9:00 a. m. daily except Sunday, the mail will be in Germantown at 10:30 o'clock. Returning will leave Germantown at 12:30, arriving at Mavie by 2:00 p. m.

The Kratka mail will leave Mavie at 9:00 o'clock, arriving at Kratka by 11:00. Returning will leave Kratka at 12:30, arriving at Mavie by 2:30 p. m.

ANNUAL CLEAN-UP DAY NEXT FRIDAY

Mayor Gambell Issues Proclamation Requesting That all Rubbish be Disposed of at That Time.

On Friday, May 5, every citizen of Thief River Falls who takes any pride in the appearance of his surroundings or has any concern for the health of his family will grab a rake, a shovel, a wheelbarrow and such other implements as may suggest themselves, and with grim determination attack any unsightly accumulation of filth that may be cluttering up his premises. Mayor Gambell has issued a proclamation calling upon all good citizens to do this work on this particular day, but there is nothing to prevent anyone from starting the operation a little ahead of time if he so sees fit.

The state health authorities and fire warden have also called the attention to the danger of allowing the accumulations of the winter months to lie around any longer than is absolutely necessary. Old boxes, barrels and paper add to the fire risk and should be gotten out of the way at once. Heaps of rubbish are breeding places for flies and these are carriers of disease. Both are unsightly.

Thief River Falls will have many visitors during the summer months. The annual convention of the Ninth district Woman's clubs will be here on the fourth and fifth and it will be a good advertisement for the city to have them report that while the women of the town were attending the sessions of this organization the men folks were cleaning up the town.

Remember that you are not to go at this job simply because the mayor reminded you it ought to be done, but as a measure of protection and for the reason that you have too much pride in the appearance of the city to permit filth to remain where you can get rid of it with very little work and at small expense.

ASK FRANCHISE TO USE STREETS

Ordinance Introduced Grants Permission to Operate Railway Along West side of Davis Avenue.

WILL BID FOR PRIVILEGE

Proposals to be Opened on June 27—Work of Charter Commission Finished and Presented for Consideration by Mayor Gambell.

An ordinance granting authority to the city to issue a franchise permiting the use of the west side of Davis avenue between Third street and Eighth street as a route along which to lay railway tracks was given its first reading at the meeting of the council on Tuesday evening. The ordinance provides that this privilege shall be accorded to the persons or parties making the highest bid therefor, said bids to be opened and considered by the council at a meeting to be held on June 27.

It is generally understood that this measure is for the purpose of providing means whereby the trains of the Minnesota Northwestern Electric line may secure terminal facilities at a more convenient point within the city than is at present provided at Eighth street, where these trains are now compelled to stop. The rails of the electric line were originally laid along the center of Davis avenue as far as Third street, but objections on the part of the property holders along the east side of that thoroughfare as far north as Eighth street compelled the road to stop its trains at the last named point. By securing a franchise from the city permitting the use of the street it is thought that all these objections will be overcome and that the trains will be permitted to run as far as the Soo depot, this being the original intention of the company. It would prove a great convenience to the patrons of the electric line and would mean much to the business men of Thief River Falls should this ordinance pass and the offer of the company prove acceptable.

Pool Room Men Again.

A number of applications for licenses to conduct pool and billiard parlors were presented, read and laid on the table. The parties applying were willing to pay the license fee providing they were allowed to run their places in the same manner and during the same hours as before the regulating ordinance went into effect. As the granting of their requests and the consequent issuing of licenses would mean the rescinding of an ordinance passed for their regulation less than two months ago, the council members could not quite see their way clear to accept the proposition. An order restraining the city from carrying out the provisions of the ordinance is now before Judge Watts, and until its decision in their favor is reached by that time the proprietors will have to secure permits under the new ordinance or quit business.

Sidewalk Contracts Let.

Bids for the construction of the cement sidewalks ordered by the city to be built during the coming season were considered and the work awarded to Christie & Furstnau. The bids of this concern were as follows:

Sidewalks—nine and one-half cents per square foot on a cash basis; ten and three quarter cents per foot if payment is to be made in time certificates. Crossings—fourteen cents per foot, cash; fifteen cents if certificates are used in payment. The bid of Jacob Jonas was the same in the case of the sidewalks, but it was for fifteen cents cash and sixteen and one half cents in certificates for the crossings.

A number of sidewalk applications were received and referred to the proper committee. These provide for the laying of walks on Hughes street; on Kendall avenue in Knox addition; on Tindall from Bridge to Nora; along Blocks 8 and 9 on Gulf street in Knox addition; on Kendall avenue from Hughes to Muzzy, and a stretch fronting four 25 foot lots on the west side of Kendall avenue.

New Charter Presented.

Mayor F. H. Gambell was present and presented a completed copy of the new charter to the council. He explained that the commission appointed by the district court to draft the document had completed this part of the work, and that it was now ready for approval and publication. He also stated that the law allowed a sum not to exceed $500 as the attorneys' fees and publication cost in the matter. The council members will look over the charter and fix a day for the holding of a special election for its adoption or rejection by the people.

THEIR CAUSE REASONABLE.

The Times cannot help but be impressed with the apparent justice of the demands made by the railroad trainmen in their campaign for an eight hour day. The people opposed to them in this matter point to the fact that the men are now receiving higher wages than at any previous period of American railroading and that to reduce the hours of labor in addition to this would work a hardship not only to the roads but to all the people dependant upon the movement of freight and passengers. The railroaders, on the other hand, maintain that past experience has shown that any added concessions and advantages granted the men have invariably proven a good investment for the roads themselves.

Continuing their argument further, the men claim that any advances in operating costs of the railroads have not been due to added outlays to transportation employees. Train and engine crews have given to the transportation companies more than they have received in increased rates of pay. This fact is clearly shown by the reports of the railroads themselves to their stockholders and to the Interstate Commerce commission. Although engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen have received some advances in rates of pay during recent years, they have had to work harder, and have handled more traffic each year for each dollar of additional compensation received.

Transportation employees are pieceworkers. They are engaged in handling freight and passenger traffic. The requirement for a standard day's work is to haul so many tons of freight or so many passengers 100 miles. If the weight of a freight train is increased the cost to the railroad for labor in handling each ton of freight 100 miles is less.

The constant increasing of train loads has been the predominant factor in recent railway operating progress. The growth in weight of trains has been more rapid than the advances in rates of pay to transportation employees. Engine and train crews have transported proportionately a greater volume of freight than they have received increases in wages. As a consequence, the labor cost to the railroads of engine and train crews has decreased.

During the course of the recent arbitration between the Western railroads and the engineers and firemen, it was shown that the proportion of total operating expenses arising from payments to transportation employees was 14 per cent less in 1913 than in 1890. In 1913 it was also shown that wage payments to transportation employees required only 19 cents out of each dollar of revenue earned by Western railroads in 1913 as compared with 21 cents out of each dollar of revenue in 1890. When considered on the basis of freight tonnage, it was found that it cost the railroads for wages to locomotive engineers and firemen 65 cents for each 1,000 tons carried one mile in 1890, while, in 1913, engineers and firemen transported 1,000 tons a mile for only 33 cents, a decrease of cost to the railroads for these employees alone during this period of slightly more than 50 per cent. It was also shown further by exhibits submitted during the Western Arbitration that during the more recent years, 1900-1913, the cost to the transportation companies for wages of engineers and firemen decreased 12 per cent for each 1,000 tons of freight hauled one mile.

It is apparent from these facts that the productive efficiency of transportation employees has increased faster than their rates of pay. To produce these results for the railroads they have had to work excessive hours. The present movement for an eight-hour day is, therefore, a reasonable request by transportation employees to participate in the results of their own labor, not primarily in terms of dollars and cents but in form of a shorter work day.

ONLY ONE THING TO DO.

Whether or not you believe that this country's foreign affairs have been handled in the best and wisest manner possible, there is but one thing to do at this time, and that is to stand by the president. There is very little fault found with the decision reached except that it would perhaps have been better had it been arrived at before.

As an indication of how the big men of the country—Republicans as well as Democrats—view the present situation, the following is quoted from an interview with Frank B. Kellogg, candidate for United States senator to succeed Moses E. Clapp. The sentiments expressed should be subscribed to by every patriotic American:

"Whatever I think about the manner in which the administration has handled our foreign relations, this is no time to discuss it. There is now only one thing for this country to do and that is to stand firm for the honor of the nation and for the protection of American citizens according to the principles of international law and the dictates of humanity.

"This Country cannot consent that these immemorial principles and customs of civilized nations established for the protection of innocent people against the horrors of war should be disregarded.

"In this stand there should not be, and I believe there will not be, a divided people.

"One thing I hope will now be realized is the absolute necessity for immediate action to protect this country and our institutions. Had we been properly prepared to stand firm and enforce the rights of American citizenship we should never have been confronted with this grave crisis."

While there is hardly a doubt but that the prices of many commodities have been arbitrarily raised by the manufacturer, jobber or retailer, and the cause of the advance blamed to the war, yet the fact that this miserable disturbance has been the cause of a general upsetting of commodity values cannot be denied. Very often this is not understood by the consumer. He—or more generally, she—cannot understand why prices should have taken such sudden bound and likely blames the entire proceeding onto the man with whom they are directly dealing. The dry goods trade seems to be in a particularly vexatious position. Not only is it almost impossible to secure colored material for the better class of trade, this forcing the price of the little that may be had up to a practically prohibitive figure, but it is useless in many cases to try and explain why this is so. People will not understand that under conditions such as at present obtain it does not necessarily follow that because one certain line has not gone up no other need advance. Just remember that a merchant would rather sell you his goods at a fair profit than hold them in stock waiting for someone to pay a higher price. A slight study of the situation, a small amount of patience and a general willingness on your part to admit that the man you are dealing with is doing the best he can would help everyone through this trying period. Just remember that he wants to retain your trade and will do everything he reasonably can to do so.

It is quite within the range of possibilities that Frank B. Kellogg will not be one of the United States senators from Minnesota. Admitting that he is by far the best man among those seeking the place, many voters may cast their ballots for another for all sorts of reasons except the one which alone should be allowed to guide their act. Small, insignificant, personal prejudices and preferences will be permitted to have a greater influence upon their decision than will the fitness of the candidates or even the obligation to their country. Things of much greater importance than having a creek dredged or a postoffice building located are likely to come up in the senate before many moons have passed, and it might be a good thing for Minnesota and the country if another full grown man is sent to the senate to stand up along side of the one the state already has there. It is not necessary to have anything against the other candidates in order to vote for Kellogg. He is unquestionably the best man for the place and you are simply exercising your best judgment as well as asserting your inalienable right in voting for him.

Fred B. Lynch is likely to be the chairman of the Democratic national committee, succeeding William F. McCombs, who has resigned. This would indicate that the recent objection voiced to his retention even as the committee man from this state was not very deep-seated or serious. We do not know, of course, just what the new chairman will succeed in acomplishing, but the committee certainly displayed good judgment in selecting the state from which to choose him. It is becoming daily less probable that Lynch or any other man can re-elect Woodrow Wilson president of the United States, but the people of Minnesota certainly have no objection to seeing Lynch in the front line among those who will try to do so.

It now looks as if this misunderstanding, with Germany is going to turn out better than most folks expected. Everyone with any sense will hope so. It will now be up to that fraction of our population who believe that it is a crime for any nation to be in any way prepared to meet an emergency of the kind threatened, to hold the result up as a victory for unpreparedness. They will say the occurance proves that all necessary for the United States to do when any danger is imminent is to talk back real sassy to the said danger and it will immediately back up. On the other hand; those whose concern is for the future safety of the country will urge the speeding up of the measures calculated to put us in position to meet any similar situation that may arrise. Escaping trouble once by a hair's breadth is not a guarantee that we will never have any trouble.

T. R. SAID TO BE GOPHER CHOICE

Hinted Minnesota Delegation Will Be for Roosevelt.

PREPARED FOR THE STAMPEDE

Several of Those Chosen to Represent This State at Chicago Convention Visit Oyster Bay.

St. Paul—(Special)—This presidential proposition is getting to be some game, so far as the Republican end of the fight is concerned, and you might just as well get ready for the real blow that is going to strike you—either pleasantly or unpleasantly—you are going to get Theodore Roosevelt or Charles Evan Hughes, and, in the language of Mr. Dooley, you might better place your money on the "Roosevelt horse." The Eastern sentiment for the former big chief appears to be growing rapidly and careful observers of the game residing in this state and who are in the saddle are not only picking the Oyster Bay fellow to win, but they are going still further and becoming mighty restless over the stampede that way, and manifest a strong disposition to get onto the "Rosenfeldt" wagon.

Wherefore do I speak? Let us reason a little. Every one of the twenty-four Republican delegates from Minnesota are on record as favoring Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. The senator carried the state against all comers—although the latter were not strong horses for the race. Nevertheless, Senator Cummins has the votes—that is, he has the right to think he has. It is a safe bet that he will not last long in the convention, and that he will not have the Minnesota twenty-four as long as he lasts, providing he is not scratched before the first heat. The delegation will be ready for the stampede even before it boards the train for Chicago. And in order to be just a little bit ahead of the other fellows two of the delegates are said to have got there first. About two or three weeks ago one of the primary selections went to New York, where he met, by appointment, another of the chosen twenty-four, and, it is said, by two prominent Republican politicians of Minnesota. The four took a run over to Oyster Bay—the four who have heretofore been anti-Roosevelt men—and after the "de-lighted" expressions from the colonel it is stated that they openly advised him that when they were permitted to break away from Senator Cummins they would be found heart and soul into the Roosevelt strategy kettle. The colonel was de-lighted, you bet, because this assurance came on top of a whole lot of assurances from other parts of the United States, and it is believed his callers advised the colonel that the entire Minnesota delegation would follow in their footsteps and could be counted for Roosevelt at the critical period.

Wow! But how times do change the political chessboard movers. Years ago Irving Caswell and Jim Larson were the big Roosevelt chiefs in Minnesota. Now, or during the recent campaign, they were the Cummins managers, and Mr. Caswell has the assurances from eighteen of the Minnesota delegation that they will stand for him as the national committeeman from Minnesota, and yet he is under honor to watch the delegation for Cummins as long as Mr. Cummins wants it, and in case the delegation breaks before that time he is likely to criticise its actions and by that criticism make the various members mad enough to throw him down as committeeman. This is what several members of the delegation desire, but I am still betting that Caswell gets away with the place.

Along with this Roosevelt movement it might just as well be stated that if the Oyster Bay statesman gets away with the Republican nomination at Chicago on June 7, or the two or three days following, it is going to be a big asset for Frank B. Kellogg in his fight for the Republican nomination for United States senator from Minnesota at the primaries on June 19. For many years Mr. Kellogg has been the close friend of Mr. Roosevelt. He was the Minnesota member of the national committee during the Roosevelt administration. He was employed by the department of [illegible] during the Roosevelt administration as the "trust buster." When Roosevelt announced his retirement from the presidency and made Taft president it was claimed by the big chief that Taft nad made him a promise that Kellogg was to be placed at the head of the department of justice. When Taft failed to make the appointment of Mr. Kellogg it was the cause of the open rupture between Mr. Roosevelt and the president and caused Taft's defeat after only one term. Now, the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago means that Roosevelt will want Mr. Kellogg mighty badly as a senator from Minnesota, and the influence will be keenly felt at the primaries on June 19.

Trouble! Trouble! That is another name for politics. The Democrats are having it, too—all kinds of trouble. When the delegate conference convention was held Henry M. Lamberton was named to run as a delegate from the First district on the supposition that he would stand as the Lynch delegate. He has never been very friendly to Mr. Lynch, and the anti-Lynch men evidently knew it. They let him run unopposed, and beat out A. G. Sasse of Austin with Sid. Nygren of Lake City. After the election of March 14 the Lynch men have been using all kinds of pressure to have Mr. Lamberton name Mr. Sasse, the defeated Lynch candidate, as his alternate. Mr. Lamberton has refused, and still refuses, to make the appointment, and states that inasmuch as he proposes being at St. Louis there is no need for an alternate. Consequently, when Secretary of State Schmahl sent the credentials into the secretary of the Democratic national committee Mr. Lamberton was scheduled as being a delegate without an alternate. The anti-Lynch men still claim that they will get Mr. Lynch before the convention is over, but the big Democratic chief and his friends appear to be sure of their position.

I can't understand it, and it is up to some one to explain. But of the eight candidates for delegates-at-large on the Democratic ticket four were Germans—Messrs. Just, Reiter, Weiss and Wessel—and yet every one of the four was defeated at the polls. Is it possible that the Germans were not voting the Democratic ticket at the primaries on March 14?

Lyndon A. Smith, the present attorney general, has filed for the Republican nomination for the same place, and thus does away with his alleged aspirations for the position of associate justice of the supreme court, for which place no one as yet has filed, although it is known that Albert Schaller, appointed by Governor Hammond, will file for the position. Judge Ira B. Mills has filed for his present place as railroad and warehouse commissioner on the Republican ticket, and may go unopposed. Judge Mills has held the place ever since it was created, and is an old horse in the harness.

The district judiciary is having trouble. I called attention last week to Judges Childress and Morrison having opposition. Now E. C. Dean of Fairmont, one of the ablest attorneys in the Eighteenth district, has filed against Judge Quinn, who has held the job for about twenty years.

Moses E. Clapp's letters to various Minnesota Republicans asking for their support in the coming primary campaign leave little doubt that he intends to file before May [illegible] as a Republican, and contest with his three opponents the title to the seat he has held for fifteen years. It is possible that the letters have been sent out as feelers and that Senator Clapp might yet withdraw if he is not satisfied with the response, but the assumption that he will run seems pretty safe.

BANDITS BATTLE WITH AMERICANS

Two of Uncle Sam's Men Killed in Encounter.

SIX MEXICANS ARE DEAD

Encounter Between Colonel Dodd's Forces and Band of Villistas Occurs In Heart of Sierra Madres, in Western Chihuahua.

Field Headquarters, April 27 (by wireless to Columbus, N. M.)—Two Americans were killed and three wounded in an engagement between cavalrymen under Colonel George A. Dodd and 200 Villa bandits at Tomachic in the center of the Sierra Madres, in Western Chihuahua, according to an official report reaching here.

The Villa command under four chiefs, Baca, Cervantes, Dominguez and Rios, was surprised and routed.

After the battle the Americans found six dead Mexicans and nineteen wounded, while a quantity of horses, arms and equipment was captured.

Several detachments of American troops have resumed active pursuit of Villa and are whipping the mountains north and west of Parral, where the bandit chieftain is reported to be hiding, the report from field headquarters said.

REBELS TO ATTACK PEKING

Army Host Under Luy Ung Ting Will March on Capital Soon.

San Francisco, April 27.—A rebel advance on Peking, China, has been ordered by the Chinese revolutionists, according to a Shanghai dispatch to the Chinese Republican association here.

An army of several hundred thousand troops under Luy Ung Ting, formerly commander of Yuan Shi Kai's forces in Kwangsi province, and General Lung Chi Kwang, formerly with the government troops in Kwangtung, will begin the march on Peking soon, it was stated.

BRITAIN'S HISTORIC ESTATES FOR SALE

London, April 27.—The aristocratic owners of England's famous country estates, comprising thousands of idle acres, are selling their holdings because the war has pinched them financially. This is believed to mean that the idle land will be broken into small holdings and that England will become an important agricultural nation.

The current issue of a well known British real estate magazine carries nineteen solid pages of closely printed advertisements asking purchasers or tenants for more than 50,000 acres of sporting estates and innumerable country seats throughout England, Scotland and Wales.

Those who have lived in the open air will insist on continued open air, according to those who are now making a study of the situation.

RADIO STATION IS GUARDED

Soldiers Watch United States Wireless Depot at San Juan.

San Juan, Porto Rico, April 27.—A military guard has been placed on the United States wireless station here for reasons which the authorities refuse to divulge. The report that dynamite has been found around the station is denied.

Child Choked to Death.

Topeka, Kan., April 27.—Edna Dinsmore, aged ten found dead in a burning house by firemen, is believed to have been assaulted and choked.

176,000 MINERS MAY GO ON STRIKE

New York, April 27.—Deadlocked over the question of recognition of the United Mine Workers of America, the anthracite operators and miners face the possibility of a strike involving 176,000 men. The general board of mine workers is meeting here to receive the report of a subcommittee which was unable to reach an agreement with the operator's subcommittee.

Both subcommittees will report immediately to a general conference of both miners and operators that they have been unable to reach an agreement after seven weeks of discussion.

Unless this conference is able to find a way to break the deadlock, it will be left to the miners' convention, May 2, to determine whether the miners shall declare a strike.

DUBLIN UNDER MILITARY LAW

CASEMENT NOW IN LONDON

Leader of Separatist Faction in Ireland, Captured While Attempting to Land Arms From Germany on Irish Coast, Faces Treason Charge.

London, April 27.—Liberty hall, headquarters of the Dublin rebels, and Stephen's green, which was captured by them, have been occupied by soldiers, Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the city and county of Dublin. Troops have arrived from Belfast and England.

London, April 27.—Sir Roger Casement, leader of the separatist faction in Ireland, who was captured while attempting to land arms from Germany on the Irish coast, was conveyed across Ireland by a strong armed escort who knew the prisoner only by two initials. He arrived in London without [illegible] immediately was lodged in the Metropolitan prison.

The Express suggests the possibility that Sir Roger, if convicted of high treason, may be beheaded.

MEET IN SECRET SESSION

Members of Parliament Receive Confidential Reports.

London, April 27.—The most crowded house since the war began was drawn to Westminster palace by the excitement attending the secret session of parliament, coupled with the news of various stirring incidents.

At the closed session the members of parliament were to receive confidential information regarding the number of men who have enlisted in accordance with the compromise reached in the ministerial crisis over recruiting last week.

The session was the first secret meeting of parliament of the war.

ENGLAND PLANS TO MAKE MEN FIGHT

London, April 27.—Premier Asquith, at the secret session of parliament, presented on behalf of the government proposals foreshadowing general military compulsion unless success attended "immediate efforts to obtain men required by voluntary enlistment from unattested married men." The government's proposals were publicly announced in a long statement to the press.

The government, Mr. Asquith said, will "forthwith ask parliament for compulsory power," unless at the end of four weeks, ending May 27, 50,000 men have not been secured by voluntary enlistment. These arrangements are to hold good until 200,000 unattested men have been attained.

Owing to the length of time required to sift individual cases under the present system, the press statement said, recruiting to date has "fallen short of requirements which were necessary to fulfill our proper military efforts."

NAVAL AND AERIAL BATTLE

British Flyers Attacked German Battle Cruisers.

London, April 27.—Details of a thrilling naval and air battle off the eastern coast of England, in which one British aviator was lost, are related in an official statment.

"During the operation against the German battle cruiser squadron off the east coast," the statement says, "two Zeppelins were pursued by naval and land machines over sixty miles out to sea.

"Bombs and darts were dropped, but apparently without serious effect."

German Aides to Be Ousted.

Lisbon, April 27.—The government decrees expelling Germans from Portugal and sequestering their property have been extended to include all allies of Germany. Expulsion of all foreigners favorable to Germany also is provided for.

Casualties in Sea Battle.

London, April 27.—Twenty-five casualties in dead and wounded resulted from the bombardment of Lowestoft by German warships and the consequent running fight with the British light cruiser squadron and destroyers, so far as can be learned.

Capital Awaits Conference.

Washington, April 27.—Diplomatic and other problems surrounding the pursuit of Villa are being held in status quo pending the conference between General Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, and General Obregon, Carranza's minister of war, which is expected to take place soon at some border point.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Strengthened by Thief River Falls Experiences.

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Thief River Falls people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Thief River Falls people.

Mrs. George Williams, 412 Main Ave. N., Thief River Falls, says: "I think highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and have all reason to, as the cure they made in my case has been permanent. It is a little over four years ago that I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I was bad off with my kidneys and back and wasn't able to work for a whole summer. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that cured Mrs. Williams. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—A29-27.

FIRST FILING FOR PRIMARY ELECTION

J. S. Roy of River Falls Township announces Himself as Candidate For County Commissioner.

The first candidate to file for a place on the primary election ballot is J. S. Roy of River Falls township, who will enter the race as a candidate for county commissioner from the Fourth district. This place is now held by Ed. A. Aubol, who has not stated whether or not he will be a candidate for re-election.

While Robert McGinn of Thief River Falls, commissioner from the Second district, has not yet filed, it is understood that he will be a candidate. He has made an excellent official, and while it is quite probable that he would prefer to retire, it is not likely that the people of the district will permit him to do so.

The only other office to be filled at this election is that of judge of probate. Wilhelm Michelet, the present incumbent, stated that while he has not definitely decided upon his course, it is probable that he will announce his candidacy before the filings close on May 10.

ONE GARAGE NEARLY FINISHED; ONE BEGUN

The McFarland Building Ready for Cement Floor—Rasmussen & Rossmon Clearing Ground.

The new garage building being erected by M. McFarland on Third street between Main and Knight avenues, is rapidly nearing completion, and the work of putting in the cement floor will be begun before the end of the week. This building is of pressed brick, 40 x 140 feet, and will be devoted entirely to the automobile trade. A considerable section in the rear will be partitioned off as a machine shop and a small section in front will be devoted to a sales room and office. The remainder of the big room will be for garage purposes solely. The cost is $7,000.

The lots now occupied by the West hotel on North Main avenue will soon be covered by a fine new garage to be erected by Rasmussen & Rossmon. This building will also be of brick, 75 x 140 feet. Of this a total space 25 x 65 feet on the south side will be used as a store, while a large machine shop will occupy the rear. The dismantling of the frame buildings heretofore occupying the site has been going on for a week and the space necessary for the new structure will soon be cleared. This building is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

"A HOT TIME IN THE OLD TOWN" FRIDAY

This Will Most Assuredly be the Case At the Hockey Masquerade on Friday Night.

All is in readiness for the big mask ball to be given at the Auditorium Friday evening, April 28 by the hockey champions, and judging from the keen interest shown and the mystery as to the costumes and disguises to be worn by prominent local people, it will be a merry party largely attended, with "who's who?" the important question to be solved by the merrymakers.

For the benefit of the tardy ones, the committee has arranged to rent a limited number of costumes at the Auditorium and the six dressing rooms just off the stage will be available, with attendants to assist the maskers in their preparations. Masks and costumes are also for rental at the Lambert drug store, where tickets may be secured, or at the box office.

From the number of replies to the invitations issued and inquiries locally, everything points to many spectators as well as maskers, and those who expect to witness the grand march at 9:30 sharp are advised to secure their seats early and avoid the rush certain to come soon after 8:00 p. m.

Warren, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire and other nearby towns are to be well represented and it is understood that some unusually handsome costumes have been ordered from St. Paul Costumers by local people, while a number have planned their own disguises. A bevy of pretty young local matrons, it is rumored, have planned a surprise on "hubby" and if the man of the house finds himself holding his own wife "just a little close" in the fascinating fox trot or two-step, it will be no surprise, at least to the wife. On the other hand, the gentlemen have planned some traps for my lady and it will be well for the fair ones not to count too much on their impression that "hubby does not recognize me."

With jolly good music, a fine dance floor, good management and unquestioned auspices, this party is bound to be the most successful of its kind ever enjoyed by a gathering of society people of this section of the state and the last word of advice from the committee is, "don't miss it."

Advertising values.

Speaking of advertising, here is what some of the big publications charge for their space: The Ladies Home Journal, $8 a line, $104 an inch and $6,000 for a full page issue. The back cover page sells for $10,000. A full page advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post sells for $5,000 and the back cover costs $7,500. The center double page costs $12,000. An exchange says that the rates are not that high in the local paper, but that the local paper as an advertising medium is the best medium possible for the home merchant.

BAND TO GIVE PARK CONCERT

Commercial Club Appropriates $200 to Help Defray Expenses During the Coming Year.

The popular open air concerts by the Thief River Falls concert band will be continued during the coming summer. This wes assured last evening when the executive committee of the Commercial club voted to appropriate $200 toward defraying the expenses. The plan is to give one concert each week during the summer months in the park, and one every month at the Auditorium in winter.

This action on the part of the Commercial club will be heartily endorsed by the people, and is an example that may be followed with profit by other bodies. The band must have some financial aid if it is to continue along its present high plane of efficiency. Prof. Greenfield and the members are doing everything they can to make the organization the best of its kind in the state, and the only thing that can prevent their doing so is a lack of interest on the part of the people of the city.

The band is worthy of all the encouragement and support it can be given.

AT THE THEATRES

THE ROSARY.

Manager H. O. Mugridge of the Lyceum theatre, has booked the seven-reel Selig Red Seal Play, "The Rosary," for Thursday, May 4th. This production is adapted from the well-known play by Edward E. Rose and tells the story of the many events which crowd the life of Father Kelly. In his early years his struggle between the love of a girl and the call of the church is shown while late in life he becomes the pivot about which a domestic tragedy revolves. His ward, a young broker, unjustly suspects his wife of being false to him and Father Kelly, who is visiting them when they quarrel, is at last instrumental in uniting them and again bringing happiness into both their lives. Charles Clary makes a beautiful character out of the Priest while Kathlyn Williams and Wheeler Oakman portray the young couple in a way which makes their characters appear to really live. From start to finish the film teems with dramatic action and its artistic treatment makes it a production which, once seen, will never be forgotten.

"THE PANTAGES."

"September Morn in the jungle," the offering at the Princess theatre last Saturday and Sunday proved one of the best vaudeville stunts ever seen in Thief River Falls. The performances were well attended and much appreciated. Another sketch under the direction of the famous Pantages company will be shown Saturday and Sunday of this week.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Granager, a state nurse, is making physical examination of the school children. This valuable assistance has been made available to the district through the success of the red cross stamp sales in this city last winter. The service is free, but none the less valuable.

The new well at the Lincoln is now in use. The water is "soft" and there is an abundant supply.

The senior class play is being rehearsed under the direction of Mrs. Pitkin. The date of its presentation is not yet definitely known, but will be either May 12th or May 19th. Its title is "728."

The pictures which were secured last winter for the various schools through the agency of the art exhibits, arrived this week and will be immediately placed in position.

The normal training rules promulgated by the state department of education require that no student can hereafter enroll for training work unless he or she has completed at least twelve credits. This will prohibit all except seniors from enrolling.

Three new families appeared in school last Monday. This is the usual Monday morning experience.

Miss Granager delivered an address at the Lincoln, Thursday evening, on health topics. It contained much food for thought and aroused not a little interest in community health.

Only five weeks of school remain. These will be filled with busy hours for all school people, particularly those of the upper grades.

Morlan Bishop, who graduates from the University in June, visited the schools this week. He was accompanied by a friend, Dr. James, one of the professors in the economics department. Morlan enjoys the distinction of being the youngest man in the present senior class at the University.

James Curran, a post graduate student at the State University, was a school caller Wednesday. James, like many other of the local boys, has made good, and will receive his Master's degree in June.

James Grathe of the class of 1913 and at present a student in the Iowa State University, had a narrow escape from being burned to death last week at the boarding house. He escaped from the burning building by sliding down a water pipe for some fifty feet.

WEEKLY BAND CONCERTS DURING SUMMER MONTHS.

Joe Oczechowski (Oski), the bonanza potato farmer of Mavie, wants to start a state-wide potato contest. His idea is for each farmer wishing to enter the contest to deposit $5.00 in a general fund, the total to be divided into three prizes, these going to the same number of farmers raising the largest potatoes in the state during the summer of 1916.

The contest will open on July 1 and close on November 1. It is open to anyone who will deposit $5.00 with a depository to be selected. The contest will not be decided on the point of size alone, the general quality of the specimens judged being taken into consideration.

ANOTHER LONG PRAIRIE MAN WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR.

Henry Andre Thinks Gov. Burnquist Too Young and Would Like the Latter's Job Himself.

After making a bet that William E. Lee would be the next governor of Minnesota, Henry Andre, well known in local political circles, has decided to file for the nomination himself.

Last week he wrote Julius A. Schmal, secretary of state asking for the necessary papers. He will make the race on a state-wide prohibition platform.

He says that Governor Burnquist is too young and thinks the others are afraid to make the campaign. He is 48 years old and was twice candidate for the office of register of deeds in Todd county, being defeated both times.

ASK FRANCHISE TO USE STREETS

ing for a bond issue of $30,000 for the purpose of improving and extending the system, came up for final reading, and was passed by the unanimous vote of the council. The ordinance provides for the sale of a fifth of the waterworks bonds bearing five and one-half per cent interest, payable in 30 years from date of issue. The proceeds are to be devoted to the securing of a supply of pure water for the city.

Much Minor Business.

Building permits were issued to P. J. Zeh and Andrew N. Ness. The former asked permission to make certain alterations in the skating rink property on Main avenue, while Mr. Ness requested that he be allowed to remove the old West hotel two blocks to the west and remodel it for resident purposes.

A petition was received from a number of residents of Atlantic avenue, asking that something be done to improve that thoroughfare. The street committee was instructed to look into the matter. A committee composed of Councilmen Bakken, Amble and Froseth was appointed to look into the condition of the half block belonging to the city on the east side, purchased years ago for park purposes.

The water tank ordinance was given its second reading, as was also the hitching post ordinance. There was no objection to the advancing of the first-named measure, but a roll call showed Councilman Froseth as being opposed to anything further being done in the hitching post matter.

The Great Northern railroad, thru Vice President J. M. Gruber, advised the council that something would be done with regard to the closets at the depot of the road here. A stay was granted until May 18. It was decided to call the attention of the sanitary engineer, to be here shortly, to the matter.

G. Howard Smith, on behalf of the Hockey club, requested that the rate of rental for the use of the Auditorium be lowered for the benefit of that organization. He was informed that inasmuch as the schedule had already been made and adopted, the council considered it inadvisable to make any deviation from the rule laid down. The councilmen said, however, that they would be very glad to aid the hockey team in any other way possible.

Superintendent Peterson of the water and light plant was authorized to purchase a tank car of oil for use in the engines. No power is now being generated at the dam and the lighting of the city depends entirely upon kerosene engines.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS TO STAGE ENTERTAINMENT

Something Interesting and Novel is Promised at the Princess May 12, Afternoon and Evening.

An entertainment will be given under the auspices of the high school Friday afternoon and evening, May 12, at the Princess theatre. The proceeds will go toward defraying the expenses incurred by the athletic association on the recent trip to the state basket ball tournament at Northfield.

This "show" promises to be something a little out of the ordinary. Many of the young people at the high school have given indications of possessing considerable talent as entertainers, and they will appear at their best. The musical program will be particularly good and will include both instrumental and vocal selections.

Mrs. M. Curran Passes Away.

Mrs. Martin Curran, for over eighteen years a resident of Thief River Falls, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Carew, 817 Knight avenue north, on Saturday evening, April 22, at five o'clock, death coming as the result of hardening of the arteries, after an illness of nine weeks. Funeral services were held from the St. Bernards Catholic church, of which the deceased had been a long and faithful member, on Tuesday morning, April 22, at nine o'clock, Fr. Adolph Dingman, pastor of the church, being in charge. Interment followed in the Catholic cemetery, north of the city. A large number of staunch and true friends of this grand old woman attended the services at the church and cemetery to pay a final tribute of esteem and respect to the memory of their departed companion.

Mrs. Curran was born at Benton, Wisconsin, on September 25, 1849, making her age at time of death, 66 years, 6 months and 22 days. She received her early school training at Benton, after which she removed with her parents to Downsville, Wisconsin, in 1867. Later her parents removed to Eau Clair, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Curran, whose maiden name was Susan McDonald, was united in marriage at EuClaire on October 27, 1873, to Martin Curran, who passed away in this city eight years ago. They made their home at EuClair for twenty-seven years after which they removed to Thief River Falls. To this union were born seven children, all surviving as follows: Mrs. A. Donaldson of EuClair, William Curran of Kallispel, Montana, Mrs. B. Wilson of Watertown, S. D., George P. Curran of this city, Mrs. J. H. Carew of this city, Stafford Curran of Marble, Minn., and James Curran of St. Paul, Minn. Five brothers also survive Mrs. Curran, who are as follows: T. McDonald of Downsville, Wisconsin, William and James McDonald of EuClair, Wisconsin, and Robert and John McDonald of Beardsley, Minn.

In the death of Mrs. Curran Thief River Falls has lost one of the very best of its residents. She was a woman of rigid honesty, sterling worth of character and unfailing friendship. Mrs. Curran was always known for her kindness to others and deeds of this nature mark her life throughout. She was a loving and dear mother and was loved and highly respected by her large number of devoted friends. The Times extends its most sincere sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

NEW PRESS FOR FINE JOB WORK

Huber Two-Revolution Printing Machine Installed This Week in Times Printing Plant.

NEEDED IMPROVEMENT

Steady Growth of Business Makes This costly Addition Necessary—Office Now has One of Finest Equipments in State.

The commercial printing equipment of the Thief River Falls Times has for some time been recognized as one of the best in this section, and the further addition last week of a Huber two-revolution book and job press places it far in advance of any similar establishment in the northwestern section of Minnesota. Added to the excellent facilities for the manufacture of printing already possessed by the Times, it puts the office in a position to compete for work that has heretofore been largely secured at the larger plants outside of the city.

The Huber Press is admittedly one of the best manufactured in America. It is perhaps the most convenient and complete machine of its kind ever turned out. Some idea of its solidity may be gained from the fact that it weighs four and one-half tons—nearly twice as much as the larger press now used in the Times office for printing the newspaper.

The new machine is built expressly for turning out the higher class of work, such as the printing of halftone engravings, color printings, catalogue and book work. Its unusual weight and solid construction makes for rigidity of impression, and this is the prime requisite in the production of clear-cut printing.

In order to keep abreast of the times, any manufacturer must now pay particular attention to speed in production. This new press enables the office to turn out work that is not only of much better quality, but at a speed that makes for a lower cost of production For instance, where it has been possible to print but one small form at a time on the regular platen press or job presses, these may be multiplied on the new machine thus cutting the press work time to a minimum. As a cost finding system is employed by The Times in determining the value of any given job of printing, this saving of time works to the benefit of the customer.

There is practically no limit to the range of work which can be turned out on a press of this kind. Book forms, large posters, printing in colors—in fact anything possible on a printing machine comes within the scope of its possibilities.

The Cottrell-Babcock drum cylinder press installed about two years ago will be devoted entirely to the printing of the newspaper. With the increase in the size of the paper to sixteen pages and the steadily growing subscription list, the time necessary for taking care of the commercial printing cannot be added to the work of that machine without encroaching on the time absolutely necessary for the production of the newspaper. This is steadily becoming more important, and the publisher is considering the advisability of so arranging the crew as to make the newspaper practically a separate department.

The cost of installing of a machine of this kind is much greater than the ordinary citizen believes possible, but the business justifies the outlay. The machine has been busy practically all the time since it was placed in running and orders on hand willl keep it so for some time to come.

Beware the Dog Catcher.

Poundmaster Thomas Moran will begin his duties for the season on the first day of May, and anyone owning a dog had better secure a license unless they want their pet to get into trouble. If all the dogs in this city were made to wear a license tag for which the required fee had been paid, the amount received would go a long way toward paying the bonded indebtedness—at least it looks that way. Mr. Moran does not wish to grab the dog companion of any little boy or girl, but his orders are explicit, and unless the license fee is paid even the valuable canine is most surely liable to find himself in the company of plebian brutes in the common pound.

Attend the dance at Nelson hall, Mavie, Saturday evening. Car on electric line will leave Thief River Falls at 8 o'clock.—a-27.

This 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Will Last Any Man 5 Years or More.

Now there has been a lot of talk about 3400. I find some of my prospects come in here a little bit doubtful about 3400.

They have been told by my contemporaries that an engine turning up 3400 r. p. m. is doomed to short existence.

That's absurd. Why, there are at least three cars in America that do 3100 r. p. m. or better. Ten years ago in Europe there were cars that did 4000 r. p. m.

Now, the argument set forth against 3400 is the "wear and tear on bearings."

How ridiculous!

Of course, if we had an old-fashioned engine with heavy iron pistons and arm-and-hammer type of connecting rods—then, to be sure, I'd have little to say.

But, to the contrary, this is a very modern engine. The pistons are aluminum, which cost a whole lot more, but weigh a whole lot less.

Then the connecting rods are much lighter.

That takes a lot of weight off the bearings, and permits about 500 r. p. m. more engine speed.

That isn't a very big increase, I know, but it's just enough to make a very foxy, silken affair in action.

And then, too, in traveling 10 miles an hour her engine speed is only 500 r. p. m. At 20 she turns up 1000. At 30, 1500.

How often do you travel faster than 30?

So unless you want to sink the little button to the floor board and hold her there all day, you're not using 3400 r. p. m. all the time.

I hope none of my friends will swallow whole any story deriding 3400.

You know you will always find the largest number of clubs under the best apple tree in the orchard.

This car has doubled my sales.

As Mr. Post says, "There's a reason."

One little ride and you will want to pass up your old gondola.

Ask me about our service inspection coupons. They are negotiable with all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is an important consideration in buying your car.

WELCOME READY FOR DELEGATES

Arrangements All Complete For Entertainment of Ninth District Women's Clubs May 4 and 5.

THREE SESSIONS EACH DAY

State Officers of Federation as Well as District Leaders Will Be Present And Take Active Part in Proceedings.

When the delegates to the annual convention of the Ninth District Women's clubs arrive here for a two-day session on Thursday next, they will find everything in readiness for their entertainment. Every city and village in the district which contains a branch of the state federation is expected to send one or more delegates, and the best meeting in the history of the organization is looked forward to.

There will be six sessions, three each day. The day meetings will be held at the Commercial club rooms and the public meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. All preliminary work has been attended to and the committtee members are entitled to much credit for the thorough manner in which everything has been looked after. The ladies in charge of the arrangements, Mrs. L. G. Larson, Mrs. C. E. Russel and Mrs. C. A. Pitkin, are much pleased with the interest shown and aid extended by the citizens generally. The lunch served at the Hotel Brumund by the ladies on Monday was well patronized, and the performance of "Rumpelstiltskin," given under their auspices on Tuesday afternoon and evening at the Princess theatre, drew big crowds. The club members feel particularly under obligations to Manager H. A. Brumund for the courtesies shown, and extend their thanks to all others who have aided in the preliminary work for this convention.

The program for the two days is as follows:

Thursday, May 4th.
Luncheon—12:30 P. M.

2:00 P. M.—Song: "Minnesota."

Invocation—Mrs. W. W. Prichard, Thief River Falls.

Address of Welcome—Mrs. L. G. Larson.

Address of Welcome—Mr. Geo. G. Johnson, Pres. Commercial club.

Response—Mrs. A. A. Miller, Crookston.

Vocal Solo: (a) "Yesterday and Today," (b) "An Open Secret"—Mrs. Gay Halvorson, Thief River Falls.

Reports of Club Presidents, (Three minutes each).

Piano Solo: "Rondo Capriciosso," Mendelssohn—Miss Doris Halvorson, Thief River Falls.

ART.

TWO REFRIGERATOR CARS ON ELECTRIC

Produce Shipments From Points In Eastern Part of County Make Increase Necessary.

The Minnesota Northwestern Electric railway has found it necessary to increase the refrigerator service from eastern Pennington county points in order to take care of the products coming in from that neighborhood. The opening of the Thief River Produce company's warehouse here last month stimulated produce shipments from every direction, this being particularly noticeable as regards the country around Goodridge, Mavie and Grygla. Heretofore the section has been served by the running of one refrigerator each week, but one more car will hereafter run on regular schedule. These cars will be attached on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and to such an extent has this business grown that it is expected that more produce will hereafter be carried on each bi-weekly trip than has heretofore been carried on one.

Th establishment of a produce house here has stimulated business in line heretofore operated as incidentals. Eggs, for instance, now find a steady cash market, and the number of farmers who are finding this industry profitable is surprising. Butter is also largely handled by this house, and the farmers in outlying districts where no creamery is as yet established are finding an excellent demand for their product.

SANITARY ENGINEER MAKES INVESTIGATION

J. A. Childs, a sanitary expert connected with the state board of health, arrived in the city yesterday and at once began his investigations covering the water supply situation. He took samples of water from the river, the mains, and from a number of wells about the city and these will be shipped to the university for a bacteriological examination. Until a report of the results of such examination has been received nothing definite can be decided upon.

Mr. Childs met with a committee of the city council last evening and informed these officials that a superficial examination of the water in the mains convinced him that it was absolutely unfit for use in its present state. He said that while a chemical filtration plant might answer as a temporary relief measure, this process hardly appealed to him as the most satisfactory way for meeting the conditions here. The water in the wells of the city he regarded as perfectly safe, its hardness being the greatest objection to record against it. All this, however, will be fully set forth in the report to be submitted to the council.

MORE DREDGING NEEDED TO DEEPEN THIEF RIVER

The channel of the Thief River will have to be dredged out for a distance of about three miles further than at present if the stream is to take care of the surplus water entering it from ditches No. 18 and 20. This is the opinion of Prof. E. L. Chandler of the university of North Dakota, who in company with Rasmus Oen of Thief River Falls, made a trip to the territory about the junction of the streams on Saturday. Prof. Chandler, who is in charge of the government topographical surveys in this section, came here at the request of State Engineer E. V. Willard of St. Paul, and his investigations were more for the purpose of discovering the effect of the high water here upon the floods along the Red River of the North than to suggest a remedy. He will make a report to Mr. Willard, however, in which his findings will be appended.

Prof. Chandler stated that it would be absolutely necessary for the state of Minnesota to dredge Thief river for three miles farther than this work has been carried at present. He found that the water was being carried along at the speed of about two and one-half miles per hour, while if this additional dredging were done this would be increased to five miles. This increased speed in the flow of the river would double its capacity for taking care of the surplus water, while the additional dredging would carry this work to a point at which the high banks would make an overflow impossible.

This dredging project is of vast importance to a large section of country and the state commission will be urged to make some provision for having the work done at as early a date as possible.

TWO CREAMERIES ARE RE-OPENED FOR BUSINESS

Those at Highlanding and Germantown Start Shipping After Being Closed During Winter.

The Highlanding creamery made its first shipment of butter for the season on Saturday. The consignment consisted of 11 tubs of 75 pounds each, a total of 825 pounds. While this not a large amount compared with those made later in the season, it is considered a very good start.

The creamery at Germantown also opened for business last week and will be a considerable shipper throughout the season. Both these creameries have been closed down during the winter months, but are preparing for a busy summer's run. Butter prices are good and bid fair to remain so, while the supply is never equal to the demand. With the tendency on the part of the farmers to steadily increase their herds of milch cows the creameries of Pennington county are looking forward to the most prosperous year in their history. Should the number of cows in the territory tributary to these two creameries keep increasing at the present rate for another season, both will undoubtedly enter the all-year class.

BASE BALL COMMITTEE ELECTS NASON MANAGER

Practice to Be Begun at Once Under the Most Favorable Conditions in Years.

The committee named by local base ball enthusiasts to formulate plans for putting a winning team in the field to represent Thief River Falls this season, met at the Commercial club rooms and organized as follows: G. A. Penny, chairman; W. A. Devenny, secretary-treasurer. The directors elected Charles A. Nason manager of the team and C. A. Pitkin, assistant manager. A field captain will be selected by the manager.

Men will try out for places on the team at once and local players will be given the preference, there being considerable good material available in the city. Hoffmeister, who went to Duluth to try out with the Northern league team of that city, but who arrived too late to secure a place, will wear a Thief River Falls uniform this season and is expected home this week.

The Pennington county fair association has donated the use of the grounds for the season and practice will begin at once. The management will order new suits for the players and plans for financing the team have already been started, it being the idea to round out just as strong a team as is possible, well equipped in every respect but to keep the organization out of debt from the start. Members of the general committee who have backed the proposition and taken an active interest are: Geo. G. Johnson, C. L. Hansen, C. A. Pitkin, W. A. Devenny, G. A. Penny.

LAND OF VAST RESOURCES

Minneapolis Newspaper Calls Attention to Northwestern Development and Part Scandinavians Have Played.

The "Minneapolis Tidende," one of the foremost Norwegian newspapers printed in the United States, this week contains an interesting article on the products of Minnesota, devoting a considerable share of its report to the northwestern section. The paper naturally and very properly credits a large part of progress and prosperity of this section to the work done by the people of Scandinavian birth and parentage, who make up such a large share of the population. The article is one of the best of its kind coming to the notice of the Times, and is reproduced in full.

"Minnesota stands in the front rank among the agricultural states of the Union. The state is in the exact center of the North American continent. It is higher above the sea level than any of the states east of the Rocky mountains. The highest point is on the Mesaba Iron Range, 1,250 feet, and the lowest is Duluth, 602 feet above the sea level. According to the 1910 census there are about 25 persons to the square mile, and the whole area of the state is 83,365 square miles, or 51,749,120 acres. The same census showed that there were 156,137 farms in Minnesota with a total valuation of $1,476,411,737; but the valuation has increased considerably since that time.

"Farm crops in Minnesota in 1915 had a valuation of$241,897,000. The farm crops of all the 48 states were valued at $6,788,905,000, hence one eighth is Minnesota's share. Among the yields of the most important crops in Minnesota in 1915 were: 62,100,000 bushels of corn from 2,700,000 acres; 1,170,000 bushels winter wheat from 60,000 acres. But it is spring wheat which gives Minnesota its rank as a Wheat State. In 1915 151,970,000 bushels of spring wheat were produced, or more than one-fifth of the entire spring wheat crop of the United States. Minnesota also produced 3,150,000 bushels of flax in 1915, about one-fourth of the entire yield in the United States; 134,375,000 bushels of oats; 5,850,000 bushels of rye: 41,175,000 bushels barley. The hay crop totaled 3,209,000 tons, and one-tenth of the country's potato crop was produced in Minnesota, namely 30,210,000 bushels.

"Dairying together with hog and sheep raising, also plays an important rôle. On Jan. 1st, 1915, there were 1,716,000 hogs in the state, 1,186,000 cattle, 564,000 sheep and 1,208,000 other domestic animals.

"The chief center of Minnesota is the Twin Cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul, with a combined population of over one-half million. There are many cities throughout the state which are centers for smaller districts. All kinds of industries flourish, but it is agriculture, the state's chief industry, on which all the others depend.

"Southern Minnesota, meaning by this the four tiers of counties across the southern part of the state, is a chain of smiling landscapes. In this section pioneering is a thing of the past. There are thousands of clearings in the forests of the eastern part and on the endless prairies of the western grove upon grove has appeared, in the centers of which are comfortable farmsteads. There is no trace of the old Indian Trail, in its stead we find a network of gravelled roads. Nearly every acre of this section is fenced and in use. The price of land varies considerably, from $40 for unimproved land to $150 per acre for highly improved land. There are instances where farms have been paid for at the rate of $275 an acre. All kinds of small grains are grown: but these southern counties comprise the state's corn belt.

"There are thousands of lakes, numerable rivers and a veritable network of railroads in this district.

"The climate is favorable. There is 50 to 60 per cent sunshine. The average temperature is 43-45 degress. The precipitation is 27.58 inches of which 20.64 inches fall during the time moisture is most needed, from April to September.

First Norwegians.

"It was in this section of the state that the Norwegian settlers first located. In 1851 Even Ellertsen. Dahl and Halvor Gjaellervig settled in Fillmore county. Others soon followed, and the following year there were quite a number of Norwegian settelers along the Root river in Fillmore and Houston counties. Even now, 65 years later, Spring grove in Houston county is considered one of the strongest Norwegian spots in America. The clearing and pioneering was done mostly by Scandinavians, chiefly by Norwegian pioneers, and in Freeborn county a large number also were Danes.

"Indeed, Minnesota has become the flourishing agricultural state largely as a result of the work done by immigrants from Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Of the 2,075,708 inhabitants of the state in 1910, 585,148 were of Scandinavian parentage; but there are now in the state those of both third and fourth generation also, and it is safe to say that between one third and one-half of the farm population of the state is of Scandinavian descent.

The Northwestern Section.

"The northwestern part of the state, which among other things contains the famous Red River Valley, owes its growth in a large degree as a result of the travels which the Norwegian-American pioneer editor, Paul Hjelm-Hansen, made up through the Red River Valley in 1869 that settlers began to stream into this territory in the early seventies. He realized the great possibilities of this fertile soil, and described what he had seen in letters to Norwegian-American newspapers.

"The district comprises 8,900 square miles. The soil is black loam with clay subsoil. Here the production of small grains is without a parallel.

"In this district is an institution which is of great importance to farmers, the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, the superintendent of which is a Norwegian, Mr. C. G. Selvig. This is the main branch of the State College of Agriculture in the Twin Cities. There are quite a number of experiment stations thruout the state. All these institutions are connected with the State University, as it is one of its purposes to furnish the farm population a thorough knowledge of those things which belong to farm life."

Collorem Leonard Nordlund.

Last Sunday in Cloverleaf township occurred the death of Callorem Leonard Nordlund, age 2 years 8 months, 20 days, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Nordlund, after a brief illness. Funeral services were held in this city from the Swedish Mission church, and the remains were taken to Greenwood cemetery for burial.

WHAT THE AMENDMENT MEANS TO MINNESOTA

Revolving Fund Proposition Would Insure the Reclamation and Settlement of State's Lands.

While the general purpose of Amendment No. 1, to be voted on at the next general election is pretty well understood by the people of the state, yet there may be many to whom a further explanation would be welcome. Senator P. H. McGarry, the father of the bill creating the fund, thus explained its workings and advantages at a meeting in Cass county last week.

"The revolving fund, if adopted will mean the development and sale of about 2,000,000 acres of undeveloped state lands. This work of developing the small tracts of each forty should be, to my mind, let to the lowest bidder for the same as our road work is let; for the reason that a man taking a contract for improving 5, 10, or 20 of those five acre tracts would be prepared with teams, breaking equipment and the like which no man only prepared to improve five acres could very well afford.

"The cost of improving each five acre tract to be added to the appraised price of the land and the same sold. The amount to be used out of the revolving fund and continue in this manner until the state's holding of 2,000,000 acres is improved in this slight manner of development that by the time the last 40 acre tract of land is slightly improved that the revolving should, and doubtless will be, intact and returned to the state treasury and in reality all we have received or asked for from the state is the state's credit while this great development work has been going on."

MAVIE FARMERS WILL MEET NEXT SATURDAY

Shiping Improvements and Other Matters of Much Importance will Come up for Discussion.

The newly organized Farmer's club at Mavie will hold an important meeting on Saturday, April 29. One of the first things to come up will be the selection of a name for the organiation. "Cloverleaf" has been suggested and is likely to be the one favored as this is the name of the township in which most of the members reside.

The matter of a cattle chute at Mavie will also receive some attention. The farmers in the neighborhood maintain that they are handicapped through being compelled to take all shipments of this character to Goodridge in order to place them on board the cars of the Minnesota Northwestern, and it is likely that the road will be petitioned to provide some convenience which will do away with this. Officials of the road, recognizing the growing importance of the country about Mavie, have signified their willingness to comply with the demand as far as is possible or practicable at this time.

Several members of the club are down for papers on different subjects at this meeting, and the officers, President John Phillip and Secretary Thomas H. Smith, urge all interested to be present.

SOUTH DAKOTA FARMERS SEEK PENNINGTON LAND

Arrive With all Effects and Locate Near Goodridge—Another From Near Sleepy Eye.

The farmers continue to arrive. It would be interesting to know just how many have been added to the population of Pennington county this spring, but it would be almost impossible to secure a correct census. The section along the route of the Minnesota Northwestern Electric railway seems to be particularly favored by the newcomers, large numbers having taken up their residence in the neighborhood of Goodridge, Mavie and Grygla.

During the past week three families were added to the population of Goodridge township. Two of these, Elmer J. Bly and Carl J. Entrum: came from Garretson, S. D. The former went onto a farm two and a half miles south of Goodridge, while Mr. Entrum's holdings are also in the neighborhood of that village. These gentlemen brought a carload of farmers' effects with them and are prepared to start cultivating their land at once. A. McLoed, whose holding is two and one-half miles to the north of Goodridge, and who came from Sleepy Eye, Minn., also brought along a full equipment of the things needful for successful farming and is prepared to start right in raising crops.

These are not people who are going to try farming as an experiment, but practical men who have throughly investigated conditions here before deciding to locate. They have the means necessary to start them right, and are therefore particularly desirable.

Mr. Hill's Donation.

Warren Sheaf.—When Rev. F. N. Anderson opened a modest looking envelope received in the mail last Saturday, he was greatly pleased to find therein Hon, J. J. Hill's check for $9,000 in fulfillment of his promise to North Star college made a little over a year ago, on condition that the college raise $27,000, making a total of $36,000 for paying the indebtness of the institution. Owing to Mr. Hill's absence in the east, it was impossible for him to give this matter attention until his return home, hence the delay. Friends and supporters of the college in this city and thruout the valley feel very grateful to Mr. Hill for his generous donation. North Star is to be congratulated upon the successful termination of its campaign for funds.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock.

STAGE ASPIRATIONS

NOT since the famous trial that sent the expression "brain storm" spinning down through the years, has the testimony of an alienist so greatly stirred an excited world as did the phrase "Repressed Psychosis," with which Dr. Foster summed up the temporary insanity of Mary Page.

It spread through the court and the throngs in the corridor; it sped over the telephone wires to the waiting newspapers of the city. It even reached the zenith of publicity and became the inspiration of the cartoonists, but all this was after that day when Dr. Foster, once more upon the witness-stand, told with technical brevity of how prenatal influence, increased by fear and suffering, re-acted upon the delicate brain tissues under the strain of a great shock.

Much of what he said was entirely unintelligible to the excited audience. It was therefore with a little rustling sigh of relief that they heard Langdon abruptly change his line of questioning and say:

"How long after the night at Dr. Zellar's sanatorium did Miss Page remain in your hospital?"

"It was nearly three weeks before she was able to go, and even then it was with some trepidation that I consented to her leaving."

"Did you fear a return of—her—illness?"

"Yes. I knew that excitement or a nervous strain of any sort would have an injurious effect, and I warned both Mrs. Page and Mr. Langdon to protect her as much as possible."

"Did you fear a return of—her—illness?"

"Dr. Foster, did you ever see James Pollock after the night he took Miss Page to Zellar's?"

"Yes. I saw him again on the day when Miss Page left my sanatorium."

"Will you tell us the circumstances of that second meeting, please?"

"Miss Page and her mother and Mr. Langdon were just about to leave, in order to take a train to New York when Mr. Pollock drove up to the sanatorium in his motor. I was very indignant at his daring to come to the hospital after what had occurred, and asking the Pages and Mr. Langdon to go into my office and wait, I went to the door myself and peremptorily ordered Mr. Pollock to leave the grounds. He refused to go, saying that he had something of great importance to say to Miss Page. He would not, he said, ask to see her alone, but it was his right to see her if he wished, because their engagement had not been broken. I felt that in the circumstances it was best to let him see Miss Page and receive his dismissal. So I took him into the office."

"Yes. She gave a little cry almost of fear and clung to her mother, and would not answer his greeting."

"What did Mr. Pollock say?"

"He said, 'You have no reason to shrink from me like that, Mary. At worst what I have done has been because I loved you. You have promised to marry me, and so far that promise has not been taken back, and now I have come to know what you are going to do. It seems to me that we ought to be married at once—as—as—I have information that your father's death has left you—without—well, without the comforts that I will be glad to give you. I have waited for three weeks for some word from you, and now I have come to claim my fiancee!'"

"Did Miss Page reply?"

"Yes. She went up to him boldly and said without any signs of nervousness of the moment before, 'If I have not taken back my promise, James, it is because I have been too ill to think of it. But I do take it back now. I will never marry you so long as I live, and I never want you to speak to me again. I detest you, and since you can no longer harm my father, the reason for my promise to you is gone. That is all I have to say. Good-bye.' At that Pollock got very white and said hoarsely, 'Does that mean that you are going to marry Langdon?' 'It means,' she said, 'that after what has happened I shall never marry anyone. We are going to New York, where I hope to secure a position.'"

"Did Mr. Pollock show any surprise at that?"

"No, but he was obviously chagrined. And then I interfered and reminded Mrs. Page that they would miss their train if there was any further delay, and they left, Pollock driving away in his machine almost directly back of them."

"Did Miss Page seem calm and collected?"

"Yes, outwardly; but there was a look in her eyes that made me fearful for her future, and her hands had resumed their nervous twitching when I put her into the automobile.

"It made me realize that the great influence to fear for her was Pollock, and it is my decided opinion that if, as I have heard, he continued to persecute the defendant, the result would—"

"I object!" stormed the District Attorney, leaping to his feet. "Dr. Foster's last assertion that the defendant's mental ailment was aggravated through the continued persecution of James Pollock, is hearsay evidence, and a direct maligning of a dead man."

"I sustain that objection," said the judge sternly, adding to the doctor, "You must restrict yourself to answering questions, Dr. Foster. Let the answer be stricken out from the words, 'into the automobile.'"

"No more questions," said Langdon.

But the prosecutor had. He got to his feet with the alacrity of a fighting man going into battle. With a tongue steeped in vitriol he attacked the testimony of the alienist; he held Mary Page up as a hysterical girl who had sought notoriety; he flung doubt upon the possibility of a "temporary" mental derangement, but though he tortured Mary until with shuddering horror she sank forward in her chair, her hands pressed against her ears to shut out the sound of his voice, he could not shake the smiling imperturbability of Dr. Foster.

Cross examination meant nothing to the latter, and much as he regretted the strain upon the pitiful little prisoner, he really enjoyed pitting his power against that of the prosecutor.

So his answers came with cool deliberation, and a hint of insolence that won the admiration of the spectators who were divided between zest in the stirring battle and pity for Mary. But it was the sympathy that came uppermost.

At last, unable to bear any longer the brutal wrangle over her sanity, Mary leaped to her feet, a little moaning cry of protest wrung from her white lips. Langdon was at her side in an instant, his hands drawing her down into her chair again, his lips whispering encouragement and comfort, till she smiled up at him—a wavering, pathetic little smile.

To the prosecutor in his present savage humor it seemed a carefully planned bit of by-play, yet he could so plainly see its effect upon the jury, and could read so clearly the antagonism growing in their eyes when they looked at him, that with an abrupt shrug he swung upon his heel and sat down with a curt, "That's all."

That released Dr. Foster, and sent him back triumphantly to the witness-room. There were two newcomers there now, a sweet-faced matronly looking woman of middle age, rather old-fashioned in her dress, and a young girl of about twenty-five who was divided between nervous fears and youthful zest. She was destined to be the next witness, and Dr. Foster smiled involuntarly when he saw her. Most people smiled at Amy, for that matter, for she was bubbling over with youth and laughter, but for all that, her gaiety was backed up by the shrewdness of the modern girl who fights her own battles promptly and successfully.

Her tailored suit and soft blouse open at the throat were smartly cut, and her hat was a hint daring in its shape and the way it was tilted over her little nose, and when the bailiff called her name, "Miss Amy Barton," her agitation led her to tip it at an even more dangerous angle as she tried to powder her nose and kiss her mother at the same time.

"I'm scared blue!" she confided to the other witnesses in a shaky voice. "A first night is a cinch to this. What do I have to say?"

"You have only to answer questions," said Dr. Foster, "and there is really nothing to be frightened about."

"I suppose not," she answered as she went through the door, "but I wouldn't care anyway. I'd go be hanged if it would help Mary."

Under the careless words there was a sudden deeper note of sincerity, and the moment she was on the stand she turned to the judge and said:

"I don't know what I am supposed to do, your Honor, but I want to tell you right here, that Mary Page is the best and the bravest and the truest girl in the whole wide world."

For the first time the judge smiled; then he leaned forward and said kindly:

"The Court appreciates your admiration for the prisoner, but you must confine your remarks, while on the stand, to the answers to questions which will be asked you."

"Oh, yes, I was told that," she answered readily. "But I forgot." Then turning to Langdon she added cheerily, "Fire away, Mr. Langdon, I'm all ready."

A little gust of laughter rippled through the court. Then Langdon, coming close to the witness stand, said quietly:

"Miss Barton, you know the defendant, Mary Page, do you?"

"Why, of course I do, you goat!" she answered with a bubbling laugh that found an echo in the room. But Langdon frowned, and his voice was more harsh as he said, "Please answer yes, or no, and remember that if you want to aid Miss Page, you must make your answers short and to the point. Now will you please tell the court just when and how you first met Miss Page?"

"It was some years ago, and she and her mother came to our apartment with a note from Cousin Alice Cowes, who lived in New Town. Cousin Alice had sent them to us because she knew we had an extra room we wanted to rent, and she thought that I could help Mary land a job."

"What sort of—er—position?"

"In the merry-merry—that is, on the stage. I'd been across the foots myself for a couple of seasons and Cousin Alice said Mary wanted to become an actress and thought I could show her how to make the rounds. It's a tough proposition getting a job in New York with no friends and no pull."

"Will you tell the court, please, Miss Barton, about the first position secured by Miss Page and of the events that led up to it?"

"Well, it just happened that the day Mary hit the big town I had a date with Webster, the real boss of the musical comedies. Of course he isn't the sort that you'd want to send your little sister from the country to see, but too much hedging don't go in the show business worth a whoop. You've got to trust to a sharp tongue and a hat-pin till you show them where they get off, and once they're wise, they treat you all right. Webster was like that, but if he promises you a part he plays fair, so I never was afraid to buck his office-boy even on a busy day. So off we went.

"I had an appointment with the old man, but he was scrapping with one of his 'romantic leads'—you could hear them clear out to the front hall—and it was a long time before I could persuade his little cerberus to go in and tell him I was waiting. At any rate, he came out at last blowing blasts of red fire after the actor—and then he saw Mary. Talk about lions and lambs! Why, he purred when he saw her, and he was so sweet to me I almost got a leading lady's contract out of him before he woke up, and began to ask me questions about Mary. Then he tried to kiss her and I put an inch or so of my hat pin in his arm just above the elbow. Mary and I beat it while the going was good, and Mary was so upset we decided to go right home instead of calling on any of the other managers. That was how we happened to run into Jim Pollock."

"Where did you meet Mr. Pollock?"

"Oh, he was on the job at the apartment when we got home. Playing the humble but persistent swain—wanted to lay his fortune at her feet and give her a life of gilded ease. He pleaded all that sort of soft-music stuff, and told her she didn't realize how cruel the world was to a girl (men always say that) and how she would suffer to see her mother growing old and lacking the comforts she could not earn for her. Then he pulls out his wallet and taps it, saying, 'All that I have is yours, Mary, even if you don't marry me.' Business of soft music!"

"Were you in the room while this was going on?"

"No," she answered, winning a gale of laughter from the court-room, "but you can't brush your teeth in a New York apartment without the people in the next door flat hearing you, and everything that Mary said or Jim Pollock said, might as well have been shouted through a megaphone."

"Did Miss Page seem touched by Mr. Pollock's offer?" said Langdon, repressing a smile with difficulty.

"No, she stood up to him spunkily and told him flat where he got off. 'I'm going to get work,' she said, 'but even if I didn't my mother and I would never accept any help from you. I have only one thing to ask, and that is that you leave here at once and do not come again.' He came out in the hall where I had the door all nicely opened for him. I told him sweetly that I'd opened it for him to get out, but I'd be shot before it ever opened to let him in again. I ran back to the sitting-room, to find Mary in a dead faint. It was such a long time before she came round, and then she was so dazed and terrified that we were all scared to death, and I swore a solemn vow then and there that I'd be the busiest little stage mother and chaperon and advice giver to Mary that any girl ever had."

Her voice suddenly trembled, and the quick tears filled her eyes as, turning to Mary, she cried eagerly:

"And, Mary, I've kept my word, haven't I? Haven't I?"

Mary nodded, smiling through her own tears, and the spectators who throughout the breezy testimony of the young actress had been in gales of laughter, suddenly sobered. They saw the brave heart under the butterfly exterior, and realized the wisdom and the goodness behind the vulgar words.

Langdon, seeing the judge frown at this shattering of legal precedent, asked his next question quickly.

"You and Miss Page did secure positions in the same company, did you not?"

"Oh, yes, in 'The Blue Feather.' Mary took to it like a duck to water, and made a hit with the stage manager before he'd got through calling the rest of us all the names in his vocabulary. So when it came to one bit where the fat tenor had to choose a girl out of the chorus to sing an encore with him, Mary got the chance, and made good, too. But that was afterwards."

"She told him flat where he got off."

"Well, suppose you tell us what occurred on the day 'The Blue Feather' opened."

"Oh, the day was the same as any other opening day. We'd rehearsed half the night and started in at eight-thirty in the morning, and we were all tired to death and wished we were dead. It's always like that a few hours before the overture on an opening night, so Mary and I were mighty glad to slip out home and rest an hour before going back to make up. We didn't dare stay long, though, for being late is the worst sin in the box at a show-shop, so it was round about seven when we got on our lids and were ready to beat it back. Just when we were leaving, though, mother came running in and said, 'Oh, Mary, Philip Langdon is here and he wants to see you just a minute before you leave.' At that Mary lights all the lamps in her eyes, and went into the sitting room with me a close second.

"Mr. Langdon was there talking to Mrs. Page and when we came in she called out, 'Mary, Philip has given up his practice in New Town and has come here to live.' At that he came over and took Mary's hand in both of his and said, 'Please be glad, Mary. I heard that Pollock had gone into business here and I worried so about you. I felt I had to come. Let me be your friend and protector, even if I can't be anything more, won't you, Mary?' 'Oh, but you oughtn't to give up your practice, Phil,' she said, beginning, just like a woman, to kick against the thing that pleased her most. 'You—you—may not like it here.' But he laughed at that, and they began to talk so much that I got worried and butted in by reminding Mary that she was an actress now and had to hustle. Then Mr. Langdon had to be told all about it, and the result was we had to run three blocks to get in at the stage door before they began to keep tabs on the late comers. Mr. Langdon was to go with mother and Mrs. Page, and I soon spotted them up in the balcony, for the management doesn't hand out boxes for the families of its front row of the chorus, but in one of the boxes I did see a familiar face—that of Pollock. He was all gotten up in soup and fish, but he was alone, and I could see that he was taking Mary all in, and then some. Mary had told me a lot about him, and the piker way he'd acted, and she'd also told me a lot about Mr. Langdon, so I decided that I wouldn't put her wise to the fact that Pollock was there, but would let her play to the balcony, which she did. She was so pretty and so happy that she got a silly song over big, and even the tenor had the decency to make her go on and take a curtain with him. Everybody just made a fuss over her till Mary fairly cried, she was so happy. And the part that seemed to please her most was that she had seen Langdon applauding his hands off up stairs."

"That was the big idea," she said. "But it hit the rocks, for when Mary and I hustled into our glad rags and started for the door we bumped squarely into the stage manager and Mr. Pollock—the latter all done up to kill, even to a top hat. 'Oh, Miss Page,' sings out Ecky (that's the manager) 'here's a gentleman from your home town, that wants to take you out to supper and see you home in a buzz wagon.' He laughed nastily as he spoke, and I could feel Mary's hand go cold as ice as she grabbed mine and says, 'I have no desire to take supper with Mr. Pollock, either now or at any other time to come, Amy.' But that made old Ecky sore, so he began to roar like a bull and shouts, 'What's this? Are you crazy?' But Pollock interrupted him—there was a quick business of being hurt to the heart; the misunderstood soul—and the chivalry stunt was pulled off without a break. Then he says, 'Miss Page is quite within her rights. I do not wish an unwilling guest. Perhaps my moment of renewing her acquaintance was inopportune,' and he stalks away for all the world like the heavy in the third act. But old Ecky was up in the air, and he began rowing Mary for fair. He told her, the dog, that it was her beauty, not her talent, that 'got the house,' and added, 'It's your business here to be civil to your admirers and go to supper when they ask you. If you're goin' to ride a high horse I've got no use for you in this show.'"

"No, I think she was too horrified, and old Ecky, thinkin' that silence meant consent, told her to stay there till he brought Mr. Pollock back. The minute his back was turned I gave Mary the cue to get away quick, but we didn't have to, for just then Mr. Langdon came in, and we beat it for him. We didn't have time to tell him what had happened before old Ecky came back with Mr. Pollock and they both stopped short when they saw Mr. Langdon with us, and then Mr. Pollock drawls out, 'You see this Miss Page is not so virtuous as she pretends. She's not even particular in her choice—everybody knows that.' He must have intended us to hear, but what he didn't give any high sign for, was for Mr. Langdon to make a jump and grab him by the throat, shouting that he'd have to eat his words or he'd kill him. Old Ecky is deathly afraid of a fight and began to holler for the stage crew, but I got out my little old trusty hat-pin and promised anybody that came near two or three inches of it, so the men just stood around swearing and grinning behind their hands till Mr. Pollock was licked to a standstill and asked Mr. Langdon to let up. Then Mr. Langdon ordered him out of the theatre, and he—went! But while he was on his way I'd spied a pen and some ink on the prompt desk, and made Mary write out our joint resignation which we handed to old Ecky with business of much pomp as soon as the stage crew had gone back to work. It was a knockout for old Ecky. You see, he knew Mary had made a hit, and that the show had got over good, and to have to train in two new recruits for our parts before the next night was some job. So he turned on the soft soap, but we beat it towards the door, and Mr. Langdon marches up to Ecky and hands him his card, saying calmly, 'These girls are quite within their rights because of what has happened. Added to which I understand that you told Miss Page you did not need her if she wouldn't accept the attentions of men obnoxious to her. Well, I'm a lawyer and I'll look after their interests. You can send your attorney to me at any time.'

"So we got away and went home—jobless but happy. Of course when we told them at home Mrs. Page said Mary must give up her stage career, but she was too spunky for that.

"She said no, that the mistake she'd made was in getting a chorus job, and that if I was willing we might try for some small road company and work our way up in the 'drama'. I would have followed Mary any place, so I said I was on, and we even talked Mr. Langdon down before he left."

"That is all, thank you, Miss Barton," said Langdon with a smile as she finished, and Amy, looking around bewildered, asked the judge confidentially:

"What do I do now, your Honor?"

"You answer a few questions for me," said the prosecutor with a honeyed sweetness. "Miss Barton, you are a very good actress, are you not?"

"Go ask my press agent!" she answered pertly; and he flushed.

"Well, at any rate you can be very convincing in saying things—let's call it reciting lines—that have nothing to do with events that really happened, can't you? Especially in a sympathetic role?"

"If you're trying to put anything across," she said slowly, "you've come to the wrong shop. I took the oath and I don't swear to tell the truth and then lie. I'm an actress, not a lawyer."

A burst of laughter swept the room, and the judge's gavel came down sharply, though the corners of his mouth twitched as he said to Amy:

"You must confine your remarks to answering the questions put you, Miss Barton."

"I am," she replied imperturbably, and the prosecutor flushed as he asked sharply:

"Isn't it true that you said you would do anything in the world to save Mary Page?"

"Isn't it true that you're doing everything in the world to ruin her?"

"That is not answering my question," roared the prosecutor. "This is contempt of court—you have sworn to tell the truth—tell it."

"Tell it to a policeman!" scoffed Amy. "I have told the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and there isn't any more to tell, unless you'll let me tell you what poor business I think you have for your part of the show."

"Silence!" roared the judge and the prosecutor in unison, and now Amy, looking up at his Honor, smiled and brought into view a dimple, as she said quietly.

"I do not wish an unwilling guest."

"Your Honor, I don't mind answering questions, but I'm so used to being hollered at in rehearsals that the usual line of chatter just slips out."

Again a gale of laughter swept the room, and the prosecutor, realizing that the pertness of the actress was a shield behind which he could not penetrate, and feeling that her testimony was after all unimportant, dismissed her with a shrug.

At her glad, "Oh, can I go?" the laughter broke out afresh; but it died away when she ran straight to Mary's side, and before the bailiff or Langdon could stop her, had leaned over and impulsively kissed her cheek.

"You darling!" she cried, and suddenly burst into tears—the genuine childish sobs of one whose heart is overflowing with pity. When she was led back to the witness-room she was no longer an obscure little actress—she was famous. For the time at least she even overshadowed Mary—so much does the old world love those who laugh and yet have tender hearts beneath the gaiety.

NEW BUSINESS COLLEGE ENROLLMENT GROWING

Inquiries From Outlying Sections Indicate That Classes Will be filled When School Closes.

Inquiries concerning scholarships in the newly opened Thief River Falls business college are daily being received by the president, G. M. Langum. The enrollment to date has not been large, the time being very near the closing of the school term when the young men and women who might be expected to enroll for an advanced course are busy with the work incident to examinations. Mr. Langum has been assured, however, that as soon as the commencement exercises are concluded there will be a number who will put in the summer at the college.

Many inquiries come from teachers in the rural schools outside of Thief River Falls. These as a general thing want a complete course of bookkeeping, shorthand and stenography. The young men also go in for banking, accounting and general office supervision in addition to the above. Thus far the greatest interest has been shown by people living in the outside districts, but Mr. Langum says that is explained to a great extent by the fact that those living in town and contemplating taking any of the courses open, do not deem it necessary to give any notice of their intention until they are ready to start. Those living where a personal visit is not so convenient, on the other hand, always send in requests for information early in the season.

The college quarters in the library building are well adapted to the requirements of the students, and Mr. Langum invites parents and others interested in the work to come in at any time and look them over.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

Some of the schools are now closing their work and the term reports begin to arrive at the office of the superintendent. The work for the last term has been strenous, both for the pupils and teachers. On the whole we must say that it has been well performed. Of course the attendance might have been better, but under the existing weather conditions the pupils have done well. An excerpt from one report will show how a few day's absence on the part of a few scholars may effect school apportionment for a district. In a school where 26 pupils was enrolled one scholar was lacking 9½ days of the 40 days required to draw apportionment; one 8 days, one 7 days, one 4 days and two 3 days. Because of this deficiency in attendance the district losses, according to last year's rate, $34.80. It may mean $36.00 loss for this year.

How can we improve upon school attendance?

The state high school examination will be held May 26, 29, 31 and June 1, in high, graded and rural schools.

Teachers should send in to this office their requisition for questions. A list of the names of scholars, age, number and address of pupils should accompany the requests.

The result of the March examinations are not yet reported.

This office acknowledges a pleasant call from Mrs. Baker, assistant to T. A. Erickson of the university extension department on the 20th. Mrs. Baker is a very enthusiastic worker, and has charge of the domestic science department and canning demonstration conducted in conjunction with the U. S. department of agriculture. Mrs. Baker expressed praise of the efficient work now being done by the agricultural department of the city high school, by Superintendent Hay and Prof. Werner. These gentlemen have visited a numbr of rural schools and have reports of the organization of a number of contests of different kinds wherein great interest in manifested by the boys and girls. Next fall we will have a special exhibition.

Summer school for teachers will open at the Northwestern Agricultural college at Crookston on or about June 12. Teachers living in view of the renewal of their certificates should not fail to write Supt. C. E. Selvig, Crookston, for the announcements. Persons aiming to teach should not fail to attend the Summer schools. Knowledge of methods and normal training are essentials that every person should possess, who intends entering the profession of teaching. Hence, every teacher must train herself for the work. Be prepared to take a course at the agricultural college this summer.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF HEARING ON PETITION IN DITCH PROCEEDINGS.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)ss.
County of Pennington,)

In the Matter of the Petition of H. G. Borden and Others, for a Public Ditch in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, Designated and numbered as County Ditch No. 64.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That a petition has been filed in the office of the County Auditor of said County, praying for the construction of a public ditch, designated and numbered by the County Auditor of such County as County Ditch No. 64 beginning at point, one hundred (100) feet south and Twenty-two (22) feet west of the Quarter Corner between sections Seven (7) and Eight (8) in Township One Hundred and Fifty-four (154) North of Range Forty-three (43) West. NEW BUSINESS COLLEGE ENROLLMENT GROWING

Inquiries From Outlying Sections Indicate That Classes Will be filled When School Closes.

Inquiries concerning scholarships in the newly opened Thief River Falls business college are daily being received by the president, G. M. Langum. The enrollment to date has not been large, the time being very near the closing of the school term when the young men and women who might be expected to enroll for an advanced course are busy with the work incident to examinations. Mr. Langum has been assured, however, that as soon as the commencement exercises are concluded there will be a number who will put in the summer at the college.

Many inquiries come from teachers in the rural schools outside of Thief River Falls. These as a general thing want a complete course of bookkeeping, shorthand and stenography. The young men also go in for banking, accounting and general office supervision in addition to the above. Thus far the greatest interest has been shown by people living in the outside districts, but Mr. Langum says that is explained to a great extent by the fact that those living in town and contemplating taking any of the courses open, do not deem it necessary to give any notice of their intention until they are ready to start. Those living where a personal visit is not so convenient, on the other hand, always send in requests for information early in the season.

The college quarters in the library building are well adapted to the requirements of the students, and Mr. Langum invites parents and others interested in the work to come in at any time and look them over.

RURAL SCHOOL NOTES

Some of the schools are now closing their work and the term reports begin to arrive at the office of the superintendent. The work for the last term has been strenuous, both for the pupils and teachers. On the whole we must say that it has been well performed. Of course the attendance might have been better, but under the existing weather conditions the pupils have done well. An excerpt from one report will show how a few day's absence on the part of a few scholars may effect school apportionment for a district. In a school where 26 pupils was enrolled one scholar was lacking 9½ days of the 40 days required to draw apportionment; one 8 days, one 7 days, one 4 days and two 3 days. Because of this deficiency in attendance the district losses, according to last year's rate, $34.80. It may mean $36.00 loss for this year.

How can we improve upon school attendance?

The state high school examination will be held May 26, 29, 31 and June 1, in high, graded and rural schools.

Teachers should send in to this office their requisition for questions. A list of the names of scholars, age, number and address of pupils should accompany the requests.

The result of the March examinations are not yet reported.

This office acknowledges a pleasant call from Mrs. Baker, assistant to T. A. Erickson of the university extension department on the 20th. Mrs. Baker is a very enthusiastic worker, and has charge of the domestic science department and canning demonstration conducted in conjunction with the U. S. department of agriculture. Mrs. Baker expressed praise of the efficient work now being done by the agricultural department of the city high school, by Superintendent Hay and Prof. Werner. These gentlemen have visited a numbr of rural schools and have reports of the organization of a number of contests of different kinds wherein great interest in manifested by the boys and girls. Next fall we will have a special exhibition.

Summer school for teachers will open at the Northwestern Agricultural college at Crookston on or about June 12. Teachers living in view of the renewal of their certificates should not fail to write Supt. C. E. Selvig, Crookston, for the announcements. Persons aiming to teach should not fail to attend the Summer schools. Knowledge of methods and normal training are essentials that every person should possess, who intends entering the profession of teaching. Hence, every teacher must train herself for the work. Be prepared to take a course at the agricultural college this summer.

Mrs. Saddler.

Mrs. Saddler, widow, age 65, who has been an inmate of the poor house for some time, died last Thursday, death being due to nephritis. Funeral services were held last Saturday and the remains were interred in Greenwood cemetery.

THE "FLYING SWITCH"

Newslets of the Divison Point Combed Out With The Teeth of Interrogation.

To Minneapolis.—Claim Agent E. H. Taylor left Friday for Minneapolis, accompanying his family to that place, they having spent the day in River Falls visiting.

Sunday in Minneapolis.— Mortz Brink, telegraph operator at the Soo Line offices, passed Saturday and Sunday in Minneapolis and St. Paul, where he was the guest of friends.

Le Dou Returns.—Soo Line Conductor G. E. Le Dou, who was called to his home at Dillworth, Minn., a short time ago on account of illness in his family, returned to duty the latter part of last week.

Winters Makes Call.—W. Winters, traveling expressman for the Soo line with offices in Minneapolis, was a caller in Thief River Falls the latter part of last week, paying the local office an official call.

Returns From Business Trip.—J. W. Hendry, assistant master mechanic at the Soo round house, returned last Friday morning from Grand Forks, where he had made a brief call attending to business matters.

Easter At Forks.—R. T. Lindahl, accountant at the Soo offices, passed Saturday and Easter Sunday at Grand Forks, where he was the guest of friends and relatives. He left on Friday afternoon and returned early Monday morning.

Inspector Ill.—Car Inspector Jarslin, at the Soo yards, was unable to attend to his duties the latter part of last week on account of illness. Some of his railroad friends say it was the spring fever, but Jarslin has a record of always being on the job.

Barnard on Trip.—Superintendent W. A. Barnard, of the Soo Line Winnipeg division with offices on the second floor of the depot, had his private car attached to the Wheatline local Friday evening, after spending the day at different points along the line on official business.

Coal Shipment.—A consignment of soft coal is being unloaded at the Soo coal chute this week, being shipped to this city from the docks at Superior, Wisconsin. The coal was brought here in iron ore cars, which are used on the iron range in mining camps. All this coal is used in coaling departing trains.

Stock Train.—The usual train of stock left Thief River Falls bound for South St. Paul last Saturday afternoon, and carried a trifle more in the number of cars than the regular shipment. Several cars were shipped from this city while the balance of the train was made up of cars coming in from the west and north.

Lacey Returns.—Edward Lacey, Soo Line brakeman, returned the latter part of last week from Henderson, where he had attended the funeral of John Henter, who formerly resided near this city. Mr. Lacey made the trip as representative from the local K. C. and C. O. F. fraternal orders of which Mr. Henter was once a member.

Washout.—Owing to a washout on the C. P. R. at Willmar, Manitoba, causing unavoidable delay, Soo flyer, No. 110, due in Thief River Falls at 10:00 p. m. was delayed 5 hours and 15 minutes on Sunday evening of last week. This is the latest this train has been in many months—we might say years. The Soo is certainly to be congratulated on their Twin City—Winnipeg service, which stands out as service par excellence.

Rowan's To Leave.—T. J. Rowan, day train dispatcher at the Soo offices, occupying first trick, who has made this city his home for a few years while in the Soo's employ, will leave July 1 for Minneapolis to occupy a position in the company's office at that place. Mrs. Rowan left the fore part of the week for Brooks, where she will spend some time visiting with her parents, and will later go to Minneapolis to await Mr. Rowan's arrival in July. They have resided in the Union block on Third street and have already broken up housekeeping in this city.

Pile Driver Taken Back.—The Soo Line pile driver and bridge crew returned to Thief River Falls last Saturday afternoon after spending a week in the vicinity of Eglund, Bromo and Bisbee, N. D., where several bridges were damaged by the spring flood. At Bisbee the bridge was completely washed away, passengers and baggage being transferred across the stream by boats and taken aboard a waiting train on the other side. At Oslo conditions have been very serious. All available cinders from this place have been shipped to that city to be used along the tracks where parts have been washed out. Last Saturday reports reached here that the sidewalks in the business section of the town were just emerging from the water. The pile driver will be kept here for a short time, after which it will be taken to Shoreham.

Brief Vacation.— Conductor Jerry McCarty, who officiates on a freight run between Thief River Falls and Adams, N. D., spent Saturday and Sunday in the city. Conductor Dillon filled McCarty's position on Saturday.

Lind Returns.—Sam E. Lind, machinist, at the Soo round house, retunred the first of the week from Duluth, Minneapolis and points in Indiana, where he had been on a brief trip.

Sunday in The City.—Morris Robbecke, employed by the Soo Line at Adams, N. D., in the freight house, arrived in Thief River Falls last Saturday evening to spend Easter Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. A. Robbecke, 237, Kendall avenue north. He returned to Adams Monday.

Wrecker To Plummer.—A message from Plummer stating that several cars had left the track on the main line sent the wrecker, stationed at the Soo yards, to that village Satur-afternoon. The work of restoring the cars to their proper places was completed in short order when the wrecker arrived, thereby preventing a delay of the evening trains.

Work Trains to Start.— Henry Hoium, yard clerk for the Soo, stated Saturday that within a few weeks several work trains would commence operation along the different lines running out of this city. These trains are used to haul gravel, cinders, ties and other material used in repairing the tracks and road bed. Besides augmenting the already large traffic at this division point, it will also give employment to many men.

Flower Gardens.—The yard around the Soo round house will be adorned with something more beautiful and pleasing to the eye this summer than heretofore. Several employees at the yards last week began the making of circular flower beds which will be located at different spots. One of the green spots will be placed near Car Foreman Conklin's office, one near Master-Mechanic J. W. Hendry's office and the third outside of day round house foreman Greenseth's sanctum.

To St. Paul.—DeWitt Nason, Soo Line brakeman, left Monday evening on 110 for St. Paul to spend a few days on a pleasure and business trip.

LeDou On Trip.—Soo Line Conductor George LeDou departed Monday night for the Twin Cities, to spend the fore part of the week attending to business matters.

Will To Alexandria.—Fred Will, Soo Line engineer, left for Alexandria, Minn., Monday night to attend the funeral of Mrs. Will's father, whose death occured on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Will returned Wednesday morning.

"Safety First" Meeting.—A regular meeting of the "Safety First" society was held Monday evening on the second floor of the Soo depot, Trainmaster Keene presiding. It was well attended and many subjects were brought up for discussion. The next meeting of the society will be held May 1, and is known as the division meeting. Representatives from Glenwood, Nayes, Kenmare, N. D., and Thief River Falls will be present..

Resumes Duties.— Oscar Paulson began work at the freight warehouse Monday, April 24, after a brief vacation.

Line Changes.—T. M. Stretchex, who relieved Mortz Brink, telegraph operator at the Soo offices, during his visit in Minneapolis over Saturday and Sunday, was checked in today at Detroit as day telegraph operator and ticket cashier. Stretch relieves G. B. Evenvold at Detroit and Evenvold relieves L. M. Schulte, night operator at Detroit, who now goes to Mahnomen as second trick man, vice A. G. Ellingboe, who has been granted a leave of absence.

Track In Danger.— The country around Iron Hub and Cedar lake resembles one big lake and the water today is even with the ties and the Soo Line near Cedar Creek. The Mississippi river is backing the water up this creek and only last night the water raised two and one half inches. A crew of men are on the job night and day. Six hundred sacks of gravel and sand were sent down to Moose Lake to be used in protecting the road bed. If the snow and rain continue much longer the road will be in grave danger of being washed away. Deerwood Times for April 21.

Sunday in Minneapolis.—S. E. Culbertson, Soo Line brakeman running out of Thief River Falls, left last Saturday evening on 110 for Minneapolis, where he spent Easter Sunday as the guest of his brother. He returned early Monday morning.

Hicks Makes Call.—Chief Special Agent Oscar Hicks, with offices in Minneapolis, spent a few hours in Thief River Falls Tuesday evening on an official business visit. He arrived early in the evening over the Wheat line and departed on 110 for the Twin cities.

Snowplow to Shoreham.— Railroaders in Thief River Falls feel sure that spring has come for sure for the reason that one of the rotaries, which has been kept at the Soo round house for the past month, was taken to Shoreham shops Tuesday evening. There is, however, one more of the machines kept at the round house.

Raise For Overtime.— Machinist helpers at the Soo round house have been granted time and a half for all over time. Recently the Soo Line raised the wages of all section employees from $1.50 to $1.75 per day.

Holding "Exams."—Charles Stabler, traveling engineer for the Soo line, arrived Monday from Duluth to hold a series of examinations for firemen, who have been in the service three years, to be advanced to the position as engineers. Firemen, who have been on the road for eighteen months, are also being quizzed. The examinations are being held at the round house, where a room has been arranged. Mr. Stabler expects to remain here for three weeks. About 30 firemen "students" are "enrolled" in his class.

Another Candidate.

Thomas Frankson of St. Paul, candidate for the nomination for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket, was in the city on Monday. He called upon a number of prominent people in the interests of his candidacy, but his stay was too short to enable him to make any extended visits.

Thus far there seems to be more interest taken in the lieutenant govership than in any office to be filled at the fall elections. Mr. Frankson is the second aspirant for this place to visit Thief River Falls this week, Dr. Gates having preceded him by a day.

Who Raised This Cabbage?

Cabbages large enough to hide a calf grown from seeds distributed by the department of agriculture, said Representative Steenerson, in the house this week.

"I had a letter from one of my constituents last fall thanking me for the seeds I sent him," said Steenerson. "He said he lost a calf. He hunted all over the place and finally discovered the calf hidden behind a cabbage grown from government seed."

Mr. Steenerson used this letter as an argument for the continued free distribution of seeds through members of congress.

COMMERCIAL CLUB NOTES

Coming Events.

Executive meeting May 2, 8 p. m.
Annual club dinner, May 3 at 6:15. p. m.
Woman's Federation meets in club rooms May 4-5.
Regular club meeting May 11, at 8 p. m.
Bankers Convention May 16.
Executive meeting, May 31, 8 p. m.
Regular club meeting May 11 8p.m p. m.
Executive meeting May 31, 8 p. m.

May will be a busy month in commercial club circles. In addition to the regular meetings of the club and the executive committee, special committees will be meeting to plan their work and a number of activities requiring numerous meetings will take up the attention of the members.

Chairman J. H. McKinney of the Good Roads committee, is planning upon actual work on the roads this year and already plans have been made to bring about results. There has been too much talk and too little work in the past and the committee seems to think that "The way to resume is to resume" and will act accordingly.

There are a few chronic dispeptics in every town and Thief River Falls is no exception. There is but one thing to do; keep out in the sunshine and boost for a better town. It will tell in the long run and eventually Gloomy Gus will find himself in lonesome company. Try it.

Reports of committees will be a feature of every regular club meeting in the future. Members are urged to attend these meetings and keep in closer touch with clubwork.

The secretary has been furnished some fine views of farm scenes in the vicinity of Thif River Falls by the Thief River Valley Land company. These will eventually be used in booklets issued by the state Immigration Board and afford some desirable publicity for this section of the state.

Letters relative to land values and homestead possibilities in this section of the state are being received by the secretary and are available to all members of the commercial club. Land men are invited to call and look them over. Literature is promptly mailed each person making inquiry and a supplimentary letter follows, setting forth some of the advantages of this locality as a farm center.

The business like appearance of the club rooms and offices has been freely commented on by visitors. The changes in the office are especially noticeable and a great improvement.

The new quarter begins May first and also marks the beginning of a new year in club history since the business men engaged a paid secretary and opened quarters in the Citizens bank building. The rooms have been engaged for another year and club activities outlined on ascale calculated to bring substantial results for the benefit of the city and community.

TWO-SESSION PLAN IS PROVING SATISFACTORY

Innovation at Washington School Pleases Everyone and May be Further Extended.

The system of holding two classes in the same room innaugurated at the Washington building when school opened last week, is proving very satisfactory. The work heretofore done in two separate rooms in the basement of the building has now been co-related with that in the five rooms on the second floor. The first classes are called at 8:30 in the morning and continue until noon. They are then dismissed for the day and another set of classes begin work at 12:45. These are dismissed at 4:30, thus giving each division two and three-quarter hours in the class room instead of three hours as heretofore.

This lost quarter-hour may, however, be made up by any pupil who requires the extra instruction. The teachers of the forenoon classes have made provisions for meeting with the pupils in the afternoon and giving them any assistance which may be required. As far as the idea has been carried out it has worked satisfactorily. The crowded condition of the school has been very much relieved and it is likely that the plan will be extended until it takes care of all overflow, and thus make the erection of a new building unnecesary at this time.

FIRST OF WEEK WILL FIND FARMERS SEEDING

Soil in Excellent Shape For Crops and Spring Work Retarded But Slightly.

Seeding in this section of northwestern Minnesota will this spring be begun a little later than in 1915, but better conditions prevail than at that time. Farmers generally had begun their spring work about the first of April a year ago, but the unfavorable weather during the following month prevented much progress being made by the seed. This year everything points to a continued period of good germinating and growing weather, so that in spite of the earlier start of 1915 this season's crop has fully as good a chance.

A week or two in the spring is not of such serious consequence to small grain, while corn will not be planted for some time yet anyway. A good growing summer is far more important than early spring seeding. This was demonstrated last year when the grain had made but little progress before the 1 of June while the harvest was one of the best in years.

Harrows have been busy all week and if the weather continues the seeders will be in operation all over the vally by Monday morning.

eat off the toes, tapes that stick to the stocking, bandages and plasters that make a package of the toes, trying blood-bringing razors and scissors. Then I tried 'Gets-It' just once and you ought to have seen that corn come off—just like a banana peel." It's simple, wonderful. It's the new way, painless, applied in two seconds, never hurts healthy flesh or irritates. Nothing to press on the corn. Never fails. Quit the old ways for once anyway and try "Gets-It" tonight. For corns, calluses, warts and bunions.

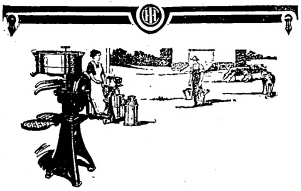
Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.



At Last--A One-Adjustment Cream Separator

BEFORE you buy any cream separator, come in and look at the Primrose. But one adjustment is needed to keep it in perfect operating condition. This adjustment is a simple one for keeping the bowl at the correct height—an adjustment that you or your wife can safely make.

The adjustment is made from the outside of the separator by either raising or lowering the bearing containing the hardened steel point, upon which the spindle revolves. A slight turn with a screwdriver, perhaps once a year, does the work.

The Primrose is a well-constructed, close-skimming, durable cream separator, one it will pay you well to buy. When can you arrange to see it?

St. Hilaire News

Former Resident Dead.

Ole Guttormson, who has made his home for the past few years at Cando, N. Dak., passed away at his home last week. The remains were shipped here Thursday for burial. Funeral services were held in the Scandinavian Mission church by Rev. J. Wilson. Mr. Guttormsen is remembered by all the old residents of this village as he and his family were pioneer settlers in this community. The sympathy of their numerous friends is extended to the family of the deceased.

Medicine Show in Town.

The Waring medicine show has leased the Imperial hall for the entire week. Monday and Tuesday free shows were given which were very good. On Monday evening tickets were given out with every package of medicine sold and the holders of same received handsome gifts on Tuesday evening. Prizes were also given Monday evening to the eldest lady and gentleman in the hall; Mrs. John Peterson and Mr. A. Hall receiving the honors which consisted of a package of Quaker Oil wrapped in a one dollar bill.

Foot Bridge Over Race.

Owing to the former race being impassable since the rush of ice this spring, a new foot bridge had to be erected over the new aparture to enable the people on that side of the river to go to and from town. It has also been used extensively by people on this side of the river, who have been anxious to view the remains of the lower dam.

South Bridge Damaged.

On Monday the west approach of the south bridge was washed almost completely away but was temporarily repaired on Tuesday. This temporary arrangement will suffice until the abatement of high water. This was a very unexpected misfortune and will be an added expense to the village this year.

How Many Miles

Are There In A Gallon Of Gasoline?

WHEN you buy a Buick six cylinder, valve-in-head motor car you not only get the last word in comfort, style, power and speed, but we guarantee that you get an automobile which will give you the highest gasoline mileage.

It is an admitted fact that the valve-in-head motor does give 15 per cent more power than any other type of gasoline motor which means 15 per cent more mileage per gallon of gasoline.

This is not a theory but a fixed engineering principal resulting from the perfecting of the Buick valve-in-head motor.

Thousands of users of Buick valve-in-head six cylinder cars give evidence daily that they are getting 20 miles an hour or more per gallon of gasoline consumed while touring with full passenger load and many users report over 25 miles per gallon.

The Proven Economy of the Buick Valve-In-Head Car Should Make it Your Preference.

GINING CONCERN WANTS LOCATION

SITUATION IS UNEXCELLED

Would Be Necessary to Have Assurances That Farmers Would Grew Flax in Sufficient Quantities Before Deciding Definitely.

Thief River Falls is the city most highly favored for the location of one of the plants to be erected by the International Gining company in the near future. This is a company recently organized at St. Paul for the purpose of separating flax fibre from the straw.

Asa G. Briggs of St. Paul, president of the company, in a letter to Daniel Shaw of this city, says that the location here is ideal so far as concerns soil, climate and transportation facilities. The only question to be decided is whether or not the farmers in the territory adjacent will grow flax in quantities sufficient to warrant the erection of the factories, and whether the people of the city are sufficiently interested in the plants to assist in their establishment.

Three plants are to be established by the company in the immediate future, and J. S. Murphy of the Soo railroad has interested himself in securing one of them for Thief River Falls. The extent of the investment necessary, the number of men employed and the amount of the raw material required has not been definitely ascertained, but the Commercial club has taken up this phase of the matter with President Briggs and full information will no doubt be forthcoming within a short time.

The establishment of a factory of this kind in Thief River Falls would prove one of the most important events in the city's history. It would not only mean the employment of a large force in the gining plant itself, but would provide a home market for one of the section's foremost agricultural staples. The high commercial standing of the International is attested to by the names appearing upon its directorate. Besides Mr. Briggs this includes N. M. Thygeson, John Everall, Charles H. Weyl and Monte F. Appel. The fact that Mr. Murphy of the Soo railroad, has interested himself in securing the plant for Thief River Falls should also prove that the project is one of high merit and great possibilities.

WILL PLANT TWENTY ACRES OF POTATOES

Middle River Farmer Figures Spuds Will Prove Particularly Valuable Crop This Year.

At the present time every indication is going to prove that potatoes will be one of the best paying crops of the coming summer. This tip should be of the greatest value to the farmers of northern Minnesota, as these will be called upon to supply a far greater share than ever before. Potato states, such as New York and Maine, will be handicapped by the inability of their farmers to secure the potash necessary for the fertilization of their fields, and this shortage must be made good largely by the Minnesota and Montana product.

Many farmers in this northwestern section are paying more attention to potatoes this year than ever before. Some of them will devote the greater part of their attention to the growing of this crop, and expect the venture to prove most profitable. Two such farmers, L. Ness and J. C. Nordlund of Middle River, were in Thief River Falls on Saturday. The first-named will put in 20 acres of tubers and has secured the necessary planters, cultivators and diggers to make a thorough job of the venture. Mr. Nordlum also will devote considerable of his acreage to this crop. These gentlemen are among the most progressive men of a decidedly progressive community, and their experiment will be watched with much interest.

LOCAL ARCHITECT GETS SCHOOL AT BADGER

Work on Roseau Bank Building To Be Practically all Done by Local Men.

Mr. Lutz has been notified that he has been awarded the contract for the architectural work on the new grade and consolidated school at Badger. The plans were selected from a large number submitted in competition by some of the foremost architects in this state, his work winning praise from S. A. Chalman of Minneapolis, state school commissioner. The specifications for this building call for one of the best equipped and most modern consolidated schools thus far constructed in this section. In view of the fact that Mr. Lutz secured this contract in competition with prominent architects from all parts of the state, his friends are convinced that he is competent to handle any and all school building work.

Thief River Falls firms have been awarded the contracts for the greater part of the work to be done on the new Roseau State bank building. This will be a two-story structure, built of brick and containing all the latest improvements in the line of heating, plumbing and lighting. All of the work with the exception of the moveable furniture and fixtures has been let, and actual construction will commence at once.

H. Rustad, of this city, was awarded the general contract, his bid being $11,088, Holt & George secured the heating and plumbing, their bid on the first named item being $1,829, while the plumbing is to cost $702.

The electrical work and wiring went to Michel & Neurauter, also of Thief River Falls, whose bid for the work was $118. The only contract not going to firms from this city was that of painting and varnishing, this work going to a Roseau concern for $195. Joseph C. Lutz of Thief River Falls, is the architect.

GAS COMPANY WILL SUBMIT PROPOSAL

Minneapolis Concern Will Ask Franchise Granting Right to Use Streets For Mains.

It may be doubted whether the people of Thief River Falls gave any serious consideration to the rumor that a gas company was desirous of securing a franchise permitting the use of the city streets for the laying of mains. A letter received by City Clerk A. H. Fasel from E. E. Collins, president of the Gas and Electric Construction company of Minneapolis, however, would indicate that such move is seriously contemplated. Mr. Collins states that a man will be here to look the situation over in a day or two, that the company will have a proposition to submit to the city council at its meeting on May 9, and that he is certain satisfactory arrangements can be made when the project is thoroughly understood.

This company is placing gas plants in many cities the size of Thief River Falls throughout the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. While as yet no intimation has been reseived as to the conditions under which these plants are established, it is certain that such institution would receive the strong endorsement and support of the people here. Gas has in most cases been found not only convenient but has proven a great saving when employed either as fuel, light or for the purpose of furnishing power. It is altogether likely that the council will be more than willing to listen to any proposition looking toward the establishment of a plant here, provided assurances can be given by the projectors that the price will not prohibit its general use.

GAS FLOW STRUCK IN DRILLING WELL

Supply Continues Strong for 18 hours After Which It Gradually Diminishes.

Well drillers have for a long time been aware that natural gas existed in the strata underlying the region hereabouts. On a number of occasions they have struck what they termed pockets of the gas, but no attempt has ever been made to ascertain the extent of these.

The latest and most important discovery of this kind was made on Tuesday morning by the men employed in drilling a well on the Knox farm north of town. They were down to a depth of 94 feet when they were greeted with a gush of natural gas which completely filled the five-inch pipe. The men set fire to the substance and it burned fiercely, throwing the flames half the height of the derrick. The workmen continued to light and extinguish the stuff for about 18 hours before the supply showed signs of giving out. The gas could be smelled for a long distance from the scene of the drilling, and there is no doubt but that a considerable quanity escaped.

The discovery has created much interest in the city. While it has been generally known that such gas existed far below the surface, this is the strongest flow yet reported. The water in the city wells is strongly impregnated with the stuff, and many people believe that drilling to a sufficient depth might discover a supply sufficiently great to be of some value.

POLICE DRAGNET LANDS 13 ON BOOTLEGGING CHARGE

Detectives Operating in Thief River Falls During Month Manage to Secure Evidence That Brings Lid-Tilters Up Short.

WORKED WITH CITY AND COUNTY OFFICERS

Most of Parties Captured Are Supposed to Have Been Merely Go-Betweens, But Their Testimony Will be Necessary if the Men Higher Up Are to Be Brought to Justice.

It has been a matter of general knowledge that the county option laws of the state have been violated in a more or less flagrant manner since the town went on the dry list last winter, but what was not so generally known was that the authorities had a very complete and positive line on the entire proceedings and were quietly securing first-hand evidence in order to set about remedying matters. They figured that it would be a wasteful process to gather in an occasional bottle toter and fine him, when a general cleaning up was the only thing that would properly meet the requirements.

Detectives on The Job.

Exactly one month ago today two dectectives arrived in the city. They came upon the request of Mayor F. H. Gambell and were placed in direct charge of County Attorney H. O. Kjomme. Under the guise of traveling photographers they gained access to a large number of premises, paying particular attention to those under suspicion. Their work was laid out for them by Chief of Police O. E. Berge, who had the law-defying click under observation for some time, but found it hard to secure the direct evidence because of the fact that the suspects were well acquainted and always managed to elude any effort to catch them in any dircet violation. So well were the haunts of the blindpiggers known, however, that among those arrested there are only two parties of whom the chief did not inform the detectives.

Right Over The Bar.

In the guise of photographers, J. F. Delaney and W. G. Bell, representing a Twin City detective agency, would come to the "How Dry I Am" act, and ask if it were not possible for a trustworthy, and perfectly sober man to secure a little drink in this desert community. It is stated that they had no trouble whatever. In some cases the liquor was disguised as ginger ale, while in others it was not thought necessary to disguise the stuff at all. In certain instances young men were sent out after a bottle, the young men aforesaid evidently having no trouble in finding the desired liquor. These messengers were all arrested. They are technically guilty of bootlegging even though they secured the booze simply to be a good fellow and did not in any way profit by the transaction. The authorities figure that by holding them they will be able to arrive at the real source of supply in each instance.

Those Who Were Caught.

Thirteen complaints were filed by the detectives. The arrests were made without any trouble, and in each case examination was waived. Municipal Judge N. W. Tarrant bound the entire lot over to the grand jury which meets in June, demanding bonds in the sum of $200 in each case. This was furnished by friends of the accused men and they are all at liberty. The accused are: Tallack Froisness, James F. Farr, Hans Angel, G. H. Gaslin, Peter Hanson, Howard Gesell, Harold Provencher, Tom Snell, Ed. Davis, Oscar Iverson, Ralph Bennett, George Larson, Martin Strom.

Should Break Up Practice.

The arrival of the detectives was known to but few people, and these certainly kept the matter very quiet. It is doubtful if the detectives were even suspected by their quarry until after these had been placed under arrest.

While this must be considered a rather sizeable haul, it is small compared with those of some of the other cities in dry territory. It seems as if every community must go through a cleaning up process before certain of its citizens will be convinced that liquor selling is prohibited within its borders. The activity of the authorities in thus giving decisive warning to the effect that nothing of the kind will be tolerated should put a damper on the ambitions of those who might consider bootlegging a sure and safe way of getting rich. The mayor, chief of police and county attorney are to be commended for the thorough manner in which the work has been done, and it is not likely that another such shake-up will be found necessary.

OWNERSHIP CHANGE IN CLOTHING STORE

T. L. Reedy Sells Business Interests to E. O. Mogensen, Formerly of Minneapolis.

A deal was consummated on Tuesday whereby E. O. Mogensen becomes the owner of the interest of T. L. Reedy in the clothing business conducted in this city by the latter gentleman and Hans Jerdee under the firm name of Jerdee & Reedy.

This concern started in business in Thief River Falls in March, 1915, opening in their present quarters at the corner of Main avenue and Third street. Their practical experience in the clothing line in the larger cities, their square dealing and the unexcelled line of goods handled at all times by the firm at once gave them an excellent standing, and the store has enjoyed a large share of the section's trade in its line.

Mr. Mogensen, who becomes the partner of Mr. Jerdee by the change of ownership, has handled men's and boys' wearing apparel both in stores and on the road as salesman for many years. He has for a long time been connected with the F. W. Stevenson company of Minneapolis, manufacturing outfitters, and bears the highest reputation among men in the trade. Mr. Mogensen will arrive about June 1 with his family and will devote his entire time to the store here. He will find a well-established business into which to step, and a partner who enjoyes in a marked degree the confidence of the people.

While it is understood that Mr. Reedy has decided to leave the city, he has not definitely decided upon his course for the future. He is a sterling business man, however, and will have no difficulty in finding a desirable location.

SMITH APPOINTED TO ASSISTANT JUDGESHIP

Governor Burnquist Selects Him to Act in Absence of Regular Bench Occupant.

G. Howard Smith, the well-known local attorney, has been appointed assistant municipal judge by Gov. Burnquist. Newton Forder was chosen for this position at the last election, but never qualified. The appointment will hold only until the next general election, when a judge will be chosen for the full four-year term.

The new judge is one of the younger members of the local bar, a lawyer of good standing, address and repute. He has always taken a keen interest in athletics and is thus lacking somewhat in the rotundity usually associated with the judicial temperment. However, Municipal Judge N. W. Tarrant makes up in this regard for what his associate lacks, and the team will strike an excellent balance in every way.

Judge Smith will preside at such times as the regularly elected incumbent is absent or when for any other reason the latter is unable to attend to the duties of the office.

SANITORIUM BOARD WILL SELECT SITE

The Sanitorium board appointed by the counties of Pennington, Marshall and Roseau for the purpose of selecting a site and looking after the preliminary work for the erection of a tri-county hospital are meeting in this city today for the purpose of selecting a location for the proposed institution.

The funds necessary for the construction of this hospital have been provided by the commissioners of the three counties and the genaral plan has been approved by the state board. Each county is to contribute a certain amount toward this enterprise and the state will then appropriate as much more.

Several sites have been under consideration by the Pennington members, but a definite selection will not be made until the entire board is present and approves of the location.

The board is composed of the following members: Pennington county: Dr. O. F. Mellby, Thief River Falls; A. C. Tvedt, Goodridge; K. O. Gigstad, St. Hilaire. Marshall county—Dr. Anderson, Warren; Jonas Sjoberg, Middle River. Roseau county—W. B. Gisleson, Badger; Louis Enstrom, Roseau. The fact of the hospital being located in Pennington intitles this county to three board members, while the other members of the sanitorium unit have but two.

BOY SCOUTS TROOP IS ORGANIZED HERE

Beaver Troop of Thief River Falls, Boy Scouts of America, has been organized with a charter membership of 30 volunteers. W. A. Reynolds had been selected as scoutmaster, and he has been ably assisted in the organization of the patrol by Mellvin D. Jerdee, whom by common consent has been selected as a sort of adjutant.

The boy scout movement is one which embraces the entire country and is an organization for training boys to become self-reliant and useful citizens. The idea is to spend as much time as possible in the open, engaged in such pursuits as will do the most toward teaching a boy to be helpful and observant. The idea was first introduced in England, where Gen. Baden-Powell was its sponsor, and has spread rapidly, particularly in the English-speaking countries.

Several of the boys of Beaver patrol have already secured their uniforms, and the balance will be supplied in a short time. The first outing of any note will be a trip up the river. The exact date for this has not been decided upon, but the start will be made shortly after school closes. On this trip the boys will camp out, do their own cooking and look after themselves generally. They will learn all they can about the country through which their travels take them, and expect to make the trip one of value as well as pleasure.

Following are the names of the members who joined the troop at the meeting held at the Auditorium on Saturday last: Mellvin D. Jerdee, Gordon LaBell, Stanton Dahlen, Earl Baker, Ted Prichard, Russell Anderson, Allen Fossum, Howard Sandum, Grant Gulrud, Barney Peterson, Francis McGinty, Herbert Johnson, John Melgaard, Clarence Knudson, Lynn Halvorson, Elnore Overland, Roy Flattium, Norman Dybvik, Henry Accistad, John Jacobson, Elmer Larson, Ernest Zeh, Eckhard Lane, Clarence Vever, Morris Mabey, John Bolstad, Milford LaBree, Kenneth Porter, Milden Boreen and Ruben Hadrath.

There will be another meeting of the troop on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the band room of the Auditorium. Any boy desirous of joining should apply to Mellvin Jerdee, or may apply in person at the meeting Sunday.

NETTING FISH IN RED RIVER PROVES COSTLY

Game Warden William Munch of Crookston was a visitor in Thief River Falls and surrounding country the first of the week and while here nabbed two law violators. Casper Wiener and Nels Bergren, both of Pennington county, appeared before Judge Tarrant Wednesday morning and each paid a fine of $13 for fishing with nets. Warden Munch found 3,000 feet of netting in their possession, which he promptly confiscated and destroyed. Mr. Munch said that 125,000 pike had been planted in Red Lake and Thief rivers last year and it was their desire to protect them against illegal means of fishing.

Given Thirty Days.

Albert Dahl was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail by Judge Tarrant yesterday morning. Albert had not only managed to get filled up with booze somewhere, but his behavior while under its influence was such that the judge expressed his regret over the fact that his court did not have power to impose a much more severe sentence.

SONS OF NORWAY WILL CELEBRATE

Decendents of Norsemen Will Commemorate Old Country's Day of Independence on May 17th.

ADDRESS BY PER STROMME

Dance And Refreshments Will Follow Program at Auditorium—Large Crowd From Other Towns Expected to Attend.

Norway's Independence day, the 17th of May, will be fittingly commemorated in Thief River Falls. The celebration will be given under the auspices of the Sons and Daughters of Norway, but people of every nationality are invited and expected to take part.

Per Stromme, editor of "Normanden," and one of the most widely known citizens of Norwegian birth in America, will deliver the address of the evening. Mr. Stromme, besides being a journalist whose articles are famous on two continents, is a poet of considerable distinction and a traveler who has at some time or other visited nearly every country in the civilized world, and many of those not so civilized. Although a Norwegian by birth, Mr. Stromme is an American of the highest patriotism and with the loftiest ideals. He is much sought as a speaker on occasions of this kind, and the Sons and Daughters of Norway lodges of this city are fortunate in securing him for an address on this occasion. H. C. Rowberg will act as chairman at this part of the evening's proceedings.

The Auditorium at Eight.

The program will be given at the Auditorium and will begin at eight o'clock sharp. It will be absolutely necessary to begin the meeting at this hour, as Mr. Stromme must leave again on the 10:10 train.

According to the schedule as now outlined, dancing will be begun immediately after the close of the program. The music will be furnished by Morck's orchestra of five pieces, and it is likely that an exhibition of numbers of old Norwegian dances will be a feature of this part of the evening.

Invitations have been extended to the people of nearby communities to join those at Thief River Falls in the celebration, and as this will likely be the only event of its kind in this section of the state, the response is expected to be unusually large.

Why They Celebrate.

The Norwegians had been under the Danish crown from the transfer of Calmar in 1397, until the powers of Europe consented to the transfer of the country to Prince Charles John (Carl Johan) of Sweden, as a reward for the aid extended by that country against Napoleon. The Norwegians refused to acknowledge the transfer as binding and at an assembly at Eidsvold, on May 17th, 1814, framed a constitution and elected the Danish prince, Christian Frederick, king of the country, vowing to stand together for their rights "until Dovre falls." The Swedish crown prince, however, easily drove the poorly equipped Norwegian army across the Glommen and captured the fortress of Fredikshald. He then opened negotiations which resulted in his abandoning all claim to the Norwegian crown, and the first storthing or parliament of the latter country unanimously elected the reigning Swedish king, Charles X111, their ruler, holding fast, however, to the Edisvold Constitution. In 1815 the Swedish Riksdag and Norwegian Storthing in conjunction drew up an Act of Union, under the provisions of which both countries were united under one crown, but each to maintain its full measure of independence. This union continued until 1905, when it was peaceably dissolved and Norway elected Prince Carl of Denmark as king under the title of Haakon V11.

The Committee.

The following committee has been appointed to have charge of the arrangements: T. P. Anderson, A. M. Langseth, H. Grindahl, H. C. Rowberg, John Anderson, Capt. Hovland, E. P. Burstad and E. K. Aasen.

JUDGES GRINDELAND AND WATTS ARE CANDIDATES

Judge Andrew Grindeland of Warren, and Judge William Watts of Crookston, have filed for renomination and election to the bench of the Fourteenth Judicial district. With the completion of his present term Judge Watts will have served on the bench eighteen years.

Judge Grindeland has served fourteen years, having been appointed the first time and re-elected twice since then.

WINTER MEETING TO BE HELD HERE

Red River Valley Dairymen Will Convene in Thief River Falls December 6 and 7.

DAIRY STOCK COMPETITION

Judging Contest Between Buttermakers and Dairymen For Additional Prizes Will Be New And Interesting Feature.

Thief River Falls has been selected by the Red River Valley Dairymen's association as the place for holding the annual winter convention. This decision was reached at a meeting of the directors at Crookston last Thursday afternoon. The association aims to have this meeting the biggest and best in its history, according to the Crookston Times from which paper the following report is taken:

At the conference there were present President C. G. Selvig, of Crookston, Secretary L. J. Hauske of Halstad, Vice President A. B. Stensgaard of McIntosh, and Treasurer C. M. Davidson of Climax. A spirit of enthusiasm was manifest which augurs well for the success of the Thief River Falls meeting.

One of the new features planned for this year is a dairy stock show at the convention, for which an additional $100 was appropriated to be used for prizes, thus insuring a fine showing of dairy cattle. This makes possible another interesting feature in the nature of a competive dairy stock judging contest between the buttermakers and the dairymen. On the first day there will be an elimination judging contest, after which two teams of five men each will be selected, one from the buttermakers and one from the dairymen, who on the second day will publicly judge several rings of dairy cattle. This will prove a big drawing card.

Usual Butter Contests.

There will be the regular butter contest, in which each creamery enters a tub of butter, and the annual buttermakers' scoring contest.

There will also be the regular six big contests, as follows:

1. The creamery which shows the largest percentage of patrons who keep herd records, the buttermakers in the winning creameries getting the following prizes: First, gold watch; second and third, $10 each; fourth and fifth, $5 each.

2. For the individual farmer who has kept the best and most complete and accurate herd records for the year. The eight prizes are $25, $15, $10 and four for $5.

3. For the creamery association wherein the greatest number of pure bred sires were purchased during 1916.

4. For the creamery association in the territory of which the greatest number of silos are in use.

5. For the creamery association in the territory of which the largest number of silos were constructed during 1916.

6. For the creamery association in which the patrons have the largest acreage of clover and alfalfa.

Thief River Falls has offered substantial encouragement to the association and a record attendance is anticipated.

"UNLESS YOU MAKE GOOD YOU CAN'T PLAY BALL"

This is the Dictum Laid Down For Benefit of Those Who Would Make the Team.

Manager C. A. Nason of the Thief River Base Ball team, is busy getting the applicants for position in shape for a try-out. As the weather has thus far made it impossible for him to get the crew together, he expects to be able to line them up on the field before the end of the week.

"One thing I want thoroughly understood at the outset" said Mr. Nasson to the Times, "and that is that no man gets onto this team on his reputation or by any reason of past performances. He must deliver the goods or he simply will not be placed. I believe there is base ball material enough in the city to pick up practically the entire line-up for a winning team, but I cannot tell about this until after a few practice games have been played. Some of the candidates have appeared in a Thief River Falls uniform before, and they will be given a chance to show that they are as good or better than the recruits. However, if an unknown shows up to better advantage than a veteran, the latter will have to retire. There will be no favoritism shown in the base ball club if I am to manage it, and this is something I want thoroughly understood at the outset."

Collins, a pitcher formerly with the team here, has signified his willingness to return, and it is probable he will be given a chance as he is a good man. Hoffmeister, who did not quite make the Duluth team, is back and will be offered the first opportunity at the receiving end. Manager Nason will use all home-grown material possible, but expects it will be necessary to secure two or three outside players.

The committee appointed by the Commercial club to take charge of the financial end of the project has not yet reported, but it is understood that the attitude of those approached on the subject has been encouraging. It will be necessary for this committee to have something definite to report soon in order that the manager may know how far he will be justified in going.

Another meeting of the base ball committee will be held at the Commercial club rooms this evening.

STATEMENT ISSUED BY CHARTER COMMISSION

To the voters of Thief River Falls:

The Charter Commission, the members of which were selected by the Judges of the 14th Judicial District from residents of the city who have been qualified electors in said city for the five years last past and who are free-holders therein, herewith submits for your consideration a proposed charter, framed in conformance with the provisions of the Constitution and Laws of the State of Minnesota.

Changing the mode and method of governing a city is an important matter, and every voter should take the time to read the proposed charter at least once. If none of the desirable provisions of the old charter are eliminated, and if the proposed charter contains provisions which would seem to insure a more efficient government and handling of the city's affairs, then the proposed change should have your support, regardless of arguments, whatever they may be, which do not relate to the system of government.

The intention of the following statement or outline is to call your attention especially to such departures from the charter of 1895 as the commission has found necessary, and to certain new features contained in the proposed charter.

The Proposed Charter Provides:

1—For a governing and legislative body consisting of six councilmen and the mayor. In this body are vested all the legislative and general regulative powers of the city. Its powers are not limited by enumeration, but extend to all things not prohibited by the constitution and laws of the state of Minnesota.

2—For the abolition of ward lines. Persons elected to the council should be equally interested in all parts of the city.

3—No minority candidate can be elected to any office. Nominations are made in practically the same manner as at present. No filing fee is required, and candidates do not need to announce their own candidacy. A second election is provided where no choice is made at first election.

4—Elections every even numbered year on the same date as the national and state elections. This provision relieves the city of the expense of conducting an election every fall. To effect this change, and to comply with the mandatory provisions of the laws and constitution of the State, the terms of the present city officers expire with the end of their first year.

5—Four year terms for the members of the council. One half of the members of the council are elected every second year, so that the city will always have a council familiar with the affairs and administration of the city government.

6—A city manager who shall be hired by the council and whose term of office shall be at the pleasure of said body. The relation of the manager to the council is the same as that of the manager of a private corporation to its board of directors. He is to be the administrative head of all departments, except the department of police. The commission is convinced that such centralization of administrative authority will produce businesss-like methods of city government and fix responsibility for official action and will result in great benefit to the city. It will produce a unity which cannot, in the nature of things, exist in commission governed cities.

7—A means whereby platted additions adjoining the city may be annexed to the corporation. Under the laws of 1895, it is pracitcally impossible to secure the annexation of additions, which, though virtually a part of the city, bear none of its burdens and share nearly all of its advantages and benefits.

8—A clear and definite procedure for the making of local improvements. Attention is called to the following features:

(a) Adjoining property owners may stay the making of any proposed local improvement by filing a 55 per cent protest petition.

(b) Sufficient notice of the making of the proposed improvement and assessments is provided.

(c) The council is authorized to extend the assessments for local improvements over such term of years as it may determine. Under the present charter, local assessments are burdensome.

(d) The city may make such local ment of labor therefor, or by contract.

9—Economical and business-like handling of city finances. Money cannot be diverted from one fund to another. No obligations can be incurred or contract entered into unless there is money in sight to pay the bill. The city is compelled to keep on a cash basis. The funds which are now indebted to other funds of the city, are required to repay such indebtedness. Money in the sinking fund may be invested in the certificates or bonds of the city; that is, the city may borrow its own money.

10—The city is required to pay for its street lights and fire protection. The Electric light fund is definitely controlled, it being the aim of these provisions to secure a reduction in rates to electric light and water users.

11—The initiative and referendum and recall place the control of the city's affairs in the hands of the people. The council must do the bidding of the electors of the city.

12—The Park Board, Fire Department, Library Board, and Municipal Court remain as at present constituted, except that the Park Board is given larger powers, thus insuring to the city some provisions for a park system.

13—The rights of the city in the matters relating to franchises is carefully guarded.

14—Full publicity of public records and transactions is required.

The members of the Commission are convinced that the proposed charter will meet the peculiar needs and requirements of the city of Thief River Falls far better than the act of the State Legislature under which we now operate. The said act of the legislature was prepared with a view to meeting the requirements and to cover the conditions of any city of the fourth class and did not pretend to take cognizance of the needs of individual cities. The act is antiquated, cumbersome and a block to the progress of the city. A new charter should be adopted.

THE CHARTER COMMISSION.

"TELELAGET" MEETS HERE JUNE 23-24

Norwegian Association Selects Thief River Falls as Place for Holding Annual Convention.

"Teleaget," about 1500 strong, will hold the annual convention of the society in Thief River Falls on June 23 and 24. This is an association of people of Norwegian birth or ancestry owning Telemarken as the place from which they or their forebears came. The members are scattered all over the United States, but mostly reside in five states, Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas and Iowa. They meet every year at some central point to compare notes, swap reminiscences and enjoy themselves generally. Bands accompany the delegates and they have their own singing societies. Competitions among these are a feature of every meeting, and the musical section of the yearly programs are considered of great importance. The musical numbers are by no means devoted entirely to Norse songs and selections, being liberally interspersed with the works of American and other composers.

The Commercial club, through whose efforts this convention is secured, has appointed the following committee of representative citizens to look after the details as far as these may be handled before the delegates arrive: G. Halvorson, Andrew Trovaton and E. J. Overland. No inducements other than the free use of the Auditorium is asked by the association in order to secure this convention for Thief River Falls, the selection being made solely as a compliment to the many people of Norwegian birth and ancestry residing in this section.

These meetings are strictly non-political and non-religious. They are simply summer outings of American citizens who have certain ties binding them together and who were in many cases neighbors in another land. The gatherings take on practically the nature of a Chautauqua, where subjects for mutual betterment and higher ideals are discussed.

The officers of the association are: A. A. Trovatin, Fargo, president; A. O. Houge, Williston, vice president; Torkel Oftelie, Barnesville, recorder; N. N. Ronning, Minneapolis, secretary; O. G. Kinney, Colfax, Wis., treasurer.

Saterdallag Will Not Come.

Olaf Neset returned last week from a trip to Grand Forks, where he had been for the purpose of seeing if the annual meeting of the Norwegian society, the Saterdallag, could not be procurred for Thief River Falls this summer. He was unsuccessful in his mission, being informed that the organization still had a balance of $90 coming from the Commercial club of this city, said sum being due ever since the society held its last gathering here.

Has Something Coming.

The Sunbeam: Adolph Olson Eberhart, will speak at Thief River Falls, on May 3rd at the annual banquet of the Commercial club. He had ought to exhibit a picture of that State Normal school that he stole from Thief River Falls and dropped in the jack-pines near Bemidji to boom the price of real estate for Minneapolis townsite boomers. Oh, yes, Adolph Olson has got something coming from the people of Thief River Falls and Pennington county, and they always pay an installment on the debt every time they get a chance to vote.

He Should Have No Opposition.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Congressman Steenerson will probably have no opposition in the G. O. P. for re-election. He is one of the ablest men of the Minnesota delegation.

RECALL IS NEW IDEA SUBMITTED

Any City Officer With Exception of Municipal Judge Subject To Its Provisions.

MAY INITIATE LEGISLATION

A Request Signed by 20 Per Cent of Voters Sufficient to Bring Any Measure Directly Before The People.

The new city charter soon to be submitted to the voters of Thief River Falls, contains many features not found in the document under which the city has been governed heretofore. Among the most interesting of these are the recall, initiative and referendum. The recall provision, which is Section 31 of the new charter, provides that the incumbent of any office, with the exception of municipal judge, whether elective or appointive, is subject to recall.

A petition signed by 25 per cent of the citizens voting at the last general municipal election may invoke such recall provision by filing it with the city manager. This petition must set forth, in a statement of not more than 200 words, the grounds upon which the demand for the removal of an official is based. One of the signers of the petition so presented must make oath to the effect that he believes the statements contained in the complaint to be true and that the signatures to the petition are genuine. Two or more officers may be joined in one petition for removal.

Within ten days after the filing of the petition the city manager must verify the petition and submit it to the city council and to the party sought to be recalled. The election following shall be conducted as are regular elections.

The Initiative.

Section 39 provides that any proposed ordinance may be submitted by a petition having the signatures of twenty per cent of the voters. The qualifications for the signer are the same as in the preceeding instance with the exception that the proposed ordinance must be read to the signer before his signature is appended. Upon the presentation of such petition properly signed, the council shall either pass said ordinance without alteration within twenty days, or within twenty-five days call a special election at which the measure shall be submitted to the people. In case the petition submitted contains less than twenty but more than fifteen per cent of the total votes, the ordinance shall be submitted to the people at the next general election.

The city council may submit a proposition for the repeal of any such ordinance, or for amendments thereto, to be voted upon at any general municipal election.

The Referendum.

No ordinance shall go into effect before thirty days from the time of its final passage, except when otherwise required by the general laws of the state or by the provisions of the charter, except an ordinance for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety. Such immergency ordinance must contain a statement of their purport and must receive the unanimous vote of the council. If a protest signed by fifteen per cent of the voters is presented objecting to the going into effect of such emmergency ordinance, the same shall be reconsidered, and, if not repealed, must be submitted to a referendum vote.

Any ordinance or measure that the council may have authority to enact may be submitted to a vote of the people should a majority of the members so desire. At elections held for this purpose there shall be no bar to the submission of such other matters as may legally come up for settlement at any similar election.

The City Manager.

The common council shall appoint a city manager who will be the administrative head of the municipal government and whose term shall be at the pleasure of the council. He shall be responsible for the efficient administration of all departments under his control. It is not necessary that the manager be a resident of the city at the time of his appointment. The amount of the bond and the salary of this officer shall be determined by the council. He shall be the general recording officer or clerk, the custodian of the seal and of all records, books and files.

The city manager will have power to make appointments or cause removals in all departments of the city government. He will be the purchasing agent for the city and be responsible for the proper standard of all such supplies secured. He may also revoke licenses pending the action of the city council, and will have power to administer oaths and take affidavits.

It will be seen from the above that the office of city manager is to be no sinecure. Nothing but a highly efficient and thoroughly competent man will fill the bill, as upon his judgment and capability will largely depend the success or failure of the new plan.

NEW AUTOMOBILE CLUB BEGINS ACTIVE WORK

City Will Be Asked to Aid in Fixing Road From Main to Eighth Street Bridge.

At the meeting of the Thief River Automobile club on Friday night a committee was appointed by President John Bratrud to take up with the city council the matter of improving some of the highways in the immediate neighborhood. The section to which attention will first be paid is that stretch between Eighth street bridge and Main avenue. This is a very busy thoroughfare as it is the route over which much of the traffic from and to the north and east is carried. A committe composed of F. F. Haines, C. W. McDaniel, D. B. Bakke and Dr. O. F. Mellby was appointed to take the matter up with the council with a view to securing the aid of the city in making the improvement.

The adoption of some system for the making of trails was recommended. There are a number of automobile routes now ending at the county border on the south and east, and the club went on record as favoring the extension of these.

Another meeting will be held this evening at which it is expected that a number of the committees appointed for different purposes will be in readiness to report.

Ball Team at Red Lake Falls.

There is no doubt that Red Lake Falls is to be represented this season by a fast base ball team. With good material from which to build a team and generous financial encouragement from the business people of the city, the organization starts out with the prospect of bringing much pleasure to the base ball fans of whom there are a few less than a million in the city and community says the Gazette of that city.

The business men have contributed to a fund of between five and six hundred dollars to finance the base ball undertaking.

It is the plan to have two or three games each week if they can be arranged for. It is probable that weekday games will be played in the early evening, the games being called shortly after six o'clock.

Warren, Thief River Falls and other towns will have fast teams this season so some fine exhibitions of the national game are looked for.

SAM H. CLARK MAY BE CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

Former Thief River Newspaper Man Likely to Enter Race in North Dakota.

Sam H. Clark of Bismarck, editor of Jim Jam Jems, is being groomed as a candidate for governor of North Dakota. Mr. Clark was formerly in the newspaper business in Thief River Falls, being publisher of the Press, disposing of the property about 11 years ago. Many of the old timers here remember him well, he having been well-known in this section of Minnesota for some time before he became famous as the publisher of Jim Jam Jems. He also for a time conducted a paper at Stephen in Marshall county.

Clark has made a financial success of the Bismarck publication, is a fine speaker and has a considerable following in the western part of the state. He was a member of the Ford peace party to the warring nations of Europe, and his articles on the war since the return of that expedition have attracted nation-wide interest. People in this city who are personally acquainted with Clark say that there is no question as to his ability, but are inclined to regard him as rather too radical in his opinions and strenuous in his attitude to be acceptable as a governor to most people.

PRICES OF MATERIAL ARE GOING SKYWARD

General Supplies And Material Have Increased At Least 57% During Past Year.

Car Foreman G. J. Conklin, at the Soo yards, is in receipt of a letter from G. R. Huntington, general manager for the Soo Line, showing the enormous increase in prices on material and supplies used by the railroads throughout the United States on account of the European war. The circular urges that nothing be discarded or scrapped until its full usefulness is obtained, and that the utmost care and economy be exterted in the use of material and supplies, thus avoiding all accumulations of unnecessary quantities.

One of the large bills that the railroads have to meet with is that of the printer. Stationery supplies and printing alone has increased at least 30 per cent. Some of the stationery supplies have increased from 100 to 300 per cent. Many items in general use have increased from 60 to 200 per cent.

Gasoline	125%
Common bar iron	100%
Nails	50%
Common nuts	100%
Steel, tool-high speed	600%
Zincs, battery	200%
Wire, barbed fence	70%
Axels, car and engine	125%
Bolts, track	75%
Track spikes	80%
Cotton duck	30%
Screws, all kinds	60%
Oil, headlight	65%
Lead	75%
Glassware, all kinds	25% to 40%

Sunday At Home.—E. Olson, employed at the Soo freight house, left Friday night for Paynesville, where he spent Saturday and Sunday as the guest of his parents, returning Monday morning.

Grain To Duluth.—A train laden with grain from Dakota, bound for Duluth, was taken to Federal Dam last Friday by Conductor Curtis and his crew of this division. Crews on the Winnipeg division never work on the Superior division unless they are transferred to that place, but in order to avoid congested conditions here at the yards, Curtis was commissioned to the run. At Federal Dam they were relieved by a crew from Superior, Wisconsin, they taking the grain train the balance of the trip.

"Jake" On Vacation.—Express Clerk "Jake" Greenagel at the Great Northern office, left last Friday afternoon for Minneapolis, where he spent Saturday and Sunday as the guest of friends and relatives. He returned Monday morning.

Receiving Repairs.—The Soo Line pile drive, which was brought to this city last week from points along the Wheatline, is at present receiving repairs at the round house. It is expected that this machine will be taken to Oslo after being repaired to strengthen the bridge at that place, which was somewhat weakened during the high stage of water.

New Machinist—James E. Daly went to work at the Soo round house April 25 as machinist, replacing R. A. Kromer.

Accepts Position.—John G. Borgen has accepted a position at the Soo round house, replacing Andrew J. Elias.

To Chicago.—Andrew J. Elias, who has been employed at the Soo round house as machinist helper for the past month, has resigned his position dna will leave for his home near Chicago, Ill.

Fills Position—Peter Amundson has accepted a position as machinist helper at the round house, going to work April 28.

Carter Returns.—Irving Carter, depot agent at Harlowe, N. D., returned to his post Friday, after spending three weeks in this city and other points on a leave of absence. He was accompanied by Mrs. Carter, who had been visiting with friends south of Thief River Falls.

Swenson Passes Through.—P. Swenson, superintendent of the Soo Line's bridges and buildings with offices at Minneapolis, passed through Thief River Falls the latter part of last week enroute to Kenmare, N. D., on a tour of inspection. While here Mr. Swenson paid several of the division offices a brief call.

Goes To Superior.—C. E Russel, Soo Line engineer, departed Monday for Superior, Wisconsin, being transferred to that division point to occupy the cab on a work train running out of Superior. Mr. Russeli will remain there for probably three weeks.

Barnard Returns.—Superintendent W. A. Barnard, of the Winnipeg division, had his private car attached to No. 111 last Thursday evening, coming up from Minneapolis, where he had passed a few days attending to official business matters.

Took Wrong Train.—Little Ida Todal, age 7, kept the telegraph wires hot between Thief River Falls and Plummer for a time last Thursday evening as the result of the little Miss taking the wrong train. The girl and her mother alighted at 7:15 p. m. from the Duluth train at Plummer, and were enroute to their home at Erskine after a visit with friends at Gonvick. To reach home they were obliged to wait for the flyer which reaches Plummer about 10:30 p. m. The little girl however was unaware of this and in her desire to get home to "papa," clamored onto the Minneapolis local, No. 111, bound for Thief River Falls, which arrived at Plummer at 7:40 p. m. and due here at 8 o'clock. When the train left the child was no more to be seen and the reason was quickly discovered. A description of the girl was telegraphed to this city and on the train's arrival here, she was apprehended on alighting. She left again on the flyer at 10 o'clock for Plummer, where she joined her mother and the two proceeded on to Erskine happily.

Ritter To Fordville.—N. O. Ritter, Soo Line fireman, departed Monday for Fordville, N. D., to be employed on the Fordville-Drake line for a short time.

Visited At Warren.—J. E. Blomquist, day switchman at the Soo yards, spent the latter part of last week at Warren, where he was the guest of his parents.

Back From Glenwood.—Elmer Roll, employed by the Soo Line here with the day switching crew, returned the latter part of last week from Glenwood, where he had spent a few days visiting with friends and relatives.

Saturday At Brooks.—Thomas Rowan, first trick day dispatcher at the Soo offices, returned Saturday evening from Brooks, where he had spent the day visiting with Mrs. Rowan, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moreau.

Zarker Calls.—R. E. Zarker, travelagent for the Soo Line located in Minneapolis, was a caller in Thief River Falls the latter part of last week. He left for Brooks, Erskine and Winger to check up those stations.

To Chicago.—George Costello, who has been employed here by the Soo Line as night yard clerk, took his departure Sunday evening for Chicago, Ill., on a business and pleasure trip. Mr. Costello is undecided whether he will return to his post.

Brown On Visit.—Conductor Clark Brown of Glenwood, who formerly had a run out of Thief River Falls, and who is now slowly recovering from an attack of paralysis since last summer, arrived in the city Monday morning for a visit with his many railroad friends.

Returns From Buffalo.—Frank Burgraff, lineman for the Soo Line, returned Tuesday morning from Buffalo, Minn., where he had spent a few days repairing the telegraph line.

Hocks To Michigan.—"Battleship" R. Hocks, Soo Line fireman, who has held a run out of Thief River Falls since last fall, left Monday evening for Gladstone, Michigan, being transferred to that point. He will visit at his home in Rapid River, Michigan, before commencing work out of Gladstone.

Leaves Tomorrow.—A. E. Hankins, switch foreman at the Soo yards, will leave tomorrow evening on 110 for an extended visit through the east. His trip will consume a period of thirty days.

Returns From West.—Traveling Auditor C. A. Philstrom returned Saturday evening over the "Wheatline," where he had spent a few days at several places acting in his official capacity.

To Take Vacation.—Car Foreman G. J. Conklin has been granted a fifteen-day leave of absence, and will leave the fifteenth of this month for a visit at his old home in Kansas City.

Replacing Ties.—Section Foreman Arthur Belland has his men busy this week "lifting" worn out ties along the line and replacing them with solid ones. A crew of men are also engaged in giving the yards a general clean-up. Last week a flat car loaded with scrap iron which had been picked up around the yards, was sent to the shops at Shoreham.

Brown To Shoreham.—C. M. Brown, Soo Line fireman, left Tuesday evening for Shoreham, to work out of that place, he being transferred to that place.

On Pleasure Trip.—Joe Larrabee, fireman for the Soo Line at this point, left for Minneapolis on Tuesday evening to spend a few days on a pleasure trip.

Transferred.—Henry Vigneaux, who has been employed here by the Soo Line as brakeman, left for Superior on Tuesday evening to work out on the Superior division, being transferred there.

Noel To Shoreham.—C. E. Noel, Soo Line brakeman, took his departure Tuesday for Shoreham, having been transferred to that place.

Transferred To Superior.—B. E. Robinson, brakeman for the Soo Line, who has made this city his home since last fall, left Tuesday evening for Superior, Wis., having been transferred to a run on the Superior division.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress and of Pollock's pursuit of her.

AMY'S STELLAR ROLE

NATURE had intended Amy Barton to be a great actress. Emotional roles of any sort would have sat absurdly upon her slender shoulders, but in the part of the insouciant ingenue she never failed to score.

She was the quaint blending which modern life has evolved, of an old-fashioned small town upbringing, veneered with a bright crust of bravado born of battling for her living in a city brimming with temptations, but she had never lost her gay defiance nor had she lost the cornerstone of her simple creed, "Be decent, loyal to your friends and don't go around with a grouch."

Her gaiety was infectious, and as she tripped up the two steps to the witness-chair she nodded a familiar greeting to the judge and smiled at the jury.

"Miss Barton," said Langdon, "you have told us of the experience with Mr. Pollock that led to your sudden resignation from 'The Blue Feather' company. Did you see him at any time after that?"

"See him again!" she retorted. "Why, that man was a regular epidemic!" A delighted giggle greeted the words, emanating from the jury-box itself. "We bumped into him the day we landed our first real job for the road.

"We were on our way to the Prentiss Agency. We'd been there before and they'd handed us the 'call again' sign, so we were playing a return date though we hadn't much hopes. Old Miss Prentiss is such a sour old maid she'd never hand anybody a job if she could get her commissions any other way, but she has the inside with some of the good managers and you can't overlook any bets in the show business. So we went back, and while we were going down the hall Mary looked so blue that I had to play Little Sunshine with much business of 'I've-a-hunch-that-we'll-land-today'—to try and make her smile and look pretty for any possible manager. That's why we didn't see James Pollock till we fairly bumped into him, and he made a grab for Mary's hand.

"Then he began to spill out an apology. He said he'd been searching every theatrical agency and every theatre in town looking for Mary. 'I've been wretched, Mary,' he said. 'I think I must have been crazy that night at the "Blue Feather." I was jealous and angry and hurt besides, and I lost my head. Won't you forgive me? I'm not going to bother you any more, but I can't live without your forgiveness.' By that time Mary had got the power of speech back and she jerked her hand away from his as if it burnt. 'I am perfectly willing to forgive you,' she said, 'and accept your apology, but I do not care to continue any acquaintance with you.'"

"Your honor and gentlemen of the jury."

"Did you and Miss Page secure positions in that new company?"

"Yes. The minute the manager spotted Mary, he picked her for the lead because she was the proper 'type', and Mary, the darling, said she couldn't take the job unless I went along too. So he handed me an ingenue role with about ten sides and twenty-five beans as salary. Mary's was to be featured in the play which had the giddy moniker of 'A Woman's Pledge.'"

"May it please the court," broke in the prosecutor, getting lazily to his feet, "all this is no doubt very interesting—delightful, in fact, and might prove of great help to us if we had stage aspirations. But," (with a sudden change of tone) "we are here to decide the guilt or innocence of Mary Page, whom the State declares to have murdered James Pollock. I fail to see, your Honor, where the somewhat rambling fable in slang which the witness is telling has any bearing upon this case."

"Your Honor, and gentlemen of the jury," Langdon's voice rose before the words of the prosecutor had died away, "the story which the witness is telling has everything to do with the question of the murder of James Pollock. It will show how again and again he forced his attentions upon Miss Page, and of the horror in which she held him; and of the almost inevitable mental collapse that followed his brutal efforts to make her marry him. If I have allowed the witness to tell the story in her own way, it is simply that I wish to bring before you the picture of these two young girls, so brave and hopeful, and hard working, whose positions and good character were attacked by James Pollock."

For a moment the judge hesitated, and the court held its breath—aggressive, even antagonistic at the mere thought of losing the gay little witness who was looking from the judge to Langdon with such childishly startled eyes. Then his Honor said slowly:

"I cannot sustain your objection to the testimony as irrelevant, sir. I consider all that has a bearing upon the curious relations existing between Mr. Pollock and Miss Page as of paramount importance. At the same time," he added, turning to Langdon, "I would suggest that you instruct your witness to confine her testimony to mere statements of fact."

The entire courtroom, not excepting the jury, heaved a sigh of relief, and Langdon's face showed a flush of triumph as he asked:

"How long did your engagement in 'A Woman's Pledge' last, Miss Barton?"

"Six weeks, but we only got salary for four."

"Where did the tour end?"

"It didn't end. It blew up in a one-tank rube town called Prindleville. It was one of those towns that have the railroad station on one side of Main Street, the hotel and 'Opry' house at the other and the rest of the buildings scattered about wherever they happened to drop."

Again a gust of laughter lilted through the dingy room, but Langdon frowned and shook his head at Amy.

"Never mind descriptions," he said more sharply than he had spoken so far. Amy, far from being awed by his sternness, pouted at him with a gay little moue and went on with her story in her own fashion.

"We were all feeling pretty grouchy when we hit Prindleville, because the ghost hadn't walked for a month, and nobody knew whether we'd ever get back to New York or not."

"Did you give the performance that night?" broke in Langdon impatiently.

"Well, we started to, but it never got beyond the ticket-taking stage, for the sheriff blew in with a badge as big as a saucer and said that he'd been ordered to hold all our trunks and props for unpaid board bills in the last four towns, and that meant that we were stranded with Broadway doing the Sheridan act many miles away. We went back to the hotel and said what we thought of the producer and tried to borrow carfare from the hotel proprietor. That was when we saw James Pollock again. He arrived in town by the last train, and walked into the lobby while we were there. He came over and said he was going through the town on a business trip, and seeing Mary's name on an eight sheet—you know—big poster—he had jumped off on impulse. He said he was awfully sorry that the tour had ended so unfortunately, and begged her to let him arrange for our return to New York."

"Did Miss Page accept?"

"No. She refused absolutely. She—she looked as if she would scream if he touched her. She held onto my arm so tight it made a black-and-blue spot, and you could see the pulse in her throat jumping the way it does before a woman dissolves into hysterics. The proprietor of the place was a decent old Rube with a fatherly eye and soft heart that wore the make-up of a grouch, and when Mary offered him a ring that had been her mother's, as a pledge for our board, he kind of gulped and handed over the key to our room without a word."

"You say 'our room'. That means that you remained with Miss Page?"

"Why, of course," she said in obvious surprise. "You don't suppose I'd go back on Mary, do you? We went upstairs and had a little cry," she said whimsically, a furtive dimple showing as she spoke. "Then, having powdered our noses and cheered up, I left Mary resting while I went to the head of the stairs to see what was doing in the office, and what had happened to the rest of the bunch."

"Could you see those in the office from the stairway?"

"Plainly, by going down to the first landing and looking through the banisters."

"Was the rest of the company still there?"

"Yes."

"Was Mr. Pollock with them?"

"Yes; he was playing a leading role and making a speech."

"Could you hear what he said?"

"Sure! Of course I missed the first part of it, but when I got to the landing he was saying, 'I have always taken a great interest in the theatre, and can thoroughly sympathize with your predicament.' Then he pulled a time-table out of his pocket and tapped it, saying, 'The New York train goes through in six minutes. It can be flagged to take you aboard and I'll pay your fares to New York and settle the claims of the sheriff—for no reason except that I don't want to see you stranded.' At that the company set up a cheer and beat it like crazy people for their suit-cases, and Mr. Pollock pulled out a great wad of bills and began peeling them off for everybody, including the sheriff himself."

"She looked as if she would scream if he touched her."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran back and told Mary, but we could see through his game. It was a case of either accept his help or be stranded and walk the ties."

"What did Miss Page say?"

"She said, 'You go, Amy, because you want to get back, but I'll walk every step of the way and earn my food by scrubbing before I'll accept a penny of James Pollock's money or give him a chance to speak to me again.'"

"Did you agree to go?"

"No. I said that burrs weren't in it with me when it came to stickin', and if there was going to be any walking or scrubbing I would be on the job to do my share. That Mary and I were pals—and we'd take what was coming together. Well, anybody would have stuck by Mary. She—she's the best ever."

"Did Mr. Pollock leave with the company?" asked Langdon, a warning note in his voice, and with a little start she turned back to him.

"No. We thought he had gone, but after the train had pulled out I looked out of the window and saw him coming back to the hotel—grinning."

"Did you tell Miss Page?"

"No. I thought it was better for her to think he was gone, so that she would get a good night's sleep. Afterward I wished I had told her."

"Why?"

"Because it was such an awful shock to her when he came to our door in the morning."

"Will you tell us the circumstances of that meeting, please?"

"Well, Mary and I were both dressed and ready for breakfast, and we were talking over the chances of getting some sort of work to do in the town till we could get word home to mother to send us car fare. It costs quite a lot from Prindleville to the big town, and we knew it might be days before the old lady could raise it, and we had to eat in the meantime. While we were still talking we heard a knock at the door, and thinking it was the chambermaid or maybe the proprietor Mary sings out, 'Come in.' And at that James Pollock opened the door."

"What did Miss Page do?"

"She screamed and turning, hid her face against my shoulder for a moment. Then she stood up and faced him. 'How dare you come here?' she asked, and he had the decency to look pretty foolish. 'I dare because I am worried about you,' he said. 'I can't go and leave you stranded here; you've got to let me help you.' 'I shall never accept your help!' cried Mary, and I could tell by her voice that she was pretty close to tears, so I stepped forward and said, 'Look here, James Pollock, it's a pretty mean trick for any man to persecute a girl, the way you're persecuting Mary. Haven't you a shred of decency in your poor little soul? If you have you'll beat it—while the going's good.'"

"Did he answer you?"

"Yes. For a minute I thought he was going to hit me. Then he said, 'Miss Page is thoroughly capable of answering me herself, Miss Barton, and I must ask you not to interfere in what does not concern you.' 'Anything that concerns Mary concerns me,' I retorted, but Mary put her hand on my arm. 'Mr. Pollock,' she said, and there was a queer note in her voice, 'I thoroughly agree with what Amy has said—you are persecuting me; you are torturing me—and I cannot bear any more. For God's sake go away and leave us in peace.' At that Mr. Pollock flung out his hands and said hoarsely, 'Mary—Mary—you can't mean that. Aren't you tired of this poverty and misery? Haven't you had enough of this life? One would think to hear you that I was some brute pursuing you, when all I ask is to honorably marry you and protect you from hardships.' 'Honorable!' cried Mary. 'Do you call it honorable to assist the others because you knew it would leave us stranded and helpless? Is it honorable to force yourself upon us in this fashion? Is it honorable to persecute me, when I've told you over and over that I'll drudge all my life and wear my fingers to the bone with work before I will marry you?' Then she burst into tears, and I ordered Mr. Pollock out of the room, saying that he'd gotten his answer and he might as well go."

"Did he leave?"

"No—but it didn't matter, because just then the door opened and the good old gink that ran the place came in. He said he'd heard enough of what was said to realize that we girls needed some help and advice, and suggested that since Mr. Pollock seemed determined to stay there, that we might go down to his office. He handed us each a job as biscuit-slingers in the dining-room. Mary was to administer the table d'hote to the regular and I was to be on the job with the transients—and SOME transients they were, too! Of course Mary made a hit right off.

"It's a good thing, your Honor, that they don't leave any cold poison lying around in rube hotels, because the first customer I got was James Pollock! I did stick my finger in the oatmeal I was taking him and say, 'I hope you choke' three times, but it didn't work."

Again her bubbling laugh rippled out, followed by a guffaw of delight from the listeners, but as if it were a signal, the prosecutor leaped to his feet.

"Your Honor," he stormed, "I object to the testimony of this witness being admitted as evidence! Is this a courtroom or a burlesque show? And is my learned opponent revealing to us the gay life of Miss Barton or evidence dealing with the murder of James Pollock?"

"May it please the court," retorted Langdon, "the events which took place in Prindleville had a very definite effect upon the relations between James Pollock and the defendant. I crave the patience of your Honor and the gentlemen of the jury with the witness—who is—er—not exactly conversant with the legal brevity demanded by law."

"I think," said his Honor, the ghost of a smile still twitching at his lips, "that the witness may go on with her story. But," he added, leaning forward with an admonishing gesture towards Amy, "you must remember, Miss Barton, that you are here not to amuse us, but to answer as briefly as possible the questions put to you by counsel for the defence."

"How long did you remain at the hotel in Prindleville as a waitress?"

"About three weeks."

"Did Mr. Pollock remain there during that time?"

"Yes."

"Did he speak to you at any time?"

"Well, he had to speak to me, but he limited it to, 'Two boiled eggs and dry toast,' or 'Gimme roast chicken and mashed potatoes,' but with Mary it was different. He didn't speak to her, but he never let her get out of his sight if he could avoid it. He used to sit in the hall where he could watch her in the dining-room, and if she went out for a breath of air, he always followed her. It got on her nerves so she used to cry half the night, and say she would go crazy if he didn't go away."

"Miss Barton, you say that you remained at the hotel about three weeks. Why did you leave at the end of that time?"

"Because of the behavior of some of the men who came to the place."

"What do you mean by their behavior?"

"Their—their—freshness," she said, flushing a little. "You see, when we first went to work, they were all very decent, especially to Mary, and everything was fine. Then they—they seemed to change even to me. Finally something the landlady said put me wise to the fact that our characters weren't worth a two-cent stamp in Prindleville. I didn't want Mary to know, so I kept quiet till the day when the guy that always came for lunch got fresh and tried to kiss her. The landlady had just told me that her 'regular girls' were objecting to work with us, because of our bad characters, when the door of the dining-room banged open and Mary, taking her apron off as she went, ran past us and up the stairs. The landlady called her, but she never even looked around, so I started after her. Just as I did so a cheap, flashy guy who was a regular boarder came out of the dining-room, looking sheepish and with one cheek bright red and the other very pale. I've seen a good smack make that kind of a complexion before, so I kind of waited around to see what he would do."

"Did he leave the hotel?"

"No. He walked out into the office and across to where James Pollock was sitting and flung himself into a chair beside him. He ripped out a good round oath or two; then he said, 'Say, look here, from what you told me, that Mary Page is no better than she should be, but crickey, she swung a right onto my jaw that jarred my brains in there, just because I tried to give her a little kiss—and offered to take her to the movies.'"

"Their—their freshness."

"Did Mr. Pollock reply?"

"No. First he looked as if he was going to hand the chump one himself, then he laughed as if he was satisfied with something, and I ran up stairs to Mary. She was crying, and packing her grip. She said that for the last two or three days she had noticed a decided difference in the attitude of the men towards her, and that at noon one of them had insulted her and she had slapped his face. The worst of it was, she said, the man said that he had been told that she wasn't so particular with others, and was notorious where she came from. When we went downstairs with our suit-cases in our hands the proprietor's wife was giving him an earful of what she had heard about us, of how bad we were and all the rest, and Mr. Pollock was sitting there taking it all in, but pretending to read. He jumped up when we came in sight, however, and started to speak, but we pushed by him and I walked right up to the proprietor and said, 'Look here—you've been pretty white to us, but somebody is spreading a lot of lies around here, and we're going to quit P. D. Q., and we'd like whatever of the long green is coming to us after our room rent is paid.' The old guy, seeing Mr. Pollock was listening, said we'd better all go into the dining-room to settle it; but Mr. Pollock followed us in, and said that as he was a friend of ours, that he had heard that there were a good many rumors about Mary's past, and that of course no actress could expect to have any reputation, as everybody knew what road companies were. Then he grabbed Mary's hands, saying, 'I at least care nothing about gossip. Knowing Miss Page, I have repeatedly offered to marry her and now—now I ask again. Mary, you can kill this slander in a minute by marrying me!' That wised me to his game all right, but before I could tell her, she had dragged her hands away from him with a scream and backed against the wall, staring at us as if—as if—she was—crazy. I called out 'Mary! Mary!' but she didn't seem to hear me. She just kept staring at Mr. Pollock."

"Was he much excited?" snapped Langdon.

"Yes, but he was half drunk, too. He'd been drinking a lot all day, and it showed plainly on him. It was that, I guess, that made him act like a fool and try to catch her in his arms, crying that there was nothing ahead of her but disgrace and disaster unless she married him."

"Did she reply?"

"No—she didn't answer. She struck at him—twice—then she screamed and ran out—and across the street to the railroad. We—we followed as quickly as we could, and then—" she choked, and her hand went waveringly to her throat, as if the words would not come—"and then—we saw the man waving his flag and knew the—the train from New York was coming in. I—think I went crazy myself for a minute. I screamed and screamed and I heard Pollock screaming too, and we ran like mad—but we couldn't catch her—only—thank God—the man with the danger flag saw her and stopped her just in time!"

"Did she fight against capture?"

"No. She just fainted dead off in his arms, and when we got to her, he had carried her over and laid her on the platform. It was then that I saw Mr. Langdon. He had just gotten off the train, and when he saw the crowd and Mary lying there, he turned white as a sheet and came running over. But I told him that she had only fainted and he'd better carry her over to the hotel."

"Was Miss Page conscious when you reached the hotel?"

"No. But after she had been laid on the sofa in the parlor and the landlady had bathed her forehead a while she opened her eyes and smiled at us, and the old woman, who was a good soul at heart, drove us all out, saying that Mary needed rest."

"Was Mr. Pollock in the hotel at that time?"

"Yes. He was at the parlor door, but when we came out he kind of edged away and stood scowling at us. Then I told Mr. Langdon that I believed he had been spreading slander against Mary all through the town and had driven her half insane so that she had attempted to end it all by flinging herself in front of the train. Mr. Langdon started to tell me something then, but before he could get a word out, the landlady came to the parlor door and said Mary wanted me. Mr. Langdon went in with me. When Mary saw him, she just gave one cry, and came running to him, like a kid that's been scared in the dark and sees it's mother coming with a lamp. But when she saw Mr. Pollock pushing his way in with some of the others, she turned kind of white again, and Mr. Langdon, turning to see what had startled her, got a glimpse of him. At that he suddenly pulled a bunch of papers out of his pocket, and marching up to Mr. Pollock said, loud enough for all of us to hear: 'Through certain investigations which I made in New York, James Pollock, I have discovered that you are the biggest scoundrel unhung! I have actual proof that you backed "A Woman's Pledge" Company, and allowed it to strand in order to leave Mary Page penniless and alone in a strange town; and what is more, curse you, I believe you yourself spread the lies that have been told about her!'"

"Did Mr. Pollock deny these accusations?"

"He started to, but apparently changed his mind and didn't say a word. But the good old Rube proprietor did. He jumped up and shook his fist under Mr. Pollock's nose and shouted, 'You scoundrel! I've had my doubts about you for some time. Now I know—and you get out of my hotel—and get quick! This town is no place for hounds that persecute women and slander 'em, and if you don't want some rough handling you'd better get away before word of this dirty work gets around.' At that Mr. Pollock turns about like a dog that's had a licking and slunk out and Mr. Langdon laughed and said, 'There's a train home in twenty minutes, and we're going to catch it.'"

"That is all, Miss Barton," said Langdon, but his tone was thoughtful, and when the prosecutor waived cross examination, and the judge adjourned court, he showed obvious relief. He followed Amy into the witness room, drew her aside and asked:

"Amy, have you seen anything of Daniels lately?"

"Why, sure," she answered. "I saw him yesterday, and, say, he looks about the sickest thing I ever saw in the show business. Honest, I felt sorry for him."

"Well, you may feel even more sorry for him, before long," muttered Langdon, and hurrying out through the now gloomy corridors he passed through the clanging door and down into the cells. At a word to the turnkey he was admitted to the narrow room where Mary lay flung across the narrow bed. Stooping over her he whispered softly:

"Mary—my dear—"

"Oh, Philip," she sobbed, turning and clinging to him. "It—it's like living all the horrors over again to go through this day by day. Is it worth while? Will it help any?"

"Help? Why, dear, I'm more hopeful tonight than I've been since the beginning," he cried cheerily. "And what's more, I believe I've got a line on a new clue—that will work up well."

"Oh, what?" she cried, sitting up and smiling at him rainbow-wise through the tears that begemmed her lashes; and Langdon, holding her hands against his lips, said softly:

"Just be brave a little longer and trust me."

"Dearest, you know that long after he deliberately planned to strand you, Pollock also backed Daniels to star you. I'm going to summon Daniels and make him explain their exact association, and then I think—the end will be in sight. Just be brave a little longer—and trust me."

"Oh, I do—I do," she whispered; and when he left her she followed him to the door and, thrusting her slender hands between the bars, caught his and said in a voice that thrilled with sweetness:

"Philip, dear—I am hopeful—and I am brave—don't forget that—and please go home tonight—remembering that I was smiling when I said good-bye."

But Philip, burying his face in the slender palms, could not see the bravely sweet smile because of the scalding tears that burned his eyelids, as he hurried down the echoing corridor.

KELLOGG MAKES KEYNOTE SPEECH

STATES POSITION ON ISSUES

Finds Many Questions of Surpassing Importance Now Before the American People.

Frank B. Kellogg, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, opened his campaign at Rochester, his former home, upon request of the citizens of that place. He said, in part:

When in response to the request of the editors of the state I announced my willingness to become a candidate for the United States Senate, I stated I would declare my position upon the political issues pending before the American people. There are many of these questions today of surpassing importance, and I must for this speech select a few in which I believe the American people are most interested. This is the platform upon which I stand:

We should

Immediately prepare this country for defense;

Protect American citizens upon the high seas and in foreign countries:

Protect American property and American foreign commerce, which amounts to over $5,300,000,000 per annum:

FRANK B. KELLOGG.

Encourage the construction of a merchant marine, in order to handle our foreign commerce and reduce ocean freight rates, which are now exorbitant and an unreasonable tax on our industries;

In foreign relations, demand and enforce with firmness our rights against other nations, and maintain a bold and just neutrality;

Protect, by reasonable tariff provisions, the products of our farms, labor and other industries and the development of our natural resources;

Maintain our control of the Philippines until we shall have fulfilled our pledges, and the Islands are suited for self-government;

Protect and encourage agriculture, the great basis of American wealth;

Maintain the integrity of representative government and the purity and stability of the courts;

Strive for a higher standard of social justice, and maintain the independence and security of labor;

Introduce economy, thrift and efficiency in the departments of government; and,

Enforce the anti-trust laws, so as to keep open the avenues of enterprise for the American people.

I should consider it the highest honor to be possessed of the confidence of this people and to be associated with Minnesota's distinguished senior senator, Honorable Knute Nelson, who in this great crisis is standing squarely for American rights and the national honor, and who is serving the people with such conspicuous ability.

As we are today facing the shadows of this great European conflict, the first and paramount duty of the American people is to make immediate and thorough preparation to defend the country, maintain our rights and preserve our institutions. No other issue is of such surpassing importance. There is only one way to do it, and that is to immediately take steps to procure an efficient and adequate army and navy and to husband our resources and finances, so that our position will be respected by foreign countries, and thus insure protection to our people. This does not mean war; it is the only way to peace. A weak and unprotected country invites attack.

It is unnecessary to say that our people do not wish war; nor are we seeking conquest. Not even those possessed of the most restless ambition could wish to bring upon this country the horrors of a modern war; but we cannot sit meekly by and close our eyes to the history of all nations. Two years ago war seemed as remote as at any time since history has recorded the doings of men. There was no adequate cause, social, political or industrial, for such a war.

And yet in this age of profound world peace and advanced civilization, there burst upon the world a war the horrors of which surpass those of the ages of barbarism and the appalling loss and waste of which stagger humanity.

We are forcibly reminded of these duties and of the inadequacy of our defenses by the conditions in Mexico today.

We have been tolerant—almost indifferent—to the demands of our own people for protection, while roving, plundering brigands, who call themselves generals, have defied our authority and laughed at our protests. During this time had we been able to assemble upon the Mexican border 100,000 men, backed by a determined government, does anyone believe these things would have occurred?

We have not sufficient munitions, aeroplanes, munition factories, transportation facilities and army equipment. Our navy is third or fourth among the navies of the world powers and wanting in organization, men, drill and practice; our fastest ships are slower than some of the German ships destroyed in the North Sea because they had not sufficient speed. We have practically no efficient submarines and not sufficient coast defenses. War is now carried on with scientific, complicated machinery. To handle this machinery, men must be drilled and educated in its use, and officers must have long experience. We have not sufficient officers to man an army of any considerable size. We should have an adequate number of trained officers, sufficient aeroplanes, transportation facilities and munition factories ready to supply the nation's wants, modern battle cruisers, submarines and coast defenses.

One of the most vital subjects now before the American Congress and the people of this country is that of foreign commerce and a merchant marine.

In 1915 our commerce with foreign countries amounted to $5,326,077,067, of which more than $3,547,480,372 consisted of our products sold in other countries and more than a thousand million dollars was farm products. With the exception of the coastwise commerce, at the beginning of the war we had very little merchant marine, and were dependent upon the ships of other nations. Today, we practically have no ships on the Pacific Ocean.

One illustration will show the importance of our foreign commerce to the farmers of this country. In 1913, our export of food stuffs, crude and manufactured, was $494,414,640; in 1914, $584,128,261; and in 1915, $1,012,555,702—ten dollars for every man, woman and child in this country. To show how it affects the American farmer in our own state, I give the following as the export of wheat and wheat flour during the years 1913 to 1915, inclusive:

Wheat, bushels	99,508,968
Value	$95,098,838
Wheat flour, bbls	12,278,206
Value	$56,865,444
1914.
Wheat, bushels	173,861,944
Value	$187,184,100
Wheat flour, bbls	12,769,073
Value	$62,391,503
1915.
Wheat, bushels	205,829,820
Value	$282,457,092
Wheat flour, bbls	15,680,801
Value	$96,201,234

With this surplus of over two hundred million bushels of wheat in 1915, what would have been the market price but for our foreign commerce?

I wish to impress upon the farmers and business men of Minnesota their vital interest in this question. How much greater returns would we have received for our wheat, flour and other farm products had it not been for the enormous ocean freight rates incident to the scarcity of ships and our want of a merchant marine? Let me give you some illustrations: The increase in ocean rates on grain from New York to Liverpool in the last two years has been about 900 per cent; on flour about 500 per cent, and on all provisions about 400 per cent. The rate on wheat in January, 1914, from New York and Boston to Liverpool was 4.1c per bushel. In January, 1916, the rate was 40.6c per bushel from New York; 34c to 36c from Boston and 54.8c from New Orleans. The rate on flour increased from 15c per hundred in January, 1914, to 90c in January, 1916. This means a loss of 36c per bushel to the farmers of Minnesota and nearly $3 on every barrel of flour.

But that does not tell the whole story. The ocean rates on other farm products have relatively increased,—livestock, meats, and all other products of the farm. We must remember that the market price of what we sell at home, as well as to foreign nations, is made on the basis of these ocean rates.

The tariff will undoubtedly be one of the issues in the next campaign. Time does not permit me to discuss the subject at length, but only to state some general principles, for it is almost inexhaustible in its ramifications. We should have an efficient non-partisan tariff commission. The tariff, of necessity, affects all of the business interests of the country, and its enactment with reference to those interests and the stability of the law is necessary to real prosperity. So many questions are involved in framing a tariff law, that it is impossible to have an accurate, just and efficient law which shall meet the demand of the public revenue and protect labor, industry and agriculture in a proper way, and treat such law as the football of partisan politics, to be changed whenever political parties change.

I am not an advocate of extreme protection. As a member of the Sub-Committee on Resolutions which drew the tariff plank in the Republican Platform of 1908, I vigorously advocated an honest and reasonable reduction of the tariff on the necessaries of life. I stated then, in letters and speeches, that unless the Republican Party should keep its pledges, the agitation would not cease and it would be disastrous to the country. Such proved to be the case.

There are, of course, many problems of importance to the people engaged in agriculture. The stability, independence and prosperity of the farmers is of vital importance not only to them but to the dwellers in the cities and the people as a whole. As agriculture constitutes the principal basis of the wealth and prosperity of the country, everything which it is legitimate for the congress or the states to do to increase the prosperity of the farmer should be done. Farming occupations and farm life should be made profitable and attractive as an inducement to keep the young men upon the farm. The tendency in this country during the last fifty years has been towards the undue increase of city population.

The government should aid in every way it legitimately can to increase the productiveness of the soil, improve the system of agriculture and make farm life attractive, for unless the farm is both attractive and profitable it will not hold the ambitious rising generation.

I cannot in this speech more than very briefly state my position upon this subject,—one to which I have devoted a great many years of study. I was counsel for the government in the cases against the Paper Trust, the Standard Oil Trust and the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger. In the Standard Oil case the power of the government to regulate large industrial corporations or combinations engaged in interstate commerce was definitely established. The abuses then practiced, including unfair and oppressive methods of competition, the driving out and crushing of competitors, and like abuses, were declared illegal; and agreements fixing prices, limiting output and stifling competition were declared unlawful and were enjoined. Not only this, but all the defendant Standard Oil Companies, their officers, agents and individual defendants (being the directors and principal stockholders) were enjoined from in future agreeing on prices of petroleum and its products, from agreeing on the terms of purchase or sale or rates of transportation or the quantity to be sold, transported or manufactured, or agreeing not to compete; and they were enjoined from entering into or performing any like combination or conspiracy which would be to restrain commerce among states in petroleum and its products.

If there are any agreements today between the various Standard Oil Companies and individuals who were parties to that case, or any two of them, fixing prices, limiting output or agreeing not to compete, they are in violation of that decree and the parties can be punished: and if there are any such agreements between independent concerns and the Standard Oil Companies, the government can prosecute the parties.

I have always vigorously advocated that congress should provide for a system of federal license to large corporations engaged in interstate commerce, on condition that they obey the law, not enter into agreements fixing prices, limiting output or eliminating competition, and if they violate the terms of their license, provide for revoking it. This, with the reasonable supervision of the Trade Commission, would, I believe, not only protect corporations engaged in legitimate business, but constantly aid in preventing agreements raising prices, or other conduct injurious to the public.

I am a Republican, and believe in the principles and policies of that party. I am, however, unwilling to place the party above the country, or party fealty above the demands of citizenship. The principles and policies of the Republican Party have met the demands of the people in the hour of national peril and in times of the greatest prosperity and expansion. Under the guidance and control of that party have been instituted and carried out the greatest constructive work, internal improvements, industrial development and reforms.

I believe in the spirit and the principles of true democracy; in the fullest opportunity for the people to have a voice by vote in the affairs of government, and that one of the first duties of statesmanship is to jealously guard the principles on which constitutional representative democracy is founded.

We should strive for laws in the interest of social justice, and a higher state of civilization; laws prohibiting child labor, which is cruel, inhuman and tends to degenerate the race; laws to maintain the independence, security and integrtiy of labor, and laws in the interest of the safety, health and morality of the people, for human rights are far greater than property rights.

This country is now facing some of the gravest problems of its history,—problems of preparing the country for defense, of maintaining the national honor, of maintaining the high standard and protecting the rights of American citizenship; problems of international relations in this great crisis of world affairs; problems of social justice, industrial conditions and governmental policy. In the solution of these problems we are, and should be, a united people, having but one purpose,—that to perpetuate our government and institutions and maintain the prosperity and happiness of the American people. While human progress is always beset with struggles and difficulties, yet I cannot but believe that the present is a time of great peril, calling for the exercise of statesmanship of the highest intelligence and loftiest patriotism.

FOUR LEADERS OF REVOLT SHOT

British Officials Courtmartial Irish Rioters.

SECRETARY BIRRELL OUT

High Official of Emereld Isle Retires Under Fire, His Action Being Indicated by His Retirement From Cabinet Benches in Commons.

London, May 4.—Four signatories to the republican proclamation in Ireland have been tried by courtmartial and found guilty. They were shot later.

Patrick H. Pearse, "provisional president of Ireland," was among those shot.

Another of the rebels found guilty and shot was James Connolly, who was styled "Commandant general of the Irish republican army."

The other signatories of the proclamation found guilty and shot were Thomas J. Clark and Thomas MacDonagh.

Three other signers of the proclamation were sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, has resigned.

Mr. Birrell indicated his resignation from the cabinet by taking a corner seat behind the treasury bench when he entered the house of commons.

BRITISH JAILS ARE FILLED

Number of Irish Prisoners Are Women in Men's Clothes.

Hollyhead, Wales, May 4.—Three hundred more prisoners from Ireland, of whom twenty were wounded, were landed here.

Although the prisoners wore men's clothing several were women, thirty or forty of whom have been made prisoners.

There are undoubtedly many prisoners who are truthful in saying they knew nothing of the impending revolt when they were mobilized.

A number of the prisoners indicated their willingness to turn state's evidence and it is reported startling information will come to the government from this source.

MORE THAN ENOUGH SISAL

Washington, May 4.—Virtually all the binder twine manufacturers in the country have been heard from by the federal trade commission since it undertook, at the direction of the senate, to apportion the remainder of this season's Yucatan sisal crop. Indications are that all demands can be met without using some thousands of the 125,000 bales of fiber which the Yucatan planters' organization agreed to dispose of under government supervision.

SWIFT & CO. GUILTY; FACE $525,000 FINE

Chicago, May 4.—The packing firm of Swift & Co. was found guilty by a jury in the federal court on all twenty-nine counts in the indictment charging it with violation of the interstate commerce laws.

The maximum penalty which can be imposed is a fine of $525,000. The trial had been in progress two weeks.

The government charged that the packing company shipped less than carload lots to points in Michigan at carload rates.

Forty witnesses were brought to Chicago from Michigan points by the government.

A motion for a new trial will be heard Friday.

THREE KILLED IN BLAST

Four Others May Die From Injuries Suffered by Explosion.

Trenton, N. J., May 4.—Three workmen were killed, four probably mortally injured and three others slightly hurt by an explosion that demolished a big department of the Chandler Oil Cloth company's plant at Yardville, near this city. Several adjoining structures were wrecked.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by a spark from the machinery igniting a large quantity of gasoline and other oils.

Chief Dead; Three Firemen Hurt.

Long Beach, Cal., May 4.—J. E. Shrewbury, chief of the Long Beach fire department, was killed and three other firemen were injured when the chief's automobile collided with a motor chemical responding to an alarm.

WOULD RECLAIM LAND ALREADY RECLAIMED

New York Engineer Has Scheme For Canal From Red Lakes to Mississippi River.

A New York engineer has submitted to Gov. Burnquist a plan for the reclamation of "thousands of acres of swamp land in Northern Minnesota." The plan is for the construction of a canal from the Red Lake district into the Mississippi river and to convert both upper and lower Red Lakes into huge reservoirs to hold back the water.

A very serious drawback to the successful carrying out of this plan is the fact that most of the work proposed has already been attended to. There are no longer "thousands of acres" in the neighborhood of the Red Lakes that would be in any way improved by drainage. As for making a reservoir out of these lakes, this would only serve to overflow the lands already reclaimed. It is likely that any proposition looking to the daming up of the waters of the lakes would meet with serious opposition, as the draining of a very large section depends upon the ability of these lakes to take charge of the surplus.

The report further says that Governor Burnquist suggested that the matter be taken up with Minnesota representatives in Washington, with the idea of obtaining a federal appropriation to be used with the state appropriation in carrying out the work.

FIRST ANNUAL CLUB DINNER

Members of Commercial Club Listen to Speeches Recording Past Progress And Predicting Future.

EBERHART HONOR GUEST

Ex-Governor Leaves Politics Alone And Delivers Good, General Purpose Address Which is Highly Approved By His Hearers.

A. O. Eberhart, ex-governor of Minnesota, was the guest of honor and delivered the principal address at the annual dinner of the Commercial club at the rooms of that organization last evening. Politics were absolutely taboo, and did not figure in the proceedings even as a side issue. Mr. Eberhart spoke of patriotism, development and progress, and as these are the subjects at which he appears at his best, his remarks were highly appreciated and genuinely approved.

"When the invitation to visit Thief River Falls first reached me," said the ex-governor in opening, "I replied to your secretary that I had no speech which I considered adequate for the occasion. He assured me, however, that this city had the best newspapers in the country and that they would make my speech out to be a good one, no matter what I said."

Country Being Transformed.

"Since my last trip to northwestern Minnesota, the country has undergone a transformation," continued Mr. Eberhart. "While the growth of your city has been great and must be a matter of pride to all its citizens, yet I think that the surrounding country has developed at even a greater rate. And this is the feature to which you should pay even more attention. Do everything in your power to develop the country about you and the city will reap the benefit. Merchants do not always realize how important it is for them to take a lively, intelligent interest in the work being done by the rural population, and a little more study along this line might be of benefit to both parties.

Our Fine Schools.

The speaker complimented the people of the city upon their fine school system. He said that he understood Thief River Falls contained the highest percentage of high school students in proportion to population of any place in the state, and could think of nothing which so surely testified to the high order of the community's citizenship.

The Commercial club was complimented on its fine quarters, good work and progressive spirit. People seeking locations were more anxious that a helpfulness be displayed by the people among whom they cast their lot than they were that big bonuses should be paid them.

Three things, according to the speaker, are essential to a city's well-being and progress. These are a live Commercial club, a good band and good newspapers. He thought that the latter did not always receive all the credit due them for the good work they were doing.

The ex-governor interspersed his remarks with quotations, stories and an occasional poem, proving most entertaining throughout. He was accorded the closest attention and received a rousing round of applause at the close.

President Johnson's Review.

George G. Johnson, president of the Commercial club, who was chairman of the meeting, shortly reviewed the work of the past year. He called attention to the fact that it will be one year ago the 12th of this month since the club was formally opened by the late Gov. Hammond. While there have been ups and downs since that time, the general trend has been decidedly forward, and the club starts on its second year with better feeling prevailing and with more definite aims than at any time since its organization. The club motto, "Looking Forward," has come to mean something to the community as well as the members, said President Johnson, and he predicted that the coming year would show greater progress even than the past.

"City With the Glad Hand."

Mayor F. H. Gambell said that Thief River Falls, because of its convention facilities, should be known as "The City With the Glad Hand." Twenty-five years ago, when Dr. Gambell first came to the city, there was quite a race on between Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire for the commercial supremacy of the section. The former moved steadily ahead since that time, distancing all competitors, and will move ahead still more rapidly in the future.

Grand Forks Editor Speaks.

W. D. Davies, managing editor of the Grand Forks Herald, was the next speaker. He said that home folks do not always appreciate the progress made by their communities, and that it was often necessary for the occasional visitor to come and tell them just how fast they were growing. Everything here points to a fine community spirit, said Mr. Davies, and this is the most valuable asset any city can have. In speaking of "City Publicity," which was the subject of his address, the Grand Forks editor said that this did not differ from any other kind of publicity. It must be judiciously utilized and, above all things, hold forth only such inducements as are actually present. He paid a high compliment to the club, and particularly to Secretary Lincoln.

One Big Park.

C. L. Hanson, president of the First National bank and chairman of the city park board, said that this body wants to accomplish things and must have the support of the people in order to do so. He believed that the city could be so arranged as to form one continuous park, and that this would certainly be preferable to having a small plot for this purpose at each end. He suggested that the city council be asked to do away with all unsightly and unseemly spots and that everyone do their utmost to help in beautifying the city.

Hockey Cup Presented.

G. Howard Smith, manager of the hockey club, presented the club with the northwestern championship cup won by the team at St. Paul last winter, and said he hoped that teams would be put in the field next year and the year after, and that these would be winners, in order that the cup might remain the property of the city of Thief River Falls.

Needs Club's Support.

Dr. O. F. Mellby, president of the board of education, said that the city was like a boy growing out of his clothes. The school population has increased until taking care of it properly is a serious matter. A realization on the part of the citizens, however, of just the conditions with which the board has to contend at this time, the support of the Commercial club, and a determination on the part of everyone to do all in their power to straighten matters out will soon place everything in smooth-running order again. He hoped that the citizens generally would stand by the board in anything found necessary to keep the schools up to their present efficient status.

"Strong Community Spirit."

One of the best addresses of the evening was delivered by Supt. J H. Hay. His subject was "City Schools and Community Spirit," and he handled the matter in his usual clear and forceful manner. He said that in all his travels he had never seen what is called "community spirit" displayed to such extent as in Thief River Falls. Every proposition attacked by the people has been satisfactorily disposed of and every project entered into has been brought to a successful conclusion. Prof. Hay said that we sometimes were prone to emphasize the little things that amount to nothing and thus disagree for the time being, but when something really worth while presents itself, we are for it with compelling unanimity. We should give each other credit for trying our best to build up the community, and if we do this the little things at times arising to vex us will be swept away and only that which is worth while will remain.

An Inspiring Meeting.

The meeting was one of the best ever held by the club. The addresses, while short, were to the point and each one of them contained something of much value if it will only be accepted in the proper spirit. A delightful feature of the evening were the piano solos by Thomas Stauff and H. O. Kjomme.

ORDER FOR HEARING ON PETITION FOR DETERMINATION OF HEIRS OF HOMESTEAD SETTLER.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,

FIRST SHIPMENT BRINGS $1,460.51

Thirty-five Head of Cattle and Hogs Marketed by Thief River Shippers Association.

HOGS BRING TOP MARKET

John Phillips Includes Consignment of Five Head Weighing Total of 2,140 Pounds for Which $9.70 per Hundred Was Received.

R. L. Muzzy, resident manager of the Thief River Shippers association, returned Saturday from South St. Paul, where he had marketed the first shipment of stock sent out from this city under the auspicces of the assiociation. Twelve shippers were represented in this consignment, which contained a total of 35 head of stock. Mr. Muzzy struck the market at a very favorable time, prices being particularly good at the time of the car's arrival.

There were 27 head of beef cattle and eight hogs in the car. The total amount received for the consignment was $1,460.51, this netting the shippers $1,389.87 after all the transportation, commission and yardage charges had been deducted.

Brought Top Market Price.

The best price received for the beef offered was eight cents per pound, this being the amount paid for a steer shipped by John Brown. Five hogs shipped by John Phillips also sold near the top, these bringing $9.70 per hundred. The five head weighed a total of 2,140 pounds, and the amount received for them was $207.58

Following are the names of the shippers and the number of head sold by each: Cattle—H. P. Rudd 13; Walde Christianson, 2; John Sjosvold, 1; Johnson Berg, 2; R. Johnson 3; Adolph Raupock, 2; John Brown, 1; Andrew Jorde, 1; H. C. Woolsen, 1; Chris Porter, 1. Hogs—John Phillips, 5; Frank Kines, 2; Andrew Jorde, 1.

More Will Follow.

Manager Muzzy is well pleased with the success attending the first shipment of stock entrusted to the new association. The prices received were very satisfactory and the stock reached its destination without accident and in fine condition. He expects that from now on more interest will be taken in the work of the association and that shipments will be regular at least once a month.

Had the farmers represented in this shipment attempted to market their stock individually the cost of doing so would have fallen much more heavily upon each one. This association method of selling stock has been found to be the most satisfactory wherever it has been tried out, and there is no reason to suppose that the local organization will prove an exception.

Any farmer contemplating the shipping of stock, whether a member or not, should notify Mr. Muzzy and send the consignment in care of the association. There is no doubt but that he will become a regular member when once the convenience and general value of such membership becomes apparent.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET WAS MEMORABLE EVENT

Juniors Present Interesting Program And Arrange Very Attractive Decorations.

The first event of the graduating class of 1916 was held at the Lincoln high school last Saturday evening when the annual Junior-Senior banquet was held. Fifty members of the Senior class, with Miss Avis Akre as class advisor, constituted the honor guests, and in addition the members of the faculty of the high school and the members of the board of education and their wives attended. In all there were approximately one hundred and thirty-five present at the banquet.

The banquet will stand out prominently in the minds of those who were present, as well as in the history of the school, for it was one of the most extensive and elaborate affairs of its kind ever attempted by one class in honor of another. The entire arrangements were left in charge of the Junior committee, assisted by Albert Johnson, class advisor, and it must be admitted to their credit that their efforts resulted in many boquets for the class of 1917.

The vivands, prepared by the Junior class, were tasty and delicious. The menu was as follows:

Fruit Cocktail
Patties aux Bichamel
Pommes de terre a' la Anciene
Parker House Rolls
Olives
Salade de Pois Saratoga Wafers
Biscuit Glace Assorted Cakes
Coffee
Mints Salted Almonds

Misses Gertrude O'Neill, Gena Granum and Florence Prichard acted as caterers, and had charge of the kitchen and banquet proper, and to these young ladies much credit is due for the efficient manner in which their part was executed. Twenty Sophomore girls, dressed in white, assisted in serving.

An exceptionally interesting program had been prepared by the Junior committee, and was given between the banquet courses, all the numbers being well received. The original Norwegian poem entitled, "Humoreske," by Edwin Alnes, was received with an unlimited amount of applause and the number as presented was a treat. Miss Dorothy Bottleson, president of the Junior class, presided during the evening as toastmistress, and the manner in which the young lady handled her part was remarkable. Supt. J. H. Hay was called upon by the toastmistress and responded in his usual pleasing manner, paying a high compliment to the Juniors. Dr. O. F. Mellby, of the board of education, also responded pleasingly. President Rheuben Aga, of the Senior class, bade farewell to the Juniors and extended thanks on behalf of the Seniors to Supt. Hay and Miss Syneva Grindeland, high school principal, and other faculty members, for co-operating with the class during their school year. The program follows:

Music—Orchestra.
"We Greet You"—Pres. Dorothy Bottleson, '17.
Piano Solo—Doris Halverson, '17.
"Humoreske"—Edwin Alnes, '17.
Music—Orchestra.
"There's a Reason"—Walter Siems, '16.
"Buttered Toast"—Dr. O. F. Mellby.
Music—Orchestra.
"Dry Toast"—Prof. J. H. Hay.
"Dee-Lighted"—Pres. Reuben Aga, '16.
"The Orange and the Black"—Octette.
Music—Orchestra.

Taken from every point of view, it is safe to say that no more pleasing banquet has been given in the city, than this Junior—Senior affair, and the class of 1916 can carry with it a lingering memory of the social relations that were evident at this function.

HOW APPENDICITIS CAN BE PREVENTED.

Thief River Falls people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This simple mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Adler-i-ka has easiest and most thorough action of anything we ever sold. F. J. Stebbins, druggist.

The best wishes and congratulations of their whole circle of friends go with them.

HIGH SCHOOL ANNUAL TO BE ELABORATE JOB

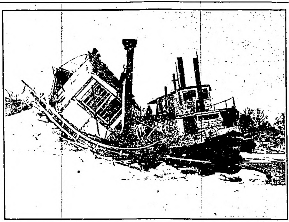
"The Prowler," Now in Course of Preparation, Will Surpass Anything in This Section.

The graduating class of the Thief River Falls high school will this year issue a class annual which will in all respects be the most pretentious and elaborate affair of its kind ever attempted in this section of the state. The editor and his assistants have been working hard to get the material in shape, but this is now accomplished and the copy is in the hands of The Times, from which office it will be issued. The fine half-tone engravings with which the work will be replete have arrived, and the linotype and press work will be begun at once. It is expected that the book will be completed in about two weeks.

The expense incident to the publication of a work of this kind is rather large and it is the intention of the class to cover this by a sale of books. These will be worth more than the $1.50 asked for them, simply as a work indicating the scope of the schools of the city, and will have a much greater value to most purchasers because of their associations.

The editors in charge of the work are as follows: Editor-in-chief, Glenn Anderson; associate editor, Rheuben Aga; business manager, Milton Weeks; assistant, Walter Siems; treasurer and sales manager, Gynter Tessum; organizations, Jean Hay and Evangeline Burns; athletics, Roy Brown; literary, Anna Tanem and Isabelle Isaacson; miscellaneous, Wm. Hoag and Mary Von Prichard; calendar, Agnes Elg and Anna Bredesen; kodak, Carl Hovie; artist, Fred Scanlon; stenographer, Willis Fasel.

The book will be 7½x10½ inches in size and is expected to contain about 60 pages.



What Happened at Red Lake When Ice Piled Up.

BOATS STOVE IN BY RED LAKE ICE

"Mud Hen," "Chippewa" and a Government Dredge Wrecked During the Spring Break-up.

ICE STRONG A WEEK AGO

Peter Eberhart, Who Investigated Conditions at the Lake, Thinks South Winds of Friday Broke Up the Pack.

The breaking up of the ice in the Red Lakes caused considerable damage to water craft along the south shore of the lower lake on Wednesday of last week. Two steamers and a government dredge were practically destroyed, being crushed when the high wind drove the heavy floes against their sides.

Peter Eberhart of Thief River Falls, perhaps the most thoroughly posted man on Red Lake conditions to be found in this section, made a trip of inspection last week and reported the damage upon his return. Mr. Eberhart has built most of the boats plying the lakes for the past ten years, and his opinion as to the amount of damage sustained is the most reliable obtainable.

High Wind Drives Ice.

Mr. Eberhart was at the Red Lake agency on Thursday, April 19, and he found that on the day previous a high wind had driven the floating ice in the lake against the south shore, catching the steamers "Mud Hen" and "Chippewa" in such manner as to completely demolish the hull of the former boat, which was nearest the shore. The "Chippewa" was also badly damaged, but it may be possible that this vessel can again be made seaworthy. The accompanying photograph, secured by Mr. Eberhart, gives a good idea of what happened to the boats.

Had Been Confiscated.

The "Mud Hen" was built by Mr. Eberhart ten years ago. In 1914 he sold the vessel to parties operating on the lakes, and it has since had somewhat of an interesting career. It was a number of times seized by the government on a charge of carrying intoxicating liquors in prohibited territory, and last summer was finally confiscated. Just who has sustained a loss is therefore somewhat hard to determine as the original operators had already lost the vessel and the government had never paid anything for it. The "Chippewa" is a government boat employed in the different lines of business connected with the agency. She was built about five years ago.

Other Boats Damaged.

The "Pomona," a gasoline launch owned by Cook Brothers, is resting on the shore about three rods from the water line. This boat is not thought to be injured to any great extent. The "Beltrami," a tow boat belonging to the Crookston Lumber company, and the "James Meehan," property of the Thief River Lumber company, had not been injured at the time of Mr. Eberhart's visit. These boats have been resting on the bottom at the outlet of the lake during the past three years, and while it is likely that the strong wind of Friday drove the ice in that direction with sufficient force to completely demolish them, the loss will be but slight as they had been practically abandoned to their fate anyway.

Some Fine Territory.

Mr. Eberhart says that there is some of the finest land in Minnesota included in the Red Lake reservation—and some not so fine. On the shore of the lower lake there is a stretch extending from Magua point to the Cross Lake school house which is excellent agricultural land. It is now covered with mixed hardwood and the soil is of the kind producing the best corn and small grain. The peninsula separating the two lakes will some day be the fruit country of the north, according to good authorities. The finest timber now remaining standing in Minnesota is in the territory near these lakes.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY TO BE PRESENTED MAY 19

"Seven-Twenty-Eight," A High Class Comedy, Will Be Offered At Auditorium.

The 1916 graduating class of the Thief River Falls high school will present their annual class puay on Friday evening, May 19th, at the Auditorium. The production chosen is "Seven-Twenty-Eight," a comedy in four acts, which under its former name, "The Boomerang" proved a glittering success in the hands of John Drew. The presentation of this comedy calls for acting of a rather higher order than is the case with most productions ordinarily selected by amateur actors, but the members of the cast are putting some hard work at rehearsing, and as they have on previous occosions proven themselves equal to any task they have undertaken, they may be depended upon not to fall down at the end of their school work.

Following is the cast of characters:

Courtney Corliss	Roy Brown
Florence Bargiss	Mary Prichard
Mr. Bargiss	Harold Schmitt
Mrs. Bargiss	Jean Hay
Mr. Hollyhock	Milton Weeks
Mrs. Hollyhock	Evangeline Burns
Prof. Gasleigh	William Hoag
Signor Tamborini	Rhuben Aga
Jessie	Alice Wilson
The Postman	Ray Robinson
Jobbins	Walter Siems

Act I.—The theory of the Boomerang. The search is begun, and the "Scattered Leaflets" arrive.

Act II.—The Serpent in the Garden. Serpent—Mr. Gasleigh. The boomerangs are cast.

Act III.—Intoxication of the Metropolis. The Drama of the Missing Lamp and the Romance of the Forsaken. A novel illumination.

Act IV.—The Boomerang's return His Lordship proposes, and Destiny is fulfilled.

Time of presentation.—Two hours and a half.

The scene of the first and second acts is at Bargiss's country place, somewhere in the Empire State.

The scene of the third and fourth acts is in the city near Central Park.

CHOICE OF THREE FARMS; LOCATES IN PENNINGTON

B. G. Brownley, a prominent resident of Blue Earth county, arrived in Thief River Falls the first of the week, bringing with him two carloads of agricultural implements and farmers effects. Mr. Brownley recently purchased a quarter section of land two miles north of Stop No. 12 on the Minnesota Northwestern railway, which it is his intention to at once put into crop. Besides all necessary farming implements, Mr. Brownley brought with him 16 head of horses, and these will at once be put to work getting the land in shape.

Accompanying Mr. Brownley were two men who will have charge of the work on the place. Besides the putting in of the crops, it is the intention to at once begin the construction of a fine residence and large barn.

This farm it is the intention of Mr. Brownley to present to his son, who will graduate from the Macalester college in June. The young man has chosen agriculture as his profession, and the father gave him the choice of three locations upon which to settle. One of these is in Iowa, another in Montana, while the third, in Pennington county, is the one selected. All the conditions surrounding each of the three pieces of land were carefully considered, and the one located here was chosen, being considered best in point of location, climate, markets and fertility.

Young Mr. Brownley will start out with everything in his favor, and as his selection indicates he is a man of sound judgment his success as a farmer should be marked.

On Saturday evening, April 29, at the parsonage of the Norwegian Synod church, occurred the marriage of Harry Oscar Werner to Inga Annetta Bjirkin. Both of the young people are well known in Thief River Falls, the groom having been in the employ of the Thief River Grocery company for a number of years and is now employed there as shipping clerk. The bride has made her home here for some time, being employed as waitress at the Evelyn hotel. The Times joins in with their large host of friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey on the sea of matrimony.

On Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock occurred the marriage of Leonard DuChamp and Agnes Dostal, Rev. R. L. Barackman officiating. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents on the East Side and was a quiet affair. The guests were a few relatives of the groom, and the family and some intimate friends of the bride. These young people carry with them the best wishes of a wide circle of friends as they embark on their voyage.

On Friday evening, May 5, the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church will give a social evening in the church basement. All members of the church and their friends, young people and the elder, are invited. A musical program will be rendered during the evening and refreshments will be served. Strangers are especially requested to be present.

MAVIE.

The meeting of the Cloverleaf Farmers club advertised for Saturday was postponed indefinitely. The county commissioners of Marshall county were making an inspection of the ditch situation in the section just to the north of Mavie and most of the farmers in that neighborhood were present at the meeting held at the home of John Phillip, where the matter was discussed. It was decided not to hold another meeting of the club until after the work of seeding has been finished, as no one is expected to have much time for anything else for a couple or three weeks.

Seeding is in full swing on the farms in the neighborhood. The rain of last Friday night retarded work but slightly, as the winds and sun the next day dried things up pretty well again.

Ditch No. 20, to the north of here was very high last week. Farmers living as far as three miles back complained of the amount of water they had to contend with. It is understood that the Marshall county commissioners contemplate the extension of this ditch still further, and it is feared here that this will only make matters worse.

Henry Dau of near Germantown, was in Mavie on Saturday. Mr. Dau returned last fall from an extended visit in Germany, getting back just in time to prevent being grabbed for the army. He had extended his visit until the laws again made him a citizen of the fatherland, but being a good American, he figured that he would much rather be farming in northwestern Minnesota than fighting in the trenches.

Halvor Levas, residing one mile southwest of Mavie, has finished the erection of a fine barn and is working hard to complete the new residence on his place. These will be among the best in this section of the county.

M. Zachar is moving onto his farm adjoining Mavie on the east. He has begun to build his fences and will put considerable of his acreage into crop this spring. Mr. Zachar comes from North Dakota and is bringing with him a full complement of farmer's effects. He has already made purchases of considerable stock and will go at farming on a rather elaborate scale. He is one of the largest landowners in this section of the county.

Benno Menzel, whose residence was destroyed by fire about ten days ago, has begun the erection of a fine home to take its place. Mr. Menzel lost not only his home, but everything it contained, in the fire, and carried no insurance on the place. The insurance companies refused the risk because of the fact that there was a stovepipe instead of a brick chimney on the structure, and Mr. Menzel had the same evening brought home the necessary brick for making the needed change. This can now be used as a part of the new house.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Corns All Gone! Let's ALL Kick!"

Every Corn Vanishes by Using Wonderful, Simple "Gets-It." Never Fails. Applied in 2 Seconds.

Isn't it wonderful what a difference just a little "Gets-It" makes,—on corns and calluses? It's always night somewhere in the world, with many folks humped up, with cork-screwed faces, gouging, picking, drilling out their corns, making packages of their toes with plasters, bandages, tape and contraptions,—and the "holler" in their corns goes on forever! Don't you do it. Use "Gets-It," it's marvelous, simple, never fails. Apply it in 2 seconds. Nothing to stick to the stocking, hurt or irritate the toe. Pain stops. Corn comes "clean off," quick. It's one of the gems of the world. Try it—you'll kick—from joy. For corns, calluses, warts, bunions.

"Whee! I Don't Care! I Got Rid of My Corns With 'Gets-It'!"

Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.

At Last--A One-Adjustment Cream Separator

BEFORE you buy any cream separator, come in and look at the Primrose. But one adjustment is needed to keep it in perfect operating condition. This adjustment is a simple one for keeping the bowl at the correct height—an adjustment that you or your wife can safely make.

The adjustment is made from the outside of the separator by either raising or lowering the bearing containing the hardened steel point, upon which the spindle revolves. A slight turn with a screwdriver, perhaps once a year, does the work.

The Primrose is a well-constructed, close-skimming, durable cream separator, one it will pay you well to buy. When can you arrange to see it?

Karo Premium Griddle

$2.25 SOLID ALUMINUM GRIDDLE FOR 85 CENTS IN CASH AND LABELS FROM 50 CENTS' WORTH OF KARO — GET YOUR KARO LABELS AT ONCE AND SEND FOR YOUR GRIDDLE

EVERYBODY these days knows aluminum ware—the highest priced and the most satisfactory kitchen ware used in this country.

Here is your chance to get a 10½ inch Solid Aluminum Griddle for less than the wholesale price.

This Aluminum Griddle needs no greasing. It heats uniformly all over; it doesn't smoke up the house; it doesn't chip; it doesn't rust and it looks so much better and cleaner than any of the old kind of griddles.

It bakes Griddle Cakes that are really just as crisp as you want them to be. With Karo on them, they are the finest eating in the world—and so digestible because baked without grease that many people who haven't dared to eat griddle cakes for years, are enjoying Karo and Griddle Cakes now.

At great expense we are seeking to place a Karo Aluminum Griddle in the homes of all Karo users, so that Karo—the famous spread for griddle cakes and waffles—may be served on the most deliciously baked cakes that can be made.

Go to your grocer today and get 50 cents' worth of Karo and send us the labels and 85 cents in stamps or money order at once. You'll get your Aluminum Griddle by prepaid parcel post.

You know Karo, no doubt. It is the best known and most universally liked syrup in this country. Last year 65,000,000 cans were used.

Get your Karo today—and send us the labels and 85 cents at once, so as to be sure of getting yours. We will also send you free the famous Corn Products Cook Book.

St. Hilaire News

Waring Medicine Show.

The B. B. Waring Medicine Show company that has been with us the past week advertising the Quaker Remedies, closed their performance here Saturday evening. Their shows during the entire week were well patronized and a great deal of the Quaker Remedies were sold. A number of very pretty presents were given away and also some useful ones, among which were: an iron bed, a dresser, and two oak rockers. A popular lady contest was also given and votes were given out with each purchase. Miss Alta Olson received the highest number of votes as popular lady and was presented with a pretty diamond ring.

Markham Hotel Building.

The work of wrecking the old Markham Hotel building was resumed last week and has been progressing rapidly since then. The interior is almost completely torn down, and the work this week has been mostly on the exterior. The dormer windows on the third floor have been taken off and the other windows in the building have also been removed. The windmill back of the hotel has been taken down and it is expected that a few more weeks of steady work on the old structure will complete the job.

Ladies' Aid.

Last Friday was a very busy day in our town, at least in the feasting line. Mrs. Bergford of the United Lutheran church entertained the Ladies' Aid of that congregation at her home, and Mesdames Jackson and Fellman entertained the Ladies' Aid of the Swedish Mission church at the Rest rooms. Both aids were well attended and delicious luncheons were served.

Leave For Iowa.

Mrs. I. Wallace and her son, Donald, left for her former home at Pella, Iowa, where the Wallace family expect to locate for the future. They were accompanied by Mr. Wallace as far as Crookston, but owing to a number of business transactions Mr. Wallace was obliged to return to St. Hilaire Wednesday morning. Mr. Wallace expects to join his family as soon as his business affairs are settled. Their many friends regret their departure and wish them much success in their new enterprise.

SHOULD IMPROVE SUPPLY AT ONCE

State Sanitary Engineer Recommends Immediate Action With Regard To City Water.

BOTH SOURCES DANGEROUS

A Filtration Plant Would Make The River Water Safe, but Well Supply is Preferable From Strictly Sanitary Viewpoint.

"This supply should be improved immediately. Two possible sources may be considered.

(1) Water From Red Lake River. A filtration and disinfecting plant may be constructed which, if intelligently operated, will render the water from this river safe for public consumption.

(2) Water From Drilled Wells—Water from this source is abjectionable on account of its excessive hardness and high iron content, the latter being the cause of its disagreeable color. A water-softening plant can be installed by which the hardness of this water can be materially reduced and the iron content removed. From deep well supply is preferable to a supply from the Red Lake river.

(3) For Immediate Protection,—A liquid chlorine disinfecting plant should be installed at the pumping station, by means of which water which is pumped from the Red Lake River can be treated.

J. A. Childs, the sanitary engineer sent to Thief River Falls about a month ago at the request of the city council for the purpose of making an examination of the water supply of the city, has submitted his report to Dr. J. E. Douglass, the local health officer. As this report is of the greatest interest to all the people residing in the city, such parts of it as deal with the supply itself are hereby given in full. After a description of the wells, the machinery used in pumping, the storage facilities and other facts connected with the physical aspects of this part of the system, Mr. Child's report says:

The Drilled Well.

"The sanitary aspect of this supply is good. A pit approximately two feet in depth by eight feet square surrounds the well. This pit is concrete lined, has a concrete floor and is provided with a private drain leading to the Red Lake river. The well casing extends to an elevation of approximately one foot above the floor of the pit. The floor of this pit is at an elevation of about eight feet above the high water mark of the Red Lake river.

Red Rake River.

"The water obtained from the Red Lake river flows by gravity through a 24 inch galvinized steel intake pipe from a point near the center of the river to a brick lined circular intake well on the west bank of the river near the pumping station. This intake well is approximately six feet in diameter by 15 feet in depth. The water is pumped from this intake well by means of a Smith-Vaile triplex power pump, eight and one-half inches by 10 inches, double acting. The pump is driven by a 65 horsepower electric motor.

"The sanitary aspect of the Red Lake river at this point is very poor. This river receives the drainage from a large area and is subject to contamination at many points.

"The distribution system consists of approximately five to six miles of water main and a 75,000 gallon elevated storage tank located near the pumping station. The water is supplied to approximately 500 customers. During the winter months the deep well pump is operated almost continuously. During the summer months it has been the custom to discontinue the use of the deep well water in preference to the water from the Red Lake river, on account of its being softer. The daily winter consumption being about 150,000 gallons per day, the summer consumption being about 200,000 gallons. At the present time river water is being pumped into the city mains on the average of twice every week.

Analytical Data.

"The analysis of sample 14,908, shows a count of 5,000 bacteria per c. c., and B. coli was found present in 100 c. c. amounts. The physical examination of this sample shows a water with a high turbidity and color. The chemical examination indicates a water of moderate hardness and some incrusting material.

"The analysis of sample 14,909, representing water collected directly from the drilled well, shows a count of 12 bacteria per c. c., and B. coli was not found present in 100 c. c. amounts. The physical examination of this sample shows a water with a low degree of turbidity and considerable color. The chemical examination indicates a relatively hard water having no encrusting material. The relatively high iron content is the cause of the turbidity and color.

"The analysis of samples 14,905, 14,906 and 14,907, representing water collected on the distribution system, shows counts of 12,000, 230 and 150 bacteria per c. c. and B. coli was found present in 100 c. c. amounts in two of the samples. The high bacterial count and presence of B. coli would indicate the presence of contamination in the public water supply on the date of this investigation.

Conditions Unsatisfactory.

"The field investigation showed conditions which were unsatisfactory from a sanitary point of view, and in the analytical results indications of contamination were found. This water supply cannot be considered safe for public consumption in its existing condition."

The report is signed by J. A. Childs, engineer, and approved by H. A. Whittaker, director. The document is accompanied by a detailed statement of conditions attending each of the five samples obtained by Mr. Childs while here.

SANATORIUM SITE IS IDEAL LOCATION

Tri-County Committee Selects Twenty Acres in Rocksbury Township.

The committee appointed by the commissioners of Pennington, Marshall and Roseau counties to have charge of preliminary work incident to the erection of a sanitorium to be used jointly, met in Thief River Falls on Thursday of last week and selected a site for the institution. After considering a number of locations the committee decided that a twenty acre plot owned by Martin Bothun in Rocksbury township presented an ideal location, and this will be the place recommended to the state advisory committee. This plot is a short distance to the south of town on the west side of the river, well drained and beautifully situated. It is without question the most conveniently located and altogether desirable site to be secured anywhere in the three counties, and the decision of the committee will be generally endorsed.

The advisory committee of the state board of control will now make an inspection of the premises. This committee is expected here during the coming week and will make their investigations mainly with a view to discovering whether or not the location meets all the requirements with reference to sanitation.

The sanitorium board making the selection is composed of the following members: Pennington county— Dr. O. F. Mellby, Thief River Falls; A. C. Tvedt, Goodridge, K. O. Gigstad, St. Hilaire. Marshall county—Dr. Anderson, Warren; Jonas Sjoberg, Middle River. Roseau county— W. B. Giselson, Badger; Louis Enstrom, Roseau.

POOL ROOM MEN DENIED TEMPORARY INJUNCTION

City Ordinance Recently Enacted For Their Regulation Held Valid By Judge Watts.

Judge William Watts in chambers at Crookston, this week ruled that the recently enacted pool room and bowling alley ordinance of the city of Thief River Falls is valid.

The ordinance went into effect about a month ago, but Frank Effinger, W. F. Edgar and Phillip Zeh, the first two owners of pool rooms and the last named the proprietor of a skating rink, applied for a temporary injunction restraining the city authorities from putting the ordinance into effect. By agreement between the attorneys all matters in any way pertaining to the case were to be included in the pleadings and the first decree of the court taken as applying to any point which might be made an issue but which was not specifically stated in the application.

The decision sustains the ordinance in every detail and it is not thought likely that any further attempt will be made to evade its provisions. The police department has been given orders to enforce the measure strictly, which means that all pool rooms will close at 10 o'clock at night and remain closed on Sunday, except between the hours of one and six o'clock.

City Attorney Theodore Quale appeared for the city in upholding the right of the council to pass and enforce this measure, while the applicants were represented by Charles E. Boughton, of Red Lake Falls.

Will Bring Family Here.

E. O. Mogensen of Jerdee & Mogensen, left last Saturday evening for Minneapolis to attend to matters that called him. He will return June 1st and will be accompanied by his family, to make their future home in Thief River Falls.

WOMEN'S MEET A BIG SUCCESS

Delegates From Practically Every Town in Ninth District Attend Annual Convention Here.

MRS. RUSSELL RE-ELECTED

Is Made President For Ensuing Year Without Opposition— Excellent Addresses on Art School Work and Home Economics.

The most successful meeting in the history of the Ninth District Federation of the Women's clubs closed with a meeting at the Auditorium here on Thursday evening. The attendance was good, nearly every city and town in the district being represented. Besides these delegates there were present representatives from the state federation, as well as a number whose homes are in other districts.

The program was carried out substantially as printed in the Times of the previous week. Mrs. William Russell of Moorhead, president of the Ninth District clubs, presided, and at the close of the meeting, was again chosen president.

Among those who delivered addresses during the session were: Mrs. William T. Coe, of Wyzata, president of the state federation; Miss Bessie Rowe, Mrs. Wells and Miss Pringle of Minneapolis; Mrs. William Russell and Mrs. Sharp of Moorhead; Miss Rudd, Ada; Mrs. J. P. Easton, Warren; Mrs. W. A. Marin, Crookston. Besides these the following reported on club work: Mrs. T. Weum, Moorhead; Mrs. G. H. Schuck, Mrs. Marsh and Mrs. Shoug, Crookston; Mrs. W. B. Carmen and Mrs. Hardy, Detroit; Mrs. Olaf Berg, St. Hilaire; Mrs. S. N. Peterson, Perley; Miss Florence Carlson, Fergus Falls.

The Commercial club rooms were well filled at all day meetings and good crowds attended the presentation of the lictrary and musical programs at the Auritorium in the evenings. It was estimated that there were about 140 ladies in attendance at one time or another during the sessions but as many of these were quartered with friends during their stay in town it has been impossible to secure a complete list. Those attending and whose names have been able to obtain are as follows:

Mrs. W. T. Coe, state president, Wyzata.

Miss Bessie Rowe, Mrs. Wells, Miss Pringle, Minneapolis; Mrs. E. H. Loyhead, Fairbault; Mrs. William Russell, president Ninth district federation; Mrs. Sharp and Mrs. T. Weum, Moorhead; Mrs. A. L. Hanson, Mrs. D. C. Lighthouse, Mrs. Allen Harvey, Mrs. W. B. Holmes, Mrs. Jason Weatherhead, Mrs. Bosworth, Mrs. Tenny, Miss Rudd, Ada; Mrs. J. P. Easton, Mrs. L. Holcomb, Mrs. R. Robinson, Mrs. F. Wittensten, Mrs. Aires, Mrs. Sandberg, Warren; Mrs. W. B. Carmen, Mrs. S. D. Ensign, Mrs. S. D. Carriel, Mrs. Outram, Mrs. Larson, Detroit; Mrs. Weston, Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. Sanders, Miss Phillips, Miss Seaman, Mahnomen; Mrs. D. T. Whalen, Mrs. Charles Bigelow, Mrs. Olaf. Aaberg, Miss Kathyrn Peterson, St. Hilaire; Mrs. Walters, Mrs. R. V. D. Carr, Mrs. Hjertoes, Middle River; Mrs. S. N. Peterson, Mrs. J. Eastwood, Perley; Mrs. E. L. Jenal, Miss Anna Struett, Perham; Mrs. W. A. Marin, Mrs. H. W. Misner, Mrs. A. A. Just, Mrs. Charles Loring, Mrs. H. G. Evans, Mrs. E. Vance, Mrs. H. Remele, Mrs. A. D. Stephens, Mrs. William Watts, Mrs. C. E. Potts, Miss Ethel Vance, Mrs. G. H. Schuck, Mrs. C. W. Wilder, Mrs. R. F. Smith, Mrs. L. Miller, Mrs. M. Stephans, Mrs. Mc Greoger, Mrs. Ireland, Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Skoug, Mrs. Selvig, Crookston; Mrs. Pomeroy, Mrs Mc Grath (district secretary), Barnesville; Mrs. E. M. Miller, Mrs. William Niles, Miss Florence Carlson, Fergus Falls.

BASE BALL RECRUITS TO BEGIN WORK AT ONCE

If you can play ball— or think you can— you are ordered to show up at the fair grounds on the first fine evening after supper. Manager Nason has begun the selection of his team for the summer, and he is only too willing to give everyone a chance to prove what he can do. There will be no severe examination—all the qualifications demanded is that a man be able to play ball and conduct himself as a gentleman. And, according to Mr. Nason, there will be no favoritism shown, now or later in the season. Everyone must keep any position to which he is assigned on his merits or make room for some one who is more able or willing.

The interest in the ball team is increasing, and there is now no doubt but that a penant contender will be put on the field.

PROPOSAL MADE BY GAS CONCERN

Requests Three Years in Which to Have Everything in Readiness For Operation.

ADVANCE TWO ORDINANCES

Water Tank Removal Proposition is Passed and Second Reading Given Railway Franchise Measure —Water Report Submitted.

The Gas and Electric Construction company of Minneapolis, has made a formal proposition to the city of Thief River Falls, offering to install a gas plant here providing the use of the streets is granted for the purpose of laying mains. The concern offers to have the work completed before the expiration of three years, but the preliminary proposition contains no stipulation as to when the work is to be commenced nor how much of it is to be performed each year.

The company offers to furnish commercial gas to consumers at a price of not more than $1.50 per thousand feet, the usual discount of ten per cent to be allowed on promptly paid bills. The city may purchase the plant on the first of any January after 1921, at the appraised value of the plant, said value to be determined by commissioners appointed for the purpose.

The matter was held over for future consideration. There seemed to be a disposition on the part of the councilmen to balk at the three year provision contained in the proposal, but this may be straightened out through later negotiations.

Given Second Reading.

The ordinance having for its purpose the granting of a franchise empowering railway companies to lay their tracks along the west side of Davis avenue was given its second reading, no objection to the measure developing.

The ordinance providing that all water tanks must be located at least 25 feet from any sidewalk crossing was passed after being given its third reading.

Hansen Re-appointed.

Mayor F. H. Gambell was present and asked that his reappointment of C. L. Hansen as chairman of the park board be confirmed. Mr. Hansen and his colleagues on the board have in mind a general park plan which includes the entire city in its scope, and the council evinced a disposition to allow them to continue the good work by unanimously confirming the appointment.

A committee composed of Chairman Bakke, T. L. Melgaard and Mat Barzen, representing the charter commission, were present and asked that their duties with regard to the printing and circulation of the proposed measure be more fully explained to them. They were instructed to go ahead and have the printing done and the circulation attended to.

Will Improve Lot.

The committee appointed to look after the condition of a piece of property acquired by the city for park purposes some years ago, reported that the property needed clearing up and recommeneded that the lot be grubbed and plowed. They were empowered to go ahead and have the work done at once.

The monthly reports of the city officials were submitted and filed.

Conditions at the incenerator were reported as bad, it being charged that refuse was being dumped on the ground near the plant. It was decided to give the superintendent police powers and also hire another man for the purpose of helping with the work during the next two months.

The sum of $300 was appropriated for the city band to aid in defraying the expenses incidental to Memorial Day exercises. It was also unanimously decided to allow the members of the fire department $10 each as pay for services during the month of May. This sum will be used for the purpose of defraying the expense incident to attending the firemen's tournament in June.

Pool Room Ordinance Stands.

A committee representing the pool and billiard hall proprietors was present and asked if it would be possible for them to secure a modification of the ordinance governing their places of business so that they might be enabled to keep the front part of their place open until 11 o'clock in the evening. The council did not deem it advisable to make any changes in the provisions of the ordinance, these having been upheld by the district court, and the committee was so informed. Licenses will therefore be granted with the understanding that the ordinance is to be strictly lived up to.

A number of residents of Conley avenue sent in a complaint against a neighbor, who, they claimed, was in many respects undesirable. It was decided that this was a matter coming more properly under the jurisdiction of the police department, and Mayor Gambell offered to see just what could be done in this matter.

The report of the state sanitary engineer on the condition of the water supply was read. This report will be found in full in another column of this issue.

Much Minor Business.

Edward Lee and Holt & George were granted plumber's licenses. Building permits were granted to Maurice Giller, L. C. Bradley, J. Borry and the Trinity church. The largest item was that of Mr. Bradley, who will construct a dwelling at a cost of $500. The others were for minor improvements.

A contingent fund of $200 was placed at the disposal of Mayor Gambell. The light and water committee was instructed to investigate a request for a light at Squaw Point bridge, and the matter of sewers on the east side was laid over until a future meeting.

PRINCESS THEATRE TO CHANGE HANDS

M. L. Clancy and J. D. Heritage Take Over Popular Play House On Monday.

A deal was closed this week whereby M. L. Clancy of Ispheming, Mich., and J. D. Heritage of Virginia, Minn., become the owners of the Princess theatre. H. A. Brumund, the owner of the playhouse and present manager, will conclude his active connection with the house on Sunday night, the new managers opening on Monday.

Mr. Clancy, who it is understood, will be the active manager for the new concern, is a theatre man of many years experience. It is the intention to continue the present excellent program of productions and to supplement these latter on if conditions warrant such a move.

Mr. Clancy has been here for the past week investigating the business and thoroughly satisfied himself as to the future outlook before the deal was closed.

Mr. Brumund, who erected the Princess building and who has been the manager of the theatre since its opening last New Year's Eve, finds that the management of the Hotel Brumund takes all of his time, and although the playhouse has proven most popular with the public and an excellent business venture, he thinks that the new arrangement will work out better for all concerned. He has given the people of Thief River Falls the very best procurable in the way of pictures and the house has under his management enjoyed a reputation second to none in this section of the state.

The new managers have promised to continue practically along the same lines, and there is no reason to fear that the prestige of the house will in any way be lowered under their ownership.

STENVICK FILES FOR RE-ELECTION TO HOUSE

Wilhelm Michelet Will Again Try For Judge of Probate—McGinn Asks Re-election.

Oscar Stenvick of Clearbrook, representative from the Sixty-fifth district, on Monday filed as a candidate for re-election. J. A. Duffy of Red Lake Falls, filed a week ago, and it is rumored that G. T. Jones of Bagley, has also entered the race. This will leave the situation exactly as it was prior to the primaries two years ago, when these same three were candidates for the same office. Jones was the third man in this election, and the finals were between Stenvick and Duffy, the first-named winning out.

Judge of Probate Wilhelm Michelet, filed the first of the week. No opposition has thus far developed but it is rumored that one or possibly two others may make the race.

Robert McGinn, of Thief River Falls, commissioner from the Fourth district, has filed for re-nomination and it is thought that he will not have any opposition. He has made an excellent official and again consents to run principally because of a popular demand that he continue on the job.

Filings for state offices closed last night. County filings will not close until the 29th of this month.

Postmaster Is Indicted.

Among the indictments found by the United States grand jury at Fergus Falls this week was one against Knute O. Flanke, former postmaster at the inland town in Marshall county bearing his name. Flakne was postmaster there for some time and in the indictment is charged with the embezzelment of $144 of government funds, alleged to have been misappropriated during his term of office. Flakne has been making his home in Beltrami, this county, for some time past and is well known in Thief River Falls.

BANKERS TO BE GUESTS TUESDAY

Members of The Ninth District Group to Hold Annual Session in This City.

ADDRESSES BY NOTED MEN

Theo. Wold of Federal Reserve Association, and O. M. Corwin of Farm Mortgage Bankers Association, Among the Speakers.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Ninth District group of the Minnesota Bankers Association will be held at Thief River Falls on Tuesday next. The regular sessions will be at the Commercial club rooms and there will be a banquet at the Hotel Evelyn in the evening. It is expected that practically every village and city in the district will be represented by one or more delegates and that the convention will prove one of the best in the history of the association.

The visitors will register at the club office at 10 o'clock a. m. After the invocation by Rev. Dr. Barackman of the Presbyterian church, the visitors will be welcomed to the city by Mayor F. H. Gambell. W. O. Lundsten will respond on behalf of the delegates. President H. S. Erickson will deliver the annual address, after which the meeting will adjourn for lunch.

Banking men of national prominence will be present on Wednesday afternoon to deliver addresses. Theo. Wold, governor of the Ninth Federal Reserve bank, Minneapolis, will speak on the "Operation of the Federal Reserve Bank since its organization." No recent governmental enactment has created more interest than the reserve bank law, and what Governor Wold will have to disclose concerning its purpose and workings should be of interest to every person in this section.

O. M. Corwin, vice president of the Farm Mortgage Bankers Association, will speak on "Rural Credit Legislation," and as this is a subject in which every farmer, business man and laborer should be particularly interested, as many of these as can possibly attend are invited to do so.

Superintendent J. H. Hay of the Thief River Falls schools, will speak on the subject of "The Relation Between the Farmer and Banker." It is now generally realized by everyone that if a banker is to prosper the farmer must first do so. Much of the legislation and propaganda work in which bankers are interested at this time is being prosecuted more with a view to aiding the farmer than for any other purpose. Very often the tiller of the soil carries the idea that a meeting of bankers is the last thing in which he should be interested, but he never made a more grave mistake. There is no class of people to whom financial men will more gladly listen, and none with whose welfare they are more directly concerned. Farmers are therefore most cordially invited to be present at the open meeting at the Commercial club on Wednesday.

The following topics will be informally discussed by the bankers present.

(1) Educational facilities offered by the American Institute of Bankers, through the Minnesota Bankers Association.

(2) At the session of our legislature, the idea seems to prevail that legislation asked for by the bankers would be harmful for the people.

What method can be used to dispel this tendency?

(3) Best method for bank advertising.

(4) County organization for Bankers.

(Discussion to be limited to a certain number of minutes.)

The banquet tendered the visitors will be at the Hotel Evelyn at 8:30 o'clock. W. W. Pritchard, sr., dean of the Thief River Falls bankers, will be toastmaster, a post for which his experience and temperament most admirably equip him. No set program of toasts has been arranged for this function, the speakers being simply subject to call by the toastmaster and their subjects left to their own choice.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, H. S. Erickson, Detroit; vice president, G. J. Johnson, Donaldson; secretary-treasurer, J. H. Bradish, Hallock. The executive committee is composed of the above officers and F. J. Evans of Fergus Falls, and C. L. Hanson of Thief River Falls.

Move To Minneapolis.

Mrs. Thomas Rowan came up Saturday from Red Lake Falls, where she had been visiting with friends and relatives, to spend the week in Thief River Falls visiting with her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Rowan will leave July 1 for their new home in Minneapolis, where Mr. Rowan will be employed in the offices of the Soo railroad.

The Seventeenth of May

Norwegians owe much to America. Not only have thousands of the people of that nationality found on this side of the Atlantic the opportunities denied them in the old country, but the liberal laws of this land have in many instances been copied by the legislators there and, after being slightly altered to meet the different conditions, adopted by them as the best to be found for the government of a free people. The very Constitution of Norway is largely copied after and based upon that of the United States, adopted but little over a quarter of a century previously.

But Norway has, on the other hand, given to America and the world something besides immigrants. The land of the midnight sun was often in former times referred to as being without a national literature and as possesing no men of letters of more than passing merit. Norwegians have resented this, claiming that the old Norse sagas contain the finest literature of the period in which they were produced, and insist that in spite of the fact the language in which they were written wasafterwardsconfined chiefly to Iceland, they are no less Norwegian in their origin. English and American writers of a later day—Longfellow notable among them—have found in these sagas suggestion and inspiration for some of their best work.

Since Bjerregaard early in the last century wrote "Fjeldeventyret," (The Mountain Adventure.) the world's store of drama and romance has been enriched by the genius of the Norwegians. The homely phraseology and quaint philosophy which makes Peder Dass still beloved among the mountain folk; the court grace of Welhaven's verse and prose; Wergeland's sturdy style in defending Norwegian letters against the influence of the Danish and German—these are but a few of the earlier examples. The writings of Camille Collet, who back in the early fifties started the work for the emancipation of Scandinavian women, merited and received world-wide attention. In latter times Ibsen and Bjornson and Jonas Lie have spread the fame of northern culture wherever books are read or the drama presented.

Ole Bull and Edward Grieg are as well known in America as in Norway. They were the masters of their period in their respective fields of endeavor.

Nansen and Lumholz, Sverderup and Amundsen—the world owes much of its knowledge of the far corners of the earth to the researches of these men.

But it is after all to the sturdy yeomanry of Norway that America owes most and which, in turn, owes most to America. Particularly is this true in this great northwest. Here the blood of the Norseman is largely predominant and here the best work of the race is found. Intelligent, industrious, honest and frugal, these men and women have proven themselves to be just what this particular section needed in the way of a citizenship in order to bring out all its possibilities—materially and spiritually. The claim has been made that were it not for the spur of necessity the Norwegians would be a race of poets and dreamers. Perhaps this is true. Their history in America, however, proves them first and foremost a race of workers, and this section has benefitted by the best of their work.

While retaining until death a strong affection for the far from hospitable land of his forefathers, the Norwegian becomes perhaps the most intensely American of all of our foreign-born population when transplanted. He appreciates the greater returns from his own efforts made possible in this country, but more than anything else, the opportunities afforded his children are what appeal to him. The first question asked by a Norwegian when a change of location is under consideration is: "How far is it to the nearest school house?" Nothing he could say or do would more clearly indicate his character.

The Postponed Settlement

One of the most annoying things with which the business man has to contend is the failure on the part of his customers to realize that a bill should be paid upon presentation. The fact that the debtor is perfectly reliable and honest does not in any manner alter the fact that he should pay a bill when it is due. The creditor supposes that the debtor is honest—if he did not, the accommodation would not have been extended in the first place. He also presumed that the customer is reliable—to the extent at least, of paying a debt at the time established by custom for such payment. The creditor has gone ahead and contracted obligations under the supposition that money due him would be paid at a certain time, and not getting it at that time disorganizes his entire business and causes much anneyance and loss.

It seems be to a habit with some people to keep "standing off" the collector for one reason or another. They will "look the matter up" or "send a check in a day or two." Generally the matter is not looked up, nor is a check sent, and the debtor is again forced to spend valuable time in the collection of the account.

If the people would only realize that all this time and expense must be paid for, that it becomes a charge against the business; that it must be made up by an increased price in the commodity handled, and that the immediate payment of accounts when these are due makes preferred customers of the people so paying, there would be less postponement in making settlements, to the very great benefit of everyone concerned. A strictly cash business, while the ideal way of trading, is not always convenient or advisable. This is particularly the case in a community where regular paydays prevail. To say that it should be an easy matter to get onto a cash basis and stay there is all well enough, but it seems to be a decidedly hard system to inaugurate. Merchants in the smaller towns and cities do not expect that their business will be all cash, and make their arrangements accordingly. They do expect, however, that a bill will be paid when due, and all their own payments are based upon this being the case. When the collections for the month drag out indefinitely it places them oftimes in an embarrassing position. They must pay the wholesalers at a stipulated time or forfeit their discounts, and these amount to a considerable item in the course of a year. The ultimate consumer invariably pays for the laxity in this matter himself, as under present merchandising conditions a merchant must receive a certain percentage over and above all costs if he is to continue in business. When this cost is increased through his inability to make collections, the added burden must of necessity be passed on to the consumer.

Pay cash if possible. If you cannot do this, at least keep your word good by paying when the bill is presented. It is just as easy for you to do so, and it makes a decided difference to the man with whom you are dealing.

Under the Same Banner

While the primaries are about a month away, and there are four candidates for the nomination for United States senator, it would not be surprising to find that the field had narrowed down to a point where only two are considered when the time arrives for making the selections. It is a little better than an even bet that Clapp will be one of these, and it is daily becoming more certain that Kellogg will be the other. There does not seem to be much behind the candidacy of Eberhart except his own ambition, while Lindberg is no where considered seriously.

Charles B. Cheney, political writer of the Minneapolis Journal, calls attention to the fact that the best men in the Republican party in Minnesota, setting aside all factional differences, have united on Kellogg. Commenting upon the situation Mr. Cheney says:

"Frank B. Kellogg's candidacy for the senate appears to have united men of heretofore different factions and elements in the republician party, and so it may result in a somewhat new alignment in state politics. The unusual combinations in the Kellogg camp are causing considerable comment. A candidacy that brings J. F. Jacobson and other former Roosevelt supporters under the same banner as S. R. Van Sant, Fred C. Stevens, J. Adam Bede and R. C. Dunn has accomplished something. Men who agree on scarcely anything in state politics have found a common ground in supporting Kellogg. The same thing has been noted in a smaller way in various localities of the state, as at Albert Lea, Worthington and Luverne."

NO GREAT RUSH FOR THE HONOR

Candidates for Legislature Less Numerous Than Usual.

LITTLE EFFORT TO CONTROL

Big Interests and Various Reform Crowds Not Interfering With Selection of Lawmakers.

St. Paul—(Special)—To all intents and purposes the Fortieth Minnesota legislature is going to be a real go-as-you-please affair, for not only have the interests apparently agreed to forget it and the reform crowds to let it alone, but politics will be absent. It will be the second nonpartisan legislature to gather at the state capitol. In the matter of the filings I never saw less interest shown, and as to the caliber and standing of many of the candidates who have come forward it cannot be said that they are above the average. This lack of interest cannot be explained, but it is true, and the passing of the days only serves to make this condition more plain. That the State Brewers' association is without a finger in the game this year will possibly receive small consideration at the hands of those who claim to see its hand in everything political, but if the organization is taking part its work is not manifest in this neck of the woods.

Opposed to this reported condition of nonactivity on the part of the liquor element one member of the 1915 house, who, by the way, has again offered himself as a candidate for renomination, says a former member of the same body has been very busy in several sections of the state and he insists that the activity of this particular member, who is from Hennepin county, is solely in the interest of the liquor crowd. He declares the ex-legislator was picking house members and the qualification demanded in each case was unqualified opposition to any further regulation of the liquor traffic. That the Anti-Saloon league is busy is accepted, also the Prohibitionists, but the activity of the former, I am told, is confined solely to seeing that no one pledged to a repeal of the county option law gets by, while in the case of the latter absolute prohibition is the issue.

That Justice Albert Schaller of the state supreme court will have to battle to retain his place on the bench is apparent. The first to serve notice of a contest was Thomas Kneeland of Minneapolis, a member of the last house of representatives, and hard on his filing for the place came news from Fairmont to the effect that Judge James H. Quinn of the Seventeenth judicial district had decided to get into the game. Of the two men Judge Quinn is perhaps the most dangerous, and friends of Justice Schaller are not any too well pleased with the situation. It is said that a third candidate is among the possibilities and that this third candidate for Justice Schaller's shoes may be former Justice C. B. Elliott of Minneapolis.

That the contest for the senatorship will overshadow everything else is agreed by the kingmakers generally and this is perhaps responsible for practically no interest at all in the various state offices which will be filled this year. When this letter was in the making bets were even that Attorney General Smith, Secretary of State Schmahl and Judge Mills of the state railroad and warehouse commission would be without opposition for the Republican nomination and the chances were excellent that all three would get by. In the case of the governorship there is absolutely no interest at all, and this in the face of the fact that ordinarily S. G. Iverson, who is contesting Governor Burnquist for the Republican nomination for governor, would bother most anyone against whom he was pitted. This condition is possibly due to the general feeling that Governor Burnquist cannot lose. True, Governor Burnquist looks a sure thing, but even better bets than his excellency have fallen down.

Democracy has not much of a hold on the First congressional district, a fact borne out by more than one contest for congressional honors, but such seems to have been lost on Leonard Virtue of Owatonna and Henry M. Lamberton of Winona, who have offered themselves for the Democratic nomination for congress in that district. Virtue is a former member of the legislature and has a good record, while Lamberton is a well known capitalist of Winona. On the Republican side of the house five of the leading members of the party have announced themselves as candidates to succeed Sydney Anderson. How Sydney feels in a case like this I leave to your own imagination.

While on the subject of congressional contests it might be news to some to say that C. R. Davis of the Third district is threatened with opposition. Word has been brought to St. Paul that George A. McKenzie, a well known attorney of Gaylord and a former member of the legislature, was considering a try at the congressional game and that friends had prevailed to the extent that he had about decided to file. "Mack," when he was a member of the legislature, was quite a power in the lower house. Several good bits of legislation bear his name.

Filings for office made recently with Secretary of State Schmahl include W. G. Calderwood for United States senator on the Prohibition ticket; Carl E. Swannson of Battle Lake for the Democratic nomination for congress from the Ninth district; Albert F. Pratt of Anoka, known as "Fire Alarm" Platt, for the house; Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul for the Republican nomination for United States senator, and S. D. Works for the Democratic nomination for governor. The Democrats, it is understood, will file a complete state ticket. The Progressive party leaders have under consideration the filing of a complete ticket, but may wait until after the Chicago convention.

St. Paul has a new mayor, V. R. Irvin, comparatively unknown, and the combined city press, which supported his opponent, Major Handy, a former newspaper man, are wondering how it happened. A feature of the campaign, which was one of the warmest in the history of the old town, was that those candidates the city press boosted fell by the wayside. In some cases their defeat was overwhelming.

The careful man puts his money in the bank If he dies he won't leave helpless children

Are you a dady?

You love your family; perhaps you waste a lot of money in "dribs and drabs" that if put in the bank now would grow to a big sum.

If you live "you" can enjoy your money, if you don't it will protect your children.

You are setting your boys a good example when you put money in the bank.

Dr. Doran has hundreds of these letters from patients thru the state. You can consult this specialist at Thief River Falls, Evelyn Hotel, Saturday, June 3. Hours 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.—My11-18-25.

Civil Engineer Elmer Johnson came down from Warroad, Wednesday afternoon, after spending a week at that place doing some surveying work for the Northwestern Drainage company. He will return the first of next week to resume his duties.

See the Senior class play, "728" at the Auditorium Friday, May 19.

Golden yellow oats for seed. A very early oat. For sale at Farmers' Elevator.—My-4-11.

About twenty members of the Woman's club of Crookston, left on the Great Northern last Friday afternoon after taking part in the programs of the Federated Woman's club meet held here on Thursday and Friday. Owing to the fact that the Great Northern had not provided for a special car to be set out in the morning, which would have been attached to the afternoon southbound local, many were compelled to stand in the aisles a good part of the way.

Mr. and Mrs. George Walker and little son departed last evening for Minneapolis. From Minneapolis Mr. Walker went to Shakopee, Minn., to take a number of mud baths in hopes of relieveing him from a severe attack of rheumatism, from which he has been suffering. Mrs. Walker will remain in Minneapolis to attend a meeting of the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, and will also attend the marriage of a friend.

The fire department made a run last Friday afternoon to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Oftelie, 508 Markley avenue south, where a small blaze had originated from an unknown cause. Mrs. Oftelie, who was doing some house cleaning in the attic, stated that she thought the fire started in a heap of papers as the result of stepping on a match. With the exception of a small hole being chopped in the roof, very little damage was done.

Civil Engineer Joe Baugh, left for Middle River last Saturday morning to resume the work of surveying ditch No. 25, situated in Spruce Valley and Holt, south of Middle River. The Pioneer says: "there has been a vigorous protest against this ditch as asked for in the petition, the objectors contending that it is impracticable to attempt to carry all the water north in accordance with the petition, but that the outlet should run west. A taking of the levels of the two propositions will probably decide the matter."

Thief River Falls was treated to a sand storm combined with a 90 mile an hour gale Sunday that would do credit to the Sahara desert. The gale continued until late Monday afternoon when it gradually diminished. Several dollars damage resulted when signs were torn loose from buildings, breaking the windows. A number of "White Way" globes were also broken, and two of the newly planted trees at the Carnegie library yard were torn out from the soil. The barber post of Bakken and Crown was also broken in falling.

Arthur Selvig arrived in Thief River Falls Monday morning from Minneapolis, to accept a position as manager of Black's Sweet Shop, 205 La Bree avenue north. Mr. Selvig comes here with the highest of recommendations, having up to the present time been employed at the soda fountain of the Raddison hotel in Minneapolis. He also held a position at the fountain of Voegeli Brothers Drug store. Mr. Black feels especially fortunate in securing Mr. Selvig's services and promises that the store will be conducted in the same first-class manner as heretofore. Mr. Selvig is an expert in his line and has several new features along the confectionery line to introduce in this city.

R. P. Hannaher, agent for the Underwood Typewriter company with headquarters in this city, left Monday afternoon for Fargo, N. D., to attend a banquet given by the company to the traveling salesmen. Mr. Hannaher reports having met with success since locating here and expects to have a good and substantial business in a short time. He stated on leaving that these "get-to-gether" meets are proving very valuable, as the different men discuss the problems met with every day and besides an expert from the New York factory is always present to give a lengthy lecture.

A dispatch in the Duluth News Tribune for Tuesday conveys the information that Peter Botten, former resident of Thief River Falls, was among the Duluthians, who were injured on Monday during the 60 mile gale. It says: "Peter Botten, age 34, a switchman living at 1812 West second street, lies at the point of death in St. Mary's hospital as a result of being crushed and bruised under flying wood and debris when the top of a box car in Rice's Point railroad yards was blown off as he was walking on the tracks yesterday afternoon. The roof of the car was lifted off in practically one piece, Botten received scalp wounds and fractures of the right hip and shoulder." It will be remembered that Mr. Botten removed to Duluth about six years ago. At the time of his residence here he resided in Hemmingson's addition.

M. W. Thoreson, who has spent the past year in Thief River Falls at the home of his son, A. W. Thoreson, 720 Arnold avenue north, took his departure Wednesday evening for Hot Springs, S. D., to spend the summer months playing with one of the leading bands. Mr. Thoreson, who is a french horn player, is a thorough musician and has a notable reputation, having played in the military band of Norway and has been a member of the Royal orchestra of Christiana, Norway, that plays in the court of the king. During his stay here in this city Mr. Thoreson has appeared with the local band in rehearsals and stated on leaving that he regretted very much that he could not stay here during the summer and assist them in their band work. Mr. Thoreson has seen a great number of bands in his day and said that Thief River Falls possessed one of the best amateur organiations he had heard, and wished the director, Joe Greenfield and the boys all the good luck and support they are deserving of.

"A Place In His Home."

In sending a check to cover the subscription to the Times, Senator C. L. Swenson of Albert Lea, says: "Your paper has a place in my home as much as our local papers by the reason of my real estate holdings in your county. I feel much interested in your progressive and growing city. Please greet "Dad" O'Neill for me.

Clarence John Pterson

On Monday May 8, occurred the death of Clarence John Peterson, age 5 years, 10 months and 18 days, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peterson of Highlanding. Death was caused by a tumor, from which the boy had been suffering for the past year, and was compelled to remain in bed one week previous to his death. Funeral services were held in this city and the remains were interred at the Greenwood cemetery.

100 Boys Wanted—Between the age of 8 and 14 to learn music in the correct way. New Premium Catalogue.

The Times job department has this week completed a new premium catalogue for the Loken Department store in this city. These premiums are high grade goods of positive value, and are secured through coupons given with every cash purchase. This big store is steadily growing in popularity. Not only is the stock one of the largest and most varied in northern Minnesota, but the goods are priced with the idea of making rapid sales and thus keeping the line continually up-to-date. The coupons given out by Loken Brothers should be saved, as they have an actual merchandise value.

Physicians' Hospital Notes.

Mrs. Oscar Sponheim and little child were discharged from the hospital Tuesday.

A baby boy was born to Mrs. H. H. Smith of Lawton, N. D., at the hospital last Friday morning. Both mother an child are doing nicely.

Miss Clara Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Olson, was operated on for acute appendicitis. She has improved greatly.

Frank Althoff, who resides on a farm in Sanders township, received treatment at the hospital the latter part of last week for leg wounds. Mr. Althoff was driving a disc, when the line became caught in the implement in some manner and frightened the horses. He was thrown from his seat in such a manner that the disc passed over his leg.

EASY TO PROVIDE FOR YOUR OLD AGE

Young Man Can Double Income by Middle Life.

FIVE DOLLARS EACH WEEK.

In Twenty-eight Years Principal Will Amount to $17,779.22 and Income From This Sum Invested In Six Per Cent Mortgages Will Be Upwards of $20 Weekly.

This is not a get-rich-quick scheme. It is simply a plain statement of how any industrious young man who sets about it early enough can double his income by middle life simply through $5.00 weekly savings and wise investment of them from time to time.

Let us assume that you are in your twenties and that you are earning $20 a week, $1,040 a year.

In order to equal that income through 6 per cent investments you would need a capital of about $17,300.

Here is how you can do it before you have passed your prime:

Suppose you open a savings account in a bank which pays 4 per cent interest on savings, compounded semi-annually.

Save and deposit in the bank $5 every week.

Whenever your principal and interest equal or exceed $1,000 draw out that sum and invest it in a first mortgage paying 6 per cent a year payable semi-annually. Likewise deposit your mortgage interest in your savings account, continue to withdraw and invest whenever your savings account reaches the $1,000 mark.

In 28 years your principal will amount to $17,779.22 and your income from this sum invested in good 6 per cent mortgages will be upwards of $20 a week. This is how it figures out:

$5.00 per week deposited in bank at 4 per cent per annum compounded semi-annually will amount to $1,123.89 in four years.

You take out $1,000 and invest it in a first mortgage at 6 per cent, Balance on Savings Account, $123.89.

In seven years the amount in the savings bank will be $1,154.89. Another $1,000 is taken out and invested leaving $154.89 remaining.

At each period of nine and one half years, eleven and one half years, thirteen and one-half years, fifteen and one-half years, seventeen years, eighteen and one-half years, nineteen and one-half years, twenty-one years, and each year until the twenty-eighth year one thousand is invested. Seventeen thousand dollars will have been invested in mortgages, and a balance of $779.00 will be remaining in the bank at the end of the twenty-eighth year.

This amount, at 6 per cent interest, yields $1,066.92 a year, or $20.51 a week.

The Saturday Evening Post a few years ago gave an interesting calculation that if a man whose income remains the same year after year will deposit one-third his income each month in a savings bank that pays four per cent, he will be able to retire at the end of thirty-five years, and thereafter he or his heirs will receive the full amount of his income.

If he will steadily deposit one-quarter of his income in the same way he will be able to retire on full pay at the end of forty-one years.

A fifth of his income saved and deposited in this way, will enable him to stop work on full income at the end of forty-six years, while a deposit of one-tenth of his income will retire him at the end of the sixty years.

To be able to retire on half income as a result of this kind of steady saving is easier. This can be achieved in twenty-four years by the deposit of one-third of the wages in a savings bank each month; in twenty-eight years by the deposit of one-fourth of the wages; in thirty-two years by the deposit of one-fifth of the income, and forty-five years by the steady saving of one-tenth of the wages.

The nation-wide campaign which the American Bankers' Association is conducting encourages systematic saving and wise spending of money through the keeping of a budget of private expenses.

DO NOT CARRY YOUR MONEY WITH YOU.

You can't spend what you do not have. Money in the pocket burns. It is easy to say "no" to some alluring window or appealing advertisement when you have no money with you, but when the purse is full, how hard to turn away! You can't go if you haven't the price of a ticket; but how much better to stay at home when you have a ticket with you! To carry money around and be able to say "no" to the many opportunities that appeal to you to spend is to develop character, resisting power, reserve and strength. It means that you know yourself and can conquer yourself. But until you are strong enough to say "no" and stick to it, you had better let the bank do the resisting for you, for this is what banks are for. You can't spend money while it is in a bank.

Try to Double It

To those who have savings accounts here we pass on this suggestion:

As a goal to be reached, set yourself the task of making your bank account just twice its present size.

You have the great advantage of having started your account, of knowing how every dollar banked counts up, of having planed ways to save money and to make money.

Money in the bank is your protection for the future. Having more than you now have is just that much additional protection. Keep your account growing and tell your friends how easy it is to SAVE.

MUCH INTEREST IN MEETING OF SYNOD

Probable That Final Steps Looking to Union of All Norwegian Churches May be Taken.

The annual meeting of the National meeting of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod, which takes place at Minneapolis on May 18 to 25, promises to be the most important and interesting ever held in America. It is expected that the principal subject to come up for discussion will be the amalgamation of the three divisions of the church—the Synod, the United Church, and the Hauge's Synod.

The Norwegians in America have for years been divided among three divisions of the same church. The differences have not seemed of very grave import to the ordinary lay member, but theologians have stood out firmly for which ever view they happened to hold.

The differences have hinged more on a question of interpretation than on any serious difference in fundamentals, and chiefly concern the doctrines of conversion and of predestination.

Since 1908 attempts have been made at the yearly meetings of all three divisions to formulate some plan whereby representatives could meet on a common ground for the purpose of straightening out the matter and bringing all Norwegian Lutherans together under one head. At the metings in 1912 resolutions were adopted aiming at a satisfactory settlement of the difficulty, and as all sides have since steadily worked with this sole end in view, it is expected that this year's meetings will see the desired culmination.

Rev. I. T. Aastad of the Thief River Synod church will attend the Minneapolis meeting in company with the delegates selected from his congregation, H. S. Dahlen and Nels Larson.

THIEF RIVER IS NINTH ON HIGH SCHOOL LIST

State Report Shows That There is a Total of 322 Pupils And 16 Teachers.

A report recently issued by the state board of education gives an interesting comparison of the number of pupils attending and teachers employed at the various high schools. Thief River Falls is placed ninth on the list—ahead of Bemidji, Crookston and Brainerd.

There are 226 high schools in Minnesota. Leaving out of consideration those in the Twin Cities and Duluth, it is interesting to notice how the local high school ranked in size and number of teachers in 1915 with others. The ranking list is as follows: Winona, 460 pupils, 29 teachers; Faribault, 452 pupils, 27 teachers; Mankato, 420 pupils, 34 teachers; Rochester, 345 pupils, 29 teachers; Albert Lea, 342 pupils, 22 teachers; Fergus Falls, 340 pupils, 16 teachers; Red Wing, 334 pupils, 19 teachers; Hibbing, 330 pupils, 23 teachers; Thief River Falls 322 pupils, 16 teachers. Other schools enrolled as follows: Crookston, 249 pupils, 19 teachers; Bemidji, 207 pupils, 11 teachers; Detroit, 162 pupils, 11 teachers; Brainerd, 295 pupils, 14 teachers.

There are 84 high schools in Minnesota out of the 226 in the state, which by reason of standard of work and course of study are honored with a place on the accredited list in the North Central Association of high schools. The local school is one so recognized and this recognition entitles its graduates to matriculation on presentation of diploma at any college, university or normal in the states between the Ohio and the Rockies.

Was Good Meeting.

Crookston Times.—Crookston delegates who returned last evening from Thief River Falls where the spring meeting of the Ninth district club women was held Thursday and Friday report a very profitable and entertaining meeting. There were representatives from four Crookston clubs present, including the Woman's club, Current Events, Matrons and Crookston-Parnell club. Mrs. A. A. Miller of this city, district vice-president holds over for that office, as does Secretary Mrs. B. F. Tenney, of Ada. Mrs. Russell of Moorhead, was re-elected district president for a term of two years.

PENNINGTON WELL ALONG COMPARED TO NEIGHBORS

Farmers to South and West Farther Behind in Seeding Than in This Neighborhood.

Secretary Fred T. Lincoln of the Commercial club, returned the first of the week from a visit to Grand Forks. He said that he was surprised to find that farm work along the route was even farther behind than is the case in Pennington county. Throughout Polk there are many places in which the effect of the high water this spring is still in evidence, nothing in the way of an attempt having been made to begin seeding. In eastern North Dakota conditions are very much the same.

While in Grand Forks Mr. Lincoln ascertained that there were very good prospects that the Thief River band would be one of the organizations asked to play at the big fair there in August. Several of the officials having this event in charge assured him that they would do their best to secure the appointment for the boys. The state fair of North Dakota will this year be held at Bismarck, but Grand Forks will hold a big show on its own hook prior to this event.

Mr. Lincoln found that land in Pennington county was regarded as the most desirable in northwestern Minnesota. Many people over there are contemplating moving over and securing a farm. This ambition is particularly noticeable among the class which has been engaged in other lines of business and now wish to get onto the land. They have saved some money and believe that this section offers the best field for its employment.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE AND NOTIFY TIMES

Nearly Every Section Has Given Indication of Preference As To Presidental Candidate.

More attention has been paid to the different straw vote contests in this country during the past spring than has ever before been accorded these unofficial expressions of choice. This is largely due to the difference of opinion existing as to who should be the Republican nominee for president, it being conceded that there will be no contest for this position among the Democrats.

The Times on page 2 of this issue prints a coupon on which the readers of the paper may express their choice. This contest is under the auspices and direction of the American Press association, and is nation-wide. The contest will continue for two weeks and the result announced shortly thereafter in the columns of this paper as far as the ballots reaching this office are concerned. The outcome of the vote throughout the country will also be published in these columns, but the total will not be known until about June first.

There are no restrictions or suggestions, nor is the voting confined to the Republican candidates. Any aspirant, no matter to what party he may belong, may be voted for. In all contests thus far the leaders have been Wilson, Roosevelt and Hughes, but others mentioned have received strong support, notably Borah, Fairbanks, Weeks, Bryan, Clark and others.

Write the name of your choice in the space provided and send the coupon to The Times. This paper will forward it to the contest editor of the American Press association.

MERCHANTS MAKING BIG REDUCTIONS THIS WEEK

A glance at the advertising columns of the Times this week will convince anyone that, although a little late, the merchants are going after the trade with the usual spring energy.

The full page advertisement of the Spink Hardware company is the first announcement of this magnitude attempted by this concern. As convenient and serviceable articles are offered at greatly reduced prices, this sale should prove a fine introduction.

Wold & Co. also make a spring announcement which should prove of more than ordinary interest to the women folks. The season's goods have now arrived at this popular store, and in spite of the high prices prevailing throughout the country, a glance will prove that at Wold's women's wares are being disposed of at unusually low figures.

Giller's store still continues to fire broadsides of low prices. The season has been rather backward in the clothing trade thus far, but the Giller company has been enjoying a very good business. The prices quoted should increase this very materially.

The new firm of Jerdee & Mogensen also have an announcement in this issue which should prove of much interest to men.

Korstad Bros. are always to be found in line with the progressive merchants, as their ad this week will show.

Read all the advertisements in this paper. You could not spend the time required for this persual to any better advantage. Then buy at home and tell the home merchant that you saw his announcement in the Times. In this way we will all be helping one another.

RED LAKE CONTRACTOR MISSING

All efforts to solve the recent disappearance of Paul Rogge, Red Lake Falls contractor, have failed up to the present time. He has been missing since April 22, and the only clue is the discovery of a record book, a handkerchief and a piece of paper known to be his property, on the bank of the Clearwater river. This leads some to entertain the theory of suicide, while others insist he must have met with foul play. A wife and nine children live at Red Lake Falls and they can advance no reason for his disappearance.

RETURNED FROM HONEYMOON

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engelstad returned Tuesday evening from Warren and other points, after a brief honeymoon. They left for the home of the groom's parents in Rocksbury the same evening.

The Times costs $1.50 a year. The best investment in the state.

FARMERS WARNED AGAINST PEDDLERS

Said to Be Placing Stoves in Homes, Taking Promisory Notes in Payment Therefore.

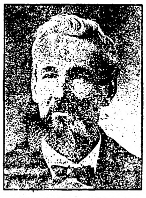
It is never safe to purchase anything on a promisory note from a peddler unless you know the party with whom you are dealing. A concern representing a certain brand of cooking range is running a number of delivery wagons out of Thief River Falls, it is claimed, and is putting stoves or ranges into the homes of nearby farmers, taking in payment the purchaser's note, payable sometime this fall. This concern may be all right, but The Times deems it its duty to warn against these note-payment propositions on general principles. As we understand the matter, these ranges cost even more than the same article would if purchased in the regular way from merchants of established reputation and known reliability, and the only feature that can be said to at all appeal to purchasers is the deferred payment proposition.

Good concerns selling good stoves do not generally employ this means of getting their goods to the customer, and before signing up any sort of agreement the latter is warned to look into the standing of the people with whom he is doing business.

PIONEER RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Captain R. McDonald, pioneer lumberman, for over twenty years a continuous resident of Thief River Falls, died at his residence on Red Lake Boulevard, Saturday at 4:30 p. m., death coming as the result of cancer of the stomach, from which he had been suffering for the past year. Three days before his death he was unable to talk to any of his children or friends who were at his bedside. Instead he used the pen freely and wrote his thoughts. During his last day he paid many high compliments to his children and to those who had intermarried in the McDonald family. The body was shipped over the Soo Sunday evening to EauClaire, Wisconsin, where the funeral services were held from the St. Bernard's Catholic church at the first mass on Monday. Interment followed in the Catholic cemetery at that place. The body was taken to the Soo depot Sunday evening from his residence by pall bearers R. G. Mcginn, M. C. Burns, P. E. Keating, M. C. Harlow and Frank Burgraff, all old friends of the deceased.

Captain McDonald was born June 20, 1841, at Alexandria, Ontario, making his age at the time of death 74 years, 10 months and 16 days. He came to Thief River Falls from Eu Claire, Wisconsin, where he was employed by a lumber concern, about the year 1896 and has resided here ever since. On coming to this city he was put in charge of a fleet of government boats, when the lumber industry was at its zenith here, and from his long command of these boats he was given the name of "Captain." He resigned from their employ after years of service, living a few years in retirement and then later accepted a position as janitor of the Central school. At the school he was regarded as the best friend of the children. He resigned from this position a short time ago on account of his health and advancing years and has lived a life of retirement since.



CAPTAIN R. J. M'DONALD.

Mr. Mc Donald was united in marriage, at Eau Claire in 1886 to Martha McCurren, who passed away a number of years ago. To this union were born six children, all surviving as follows: John A. McDonald, Omaha, Neb., Mrs. J. J. Holstien, Thief River Falls; Mrs. C. S. Shea, Berkley California; Ronald B. Mc Donald, Portland, Oregon; Daniel A. McDonald, Omaha, Neb.; and Mrs. E. A. Graham, Raymond, Washington.

Captain McDonald was one of the best known men of the city and county and his death will be widely mourned. The Times extends sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

COMMENCEMENT PLAY ON FRIDAY, MAY 19

"Seven-Twenty-Eight" to be Presented at Auditorium By Graduating Class of 1916.

Rehearsals for the class play of the high school graduates are going forward steadily, and by Friday, May 19, the date of the presentation, the cast will be perfect.

This comedy drama, formerly called "The Boomerang," is perhaps the most pretentious to be played by a graduating class anywhere in the state, and it will be considerable of an achievement to carry it off successfully. Everyone is working hard to this end, however, and something just a little better than anything of its kind ever witnessed here on like occasions is promised.

The admission to this play will be 35 and 50 cents, and tickets may be procured at Lambert's drug store. Everyone is advised to secure their seats without delay as there will surely be a scarcity of them before the date of the performance.

The editors and printers having the high school annual in charge are working steadily on the job, and it is expected to have the books ready for distribution sometime next week. The work will contain about 60 pages, giving a history of the work done by the senior, junior, sophomore and freshman classes during the past year. There will also be half-tone photographs of all the graduates, as well as the athletic teams and other organizations connected with the school work. The books will be sold at $1.50 cents each, and as the job represents a big outlay, the sale of the entire output will not more than cover the cost of production. The disposal of sufficient books to meet the expenses should prove an easy matter, however, as the work is one of unusual merit and a splendid advertisement for the schools.

A wedding took place yesterday at Rev. Roseland's parsonage, when Oline Larnes, of Park River, became the bride of Mr. Paul Engelstad of Thief River Falls. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon batiste over crepe de chine, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas, with a wreath of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids and best men were Misses Louise Engelstad and Mary Spoonland, and Messrs. Axel Engelstad and Harold Grandy. The guests were: Mrs. A. F. Haig, Misses Blanche Morrison, Alma Nutnue and Messrs. Arthur Einerson and Henry Femrite. Following the ceremony dinner was served at the Palace hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Engelstad left last evening for a short trip, after which they will make their home at Thief River Falls. The bride and groom were both graduates of the agricultural school at Crookston. — Crookston Times, May 4.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Thief River Falls people. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. F. J. Stebbins, druggist.

COUNTY DADS HEAR DITCH PETITIONERS

Commissioners in Special Session Visited by Numerous Delegations With Applications.

The board of county commissioners has been in session since Tuesday morning and expect to get through with the work in hand today.

A hearing was had in the matter of Ditch No. 63 in Goodridge township, and the same was ordered established. This is a drainage project about two miles in length.

A delegation from the township of Star was present and asked that they be given some county assistance in getting rid of the overflow which is causing considerable damage in their neighborhood. It will be necessary to establish either a county ditch or road ditch for their benefit and the board will give the matter the necessary consideration. Committees were present from Kratka township with similar requests, and the people of North township petitioned for a bridge across Thief river a short distance north of this city. This last project is part of the proposition looking to the establishment of a road northward from Thief River Falls and for which part of the money has been raised among the farmers and merchants and part furnished by the city.

Propositions looking to the maintenance of roads during the year were considered and a large number of bills passed.

NORWEGIAN FOLK DRILL

On the afternoon of May 17, a Norwegian folk drill will be given on the high school grounds by sixty girls dressed in the national costume of Norway. The drill will begin at 3:30 and all who are desirous of witnessing it should be assembled at this time. Peer Stromme, who is to speak at the Auditorium in the evening, will probably be requested to deliver a short address in English at the close of the drill. Mr. Stromme has several times been around the world and has collected a fund of good stories well worth the hearing. Norwegian songs will be rendered by the school children at the close of the exercises.

Monday's Tax Sale.

The annual sale of taxes for Pennington county was held at the office of County Auditor Anderson on Monday afternoon. Practically everything offered in the line of taxes against farm property was taken, but city property did not seem to be in such good demand. Out of town buyers were, J. A. Duffy, Red Lake Falls; F. H. Welcome, Minneapolis, and the Medicine County State bank of Granite City.

Attorney H. C. Rowberg, of Stanton & Rowberg & Hoge, left last Friday afternoon for Minneapolis to attend to legal affairs. He was joined at Minneapolis on Sunday by A. H. Akre, and the two left for the western part of Minnesota on a short visit.

The lobby of the Lyceum theatre has this week been improved in appearance by the application of a couple of coats of mahogany stain. Burt Davis managed to get the work done between sand storms, which was a mighty good thing for the ultimate result.

Joe Murray, part owner of a large painting shop in Minneapolis, arrived in Thief River Falls Tuesday morning for a short visit with his mother, who is residing at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. Halverson. Mr. Murray also combined the trip with business.

Miss Constance Swenson, a graduate of the lcal high school with the class of 1915, spent Friday in Thief River Falls visiting with her friends, while enroute to Oslo, where she is teaching a term of school, after enjoying a visit with her parents near Hazel.

Mrs. R. H. Ross will leave Sunday evening for Luverne, Minn., where she will enjoy a six weeks visit at the home of her parents. She will be accompanied by Miss Hilda Rathjen, bookkeeper at the Times office, who will also spend six weeks as the guest of her parents.

Mrs. E. A. Graham of Raymond, Washington, took her departure Sunday evening for Eau Clair, Wis., to attend the funeral of her father, Capt. R. J. Mc Donald, who died in this city last Saturday. Mrs. Graham had been at the bedside of the deceased for a few weeks.

E. O. Murray, co-partner with his brother, Joe Murray, propietors of a large automobile painting shop in Minneapolis, arrived in Thief River Falls the latter part of last week from Devils Lake, N. D., where he had been painting and decorating the Elk's building. Mr. Murray will remain here for a week or more attending to business matters and visiting with his mother, who resides at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. Halverson.

Miss Meta Kiland returned Saturday evening from Clearbrook, where she had enjoyed a visit with Miss Lillian Korstad, who is teaching a term of school there. She was accompanied by the latter, who has completed her teaching at Clearbrook for this year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Frederick left Monday evening for Minneapolis. Mrs. Fredrick will remain there for two weeks visiting with her husband's parents, while Mr. Frederick will proceed on to Rockford, Minn., on a business mission in the interests of the Thief River Valley Land company.

August Westerlund of Clearbrook, spent Saturday morning in Thief River Falls visiting a number of business establishments, while enroute to Goodridge to look over some land. Mr. Westerlund came down to this city from Fergus Falls, where he had been sitting as jurist at the spring term of the United States Federal court.

Mrs. Jason Weatherhead, and Mrs. Bodsworth of Ada, were among the delegates to the Ninth District Woman's Federation meetings held here last Thursday and Friday, being the guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Herrick. Mrs. Weatherhead is the wife of the publisher of the Norman County Herald.

John Rolland, who has of late been employed at the De Cremer meat market, has resigned and has accepted a position as traveling salesman for the G. A. Hormel Meat concern of Duluth, making Thief River Falls his headquarters. Mr. Rolland made the initial trip Monday, going to Cass Lake.

Clarence Blunt, former linotype operator in the Times mechanical department, arrived Wednesday evening from Long Prarie, where he has held a similar position. He will remain in the city to spend the week-end visiting at the home of his brother, Claude, and circulating among his numerous friends after which he will depart for the home of his parents in Illinois to spend the summer.

August Carlson and his daughter, Minnie, returned from Ortonville, Minn., Wednesday morning, where they had attended the funeral of the former's mother, who died at the ripe old age of 73 years. There were about 200 of the deceased friends at the funeral to pay a final tribute to the memory of their departed companion.

Clerk of Court Harry Ives started the week off in good shape, issuing three wedding permits on Monday afternoon. The parties who would wed are: Oscar Edwin Erickson and Theolyn Christenson of Thief River Falls; Cornelius Peterson and Maren Johnstad of Kratka; Fredolph Theodore Anderson and Amelia Hellen Mayer of Star township.

Rev. O. J. Lundell, pastor of the Swedish Evangelical Mission church, returned Sunday evening from Strandquist, where he had conducted services in the afternoon. He was accompanied by Misses Hannah Gustafson and Louise Olson, who assisted the choir at Strandquist. Rev. Lundell will conduct services at Lancaster next Sunday.

Mrs. A. L. Neurauter left Saturday afternoon for her home at East Grand Forks, after a visit in the city with her husband, who is a co-partner with E. A. Mikel in conducting the Electric shop. Mr. Neurauter accompanied her home to spend a few days at the Forks on business. Mrs. Neurauter and children will remove to Thief River Falls at the close of the school term.

Rev. G. W. Powell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at St. Vincent, and well known to many people of Thief River Falls having occupied the pulpit of the Episcopal church here on several occassions, passed through the city last week, enroute to Burmington, England, where he was called by the illness of his mother. Rev. Powell's brother, who enlisted at Burmington, was killed recently in the battle of Ypres.

John Bordewick, connected with the Thief River Valley Land company, departed last Saturday afternoon for Fargo, N. D. On a recent trip to that city by auto, Mr. Bordewick was compelled to leave his car there and return to this city by rail on account of a severe snow storm, and it was for the purpose of driving the machine back to this city that he made the trip.

C. W. Ackerman, manager of the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company, returned the latter part of last week from western North Dakota, where he had spent several days on a business trip in the interests of the firm. Mr. Ackerman secured a large contract at Kathryn, N. D., calling for the manufacture and installation of bank fixtures for one of the banks at that place. He contemplates on making another trip to the west in the near future, and will touch points in Montana.

TEUTONS ADMIT SINKING SUSSEX

Said to Be Gist of Note on Way From Berlin.

GERARD HANDED MISSIVE

Communication Said to Give Notice That Submarine Commander Responsible Has Been Punished and That Reparation Will Be Made.

Washington, May 11.—Secretary Lansing received a message from Ambassador Gerard giving notice that a new note on the Sussex case had been handed him and was on its way to Washington.

It has been indicated the German government now admits attacking the Sussex and gives notice the submarine commander responsible has been punished and promises to make reparation.

Paris, May 11.—Great prominence is given by the newspapers of Paris to the latest American note to Germany, replying to the German communication respecting submarine warfare.

The American note is spoken of as a masterpiece of diplomacy.

"With conciseness, firmness and clarity, which is in strong contrast to the pathos with which Wilhelmstrasse announced its backdown, President Wilson maintains the position he took up in the preceding note," writes Stephen Pichon, former foreign minister, in the Petit Journal.

The Matin says the American note places Germany in a cruel dilemma, her suggestions having been rejected but her promises registered so that they will have to be kept.

ALLIES SCOFF AT PARLEY

London Refuses to Take Peace Talk Seriously at Present Time.

London, May 11.—The London newspapers refuse to accept seriously the peace talk which has followed publication of the German note to Washington. Outlining the position of the allies in regard to peace proposals the Daily Telegraph says:

"The entente powers are out to win the war and overthrow Prussian militarism. No inconclusive peace will suit their demands and the very suggestion of a draw is abhorent."

The Daily Mail expresses the belief that the Germans are not sincere in talking peace. It says:

"No one in this country should be deceived by the German peace talk, which is thoroughly insincere. It has three objects—to keep the Germans under the delusion that they are fighting a truly defensive war to win the sympathy of neutrals and enlist their efforts against the British blockade and, above all, put the British people to sleep."

GERMANS IN NEW ADVANCE

Forces of Emperor Drive French From Hill 304.

Berlin, May 11.—The Germans have made further progress on Hill 304, on the Verdun front, and have driven back French detachments southwest of the hill, the war office statement says.

German airmen dropped numerous bombs on factories at Dombasle (Argonne) and Raon L'Etape (Vosges).

England Calls Men Home.

London, May 11.—All married Englishmen eligible for military service who are living abroad, but who ordinarily are residents of Great Britain, must return to England forthwith and report for military duty. This announcement was made in the house of commons.

German Squadron Sighted.

London, May 11.—A large German squadron, accompanied by several submarines, has been sighted in the North sea by Norwegian vessels, according to Copenhagen dispatches. The Germans halted a Norwegian steamer and examined her papers.

British Destroyer Damaged.

Berlin, May 11.—In an engagement off the Belgian coast between German and British torpedo craft a British destroyer was badly damaged by artillery fire, according to official announcement by the German admiralty.

WORKS OUT FOR GOVERNOR

Former Mankato Man Files on Democratic Ticket.

St. Paul, May 11.—Samuel D. Works, state insurance commissioner and former state senator from Mankato, filed for governor on the Democratic ticket. He gave his residence as 1073 Goodrich avenue, St. Paul. It was expected he would file from Mankato.

Three to Die for Voodoo Murder.

Camaguey, Cuba, May 11.—Two negro sorcerers and a negro woman were condemned to death by the garrote for the murder of an aged white man. The man was killed to obtain his blood for use in voodoo incantations which were to cure diseases with which the woman was afflicted.

PERSHING TOLD TO CONCENTRATE

American Troops in Mexico Brought Nearer Border.

FALSE RUMORS THE CAUSE

All Soldiers at Columbus, N. M., Called Out for Defense of Town on Receipt of Story That Carranza Army Was Preparing to Attack.

El Paso, Tex., May 11.—General Pershing has been ordered to begin a greater concentration of his troops. Detachments still operating as far south as San Antonio will, it was reported, be withdrawn to Colonia Dublan.

Columbus, N. M., May 11.—Machine guns were mounted in the camp of the United States soldiers here in quick time, troopers were held close to the barracks and a general warning was sent out.

This action was taken by the commanding officer when word came that 3,500 Carranza soldiers were marching on Columbus.

Another rumor was that General Pershing's rear guard had been attacked by the Mexicans and that a general uprising was at hand.

For several hours the situation was tense, with all the soldiers under arms.

In the early morning a reconnaissance flight was made by Captain T. F. Dodd of the army aero corps, who later reported there were no Mexican soldiers within seventy miles of Columbus.

PRESIDENT HAS AUTHORITY

Can Call Militia Out for Duty on the Border.

Washington, May 11.—Administration officials interpret the military law by virtue of which guardsmen of three states were ordered into federal service to mean that the president has full authority to press the militia into service and that each state so affected is required to recruit its militia to full war strength immediately and to forward recruits to the base of operations as fast as they are sworn in.

Secretary Baker said the question of calling guardsmen from other states into service is not under immediate consideration.

TROOPS DOMINATE JUAREZ

Infantry Battalion Guards Bridge at El Paso.

El Paso, Tex., May 11.—A battalion of the Twentieth infantry, numbering about 350 men, was moved from Fort Bliss and stationed near the stock yards, dominating the Mexican section of El Paso.

The stock yards are about a mile from the river and Juarez. The battalion carried machine gun equipment.

Two companies of the Twentieth were stationed at the courthouse and two at the union station.

General Bell's troop dispositions were taken, he said, for precautionary purposes.

No Answer From Washington.

El Paso, Tex., May 11.—No answer has been received from Washington to General Scott's message reporting General Obregon's proposal for a joint patrol of the international boundary. General Scott said the conference was to be held, regardless of whether a reply was received on the plan of the Mexican minister of war.

Declares for Intervention.

Austin, Tex., May 11.—Governor James F. Ferguson of Texas, on his return to Austin, issued a signed statement in which he declared that now is the proper time for United States intervention in Mexico to restore order in that country, "if it takes ten or fifty years."

HAIR TONIC FATAL DRINK

Three Texans Dead, One Dying and Several Ill.

Plainview, Tex., May 11.—As the result of drinking denatured alcohol, Paul J. Warren, Joe Dingler and Mug Brock are dead and Tom Earnest is dying.

Jim Carpenter, Noah Stalling and M. L. Helton are seriously ill and may die. The young men drank hair tonic which contained the alcohol.

Millionaire Held Without Bail.

Winnipeg, May 11.—Hhomas Kelly, millionaire contractor, has been refused bail and placed in jail. He was returned here from Chicago for trial on charges of conspiracy to defraud the province in connection with the construction of parliament buildings.

Maryland Politician Dies.

Baltimore, May 11.—John B. Hanna, former collector of internal revenue at Baltimore and former chairman of the Republican state central committee, died here.

Thief River Falls Veteran Holds State Record

Seventy-six Years of Age, Court Commissioner S. T. Johnson is Father of Four Children, Ranging in Age From Five to Thirteen Years.

Theodore Roosevelt would be proud to know this man. In this respect at least, the ex-president would be in full accord with all the inhabitants of Thief River Falls.

Court Commissioner Samuel T. Johnson of Pennington county, is also some times called "Colonel" and it is altogether probable that his right to be so designated is fully as well substantiated as that of Mr. Roosevelt. He certainly saw longer service and more fighting. It is not because of his military record that Mr. Johnson is best known, however, but for causes far removed from battle scenes as one can well imagne. He is 76 years of age and the father of four as fine children as you would be liable to meet in a day's travel. The youngest of these is five years of age and the eldest thirteen. They are a lusty lot of youngsters and even more than ordinarily prized by their father and mother—the latter being her leige's junior by quite a number of years.

There are two boys and two girls. Leonard. E. Johnson is the eldest, being 13 years. Next comes Mabel B., 11 years; Sina L., 7 years and Walter B., the baby, who is a promising young man of five summers.

Mr. Johnson says that when his own age is taken into consideration he challenges any city or town in the state to produce a better record. The only charge which could with any degree be brought against him is that he started rather late in life.

And this highly respected veteran claims another distinction. He has resided in Thief River Falls continuously for the past 28 years—longer than any other person now residing within its borders. Others were here before him, and it may even be possible that some of these are still residing here, but they have not made the city their home continously. There are a few who were here in the early days, moved away for a number of years and then returned, but for one solid stretch, Mr. Johnson thinks he has them all beaten. He can recount every step in the progress of the city since he came here, and is an authority on conditions during the wild and wooly period.

At the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Johnson was a resident of Cambridge Mass. When he went to enlist he found that the quota of his home state was already full and that no more men could be enrolled at that time. In company with a number of others he went to New York, where he enlisted in the Fifth Excelsior, or Seventy-fourth regiment of that state. He was placed under the command of Gen. Daniel Sickles. His enlistment dated from the first day of May, 1861, and he upheld his end of the struggle for the Union until discharged in June, 1865. Anyone wishing to find out the names of the battles in which he took part during this time will be referred to the history of the regiment. "We all did the best we knew how, and that is about all there is to say about it," is the answer received to my question concerning this part of his career.

Mr. Johnson does not strike one as a man who took an active part for four years in the bloodiest struggle the world had known up to that time. He still displays in his bearing and manner the effect of his early military training and looks as young as many a man of 50. He says he has not had time to grow old.

The family has a comfortable home with enough ground surrounding it for a fine garden. The revenue from this, supplemented by a very respectable pension check from Uncle Sam and such work as Mr. Johnson still finds the time and has the inclination to perform, suffices to amply meet all the demands of this growing family. The father says that when the children get big enough to sort of look after themselves a little, he and Mrs. Johnson may conclude that they have earned a rest. This will be simply a matter of convenience and inclination, however, as Mr. Johnson would laugh at the idea that his age will make it necessary for him to quit working.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Plenty of Them in Thief River Falls, And Good Reason For It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
When she finds freedom?

Many readers will profit by the following:

Mrs. A. Lindblad, 319 Knight Ave. S., Thief River Falls, says: "I suffered from backache and lameness across my loins for years. Whenever I caught cold, I was worse. It may have been lifting that affected my kidneys and made my back so weak. Besides this, my kidneys didn't act right and I felt languid and tired. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was relieved in every way. My back stopped hurting and I felt stronger and better. My kidneys also became normal and I haven't had any trouble since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lindblad had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—My4-11.

MAVIE.

The wind-storm which passed over the Northwest on Sunday with more or less disasterous results was no respecter of places. Mavie suffered somewhat the same effects as other places in the path of the storm. Several barns in the vicinity were moved from their foundations and one barn two miles west from town was toppled completely over. A couple of wind mills were wrecked, out-buildings all over the country were blown down. The fence gates of the Winton-Nichols lumber yard suffered considerable damage. Many buildings were saved from being wrecked, the owners being on the job and placed props on the leaward side before the storm reached the height of its fury.

Seeding has been in full blast during the last week, bu twas more or less hampered yesterday by the high winds which prevailed. The land around Mavie is in first class condition for receiving the seed and not withstanding the lateness of the season, the prospect for a large area being sown is very good owing to the fact that a very large amount of plowing was done last fall.

C. W. Nelson, Mavie Post-master and merchant, made a trip to Thief River Falls Friday and came back with a Maxwell five passenger auto.

W. H. Quist was in Mavie yesterday taking care of his farm interests in this vicinity.

William Coates of Thayer, Ill., who owns a farm two miles west of Mavie, is here superintending the spring work on his land. He contemplates doing considerable new breaking during the coming season.

Fred Hinick, manager of the Mavie yard of the Winton-Nichorls Lumber company, has commenced building operations on his new home. Contractor James Hruby has the foundation in and is ready to start on the carpenter work.

The Farmers State bank is giving its building a new coat of white paint to be in keeping with the general appearance with all the buildings on the electric line.

FERGUS FALLS MAN DECIDES TO ENTER

After Permitting Announcement That He Would Not Be a Candidate For Congress.

Although it has been generally understood that A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls, had given up the idea of filing as a candidate for congress, his name was entered at the last minute and he will be a contender. It was announced in the newspapers throughout the district some time ago that Mr. Anderson had concluded to withdraw in the interest of party harmony, thus leaving a clear field for the re-election of Congressman Steenerson.

The opinion is freely expressed in Thief River Falls that Mr. Anderson should either have stayed in the race from the first or stayed out entirely. His coming into the field at the last minute after announcing his retirement strikes many as being a rather peculiar performance and will not aid him to any great extent at the polls.

In an interview Mr. Anderson said: "My platform is brief: I stand first and foremost for genuine Americanism and strict and honorable neutrality.

"I would insist on a dollar's worth of service for every dollar spent. I know that government records show that we are spending more to maintain our army and navy than did Germany, France or England before the present war, and I would demand that dollar's worth of preparedness for every dollar so spent. I believe in a preparedness which would protect, but not one which would inspire the spirit of invasion or impose the burdens of militarism.

"I stand for business methods, economy and efficiency in national government."

"GRAUSTARK" AT LYCEUM THURSDAY

George T. McCutcheon's masterpiece, "Graustark," will be seen in moving pictures at the Lyceum next Thursday, May 18. This is one of the most elaborate film productions of the year and has created something of a sensation wherever shown.

The Graustark stories have been perhaps more widely read than any other American novels during the past few years, and there are not many people who are not acquainted with one or more of them. They are of a nature peculiarly adapted to screen work, the scenery and action being ideal for this purpose.

THIS COUNTRY SOON MUST FINANCE ITSELF

People Should Realize Thrift at Home Is Necessary.

One hundred years ago the first savings bank in the United States was established. The advent of this institution came with the era of commercial and industrial expansion. It came when the population of the United States was only 9,500,000, and there were but 246 banks in the country. By 1820 ten of these savings banks had been established with 8,635 depositors and aggregate deposits of $1,138,576.

Prosperity came, the people saved and the deposits in these great reservoirs of capital, which now number 2,100, by leaps and bounds increased to enormous proportions. To-day, with our national wealth approximating $187,000,000,000 and almost one hundred millions of people in the country, we have about $4,700,000,000 in the savings banks belonging to ten and a half million depositors. This may seem an amazing sum of capital and number of depositors, but when a comparison is made with other countries and a balance is struck it is found the United States is near the end of the list in the percentage of savers to population.

The possibilities for the greater promotion of habits of thrift and saving among people are indeed extraordinary. With remarkable opportunities in the United States for increasing foreign trade; with bumper crops in every section of the country; with gold pouring into the coffers of the banks; with every appearance of unprecedented future prosperity, the fact is apt to be disregarded that the other great commercial nations of the world are involved in a war of frightful destruction and economic waste: that after the war these nations will need funds for reconstruction and the United States will be called upon to supply them; that for some time to come this country will not be able to secure capital, as in the past, from France and Great Britain, for the purpose of carrying on new enterprises. The United States must finance itself.

No fear need be had for the immediate future, but it is inevitable that the time is coming when this country must meet the test of financing practically the entire world. Preparations are being made for defense in the event of war; preparations should also be made for peace. Adequate credit machinery can be developed and perfected, but it will assuredly require a sufficient amount of capital to maintain properly and keep in good running condition this credit machinery.

How is this capital going to be secured? Through education; by calling the attention of the people to the lack of thrift in the country, and the beneficial results of practicing thrift; through a systematic nation-wide campaign to promote thrift and saving. It surely is to the interest of all citizens, whether banker or business man, editor or professional man, employer or employe, to be a party to such a movement.

This is the object of the nation-wide campaign instituted the first of the year by the American Bankers' Association.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane.

A NEW CLEW.

NATURE with her prodigal creativeness sends every human being into the world differing in some fashion from his fellow men and women; not merely in feature but in emotion and character. Yet, taken in the aggregate, all these contrasting personalities may be swayed as one man.

It was not merely sympathy for Mary that swayed the crowd on this particular morning, however; it was expectancy—a psychic sense of something impending—and there was a whisper that might have been excitement or a mere composite, "I told you so," when Langdon, a bundle of papers in his hand, stepped forward and addressed the court.

"Your Honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said quietly, "it had been my intention to call upon Mr. Daniels, manager for the defendant, as my next witness. But"—he paused dramatically—"Mr. Daniels has disappeared! And in searching for him such important facts have come to light that I crave the indulgence of the court to recall some former witnesses in order to introduce fresh testimony for the defence. It has been learned that, unknown to Miss Page, James Pollock supplied the money to back 'The Seekers,' in which the defendant was starred, and there are such suspicious features connected with the partnership of Daniels and Pollock that I"—

"I object!" interrupted the District Attorney hotly, leaping to his feet. "If there are suspicious features or new facts let Mr. Langdon introduce them as testimony. Your Honor, this is a palpable effort on the part of my learned opponent to mislead the jury."

"Mr. Daniels has disappeared!"

"On the contrary," stormed Langdon, "I stand ready to bring out each one of these facts in the testimony of my witnesses."

Langdon turned to the bailiff with a smile of satisfaction.

"Call George Brennan," he said, and flashed a look of encouragement at Mary.

"Mr. Brennan," said Langdon, when the witness had given his age as thirty and his state as unmarried, "will you please tell the Court the result of your investigations into the disappearance of William Daniels?"

"I called at the Daniels apartment," said the detective quietly, "at Mr. Langdon's request. He wanted Mr. Daniels as a witness and also wanted him to call at his (Mr. Langdon's) office."

"Who was in the apartment when you called?"

"Mrs. Daniels and her daughter. A young girl of sixteen or seventeen."

"Did you notice anything unusual in their behavior?"

"Well, I don't know as I'd call it unusual, sir, in the circumstances, but they were terribly upset. Mrs. Daniels said that her husband had gone out two days before and nobody had seen him since."

"Had she no inkling of his whereabouts?"

"No. She said he had left as usual to go to his office in the Covington Theatre and that was the last they had seen of him. Then I asked her if she had notified the police, and when she said, 'No,' I told her I was a detective, and had come seeking her husband as a witness in this trial. She said that he couldn't tell anything, she was sure, but that the murder of James Pollock had killed him too. 'I'm sure that it's just the murder and the trial that have driven him away,' she said. 'He's been almost insane ever since it happened.' With the help of Mrs. Daniels and the daughter I went through his papers there at the house, and then Mrs. Daniels and I went to the theatre and got the watchman to open his office for us."

"Did you find anything important among the papers in Mr. Daniels' desk?"

"Yes. In one of the drawers were some torn scraps of paper. Looked as if the drawer might have been open when the letter was torn up, and some of the scraps fell in it. I pieced them together and found they were part of a note from Mr. Daniels to Mr. Pollock."

"How did you know it was Mr. Daniels's handwriting?"

"His wife recognized it at once and told me."

"Can you remember the wording of that letter?"

"Yes. It said, 'My dear Pollock: As lessee of this theatre, I, too, am financially interested in Miss Page. Should your persistent attentions cause her to withdraw from the cast after tonight's performance, I frankly warn you'—The rest of the page was torn off. It bore the date of the opening of 'The Seekers.'"

"Was this the note?" Langdon's voice rang out triumphantly, as he held up before the witness a sheet on which some torn scraps of paper had been pasted, and when Brennan had identified them he turned to the jury, and cried:

"Gentlemen of the jury, I offer this threatening note written by Mr. Daniels to James Pollock, as an exhibit in the case of the defence!"

The next witness was no other than Joe the bell-hop.

"Joe," Langdon began very gently, "you have already told us how Mr. Pollock gave you a message to take to Miss Page, and how upon receiving it she left the banquet in the Hotel Republic and went down the corridor with you and into the room where Mr. Pollock was waiting. What did you do then?"

"I started down the hall towards the stairs," said Joe in his boyish treble.

"Did you look back?"

"Yes; I was kind of curious about wot was goin' on."

"Was there anyone in the hallway when you looked back?"

"Yes, the fat man who had been at the banquet, the one they called Mr. Daniels, was standing close to the door of the gray suite with his ear against it as if he wuz listenin'."

"Joe, do you recognize this picture?" Langdon's voice changed sharply and he thrust a photograph into the boy's hands. The latter nodded.

"Sure!" he said. "That's him—Daniels. That's the feller I seen in the corridor all right."

But now the prosecutor was on his feet, and though his voice was just as friendly as Langdon's, the bell-boy eyed him with some trepidation as he asked suavely:

"Joe, how does it happen that you never told any of this before?"

"I forgot," said the boy sullenly.

"Well, we all forget sometimes," went on the District Attorney in that honied voice. "But I suppose you remembered it again when Mr. Langdon reminded you that you had seen Mr Daniels. Wasn't that it?"

"Wot's eatin' you?" scoffed the boy heatedly. "How could Mr. Langdon remind me of suthin' he didn't know I'd seen, till I put him wise?"

"Well, suppose you tell us how you came to—er—put him wise."

"You see," he piped, "me and Mr. Langdon wuz talkin' things over. 'Cause you see I wuz right there when it all happened, and he says to me, he says, 'Joe, I'd like you to go over to the hotel with me, and let's take another look at that corridor.'

"When we got there, we did everything all over just like it had happened, and then when I wuz comin' down the hall I looked back just like I did before, and Mr. Langdon says, 'Joe, when you looked back did you see anybody?' And I says, 'Only that fat guy, Daniels,' and he says, 'Oh, you saw Daniels! Wot wuz he doin'?' And I says, 'Gettin' an earful at the door.' Then he says, 'Are you sure?' And I says, 'Yes.' and he says, 'I guess you better tell that in court.' And I says, 'I'm on.' and—that's all."

The prosecutor turned away with a shrug amid a ripple of smothered mirth, and Langdon, laughing himself, patted the boy encouragingly on the shoulder as he sent him back to the witness-room and called in his stead Randall Williams, the erstwhile leading man of Mary's ill-fated company.

"Mr. Williams, how long did you remain in the banquet-room of the Hotel Republic on the night that Miss Page was sent for by James Pollock?" asked Langdon.

"Why, I was there from the beginning of the affair till just before we heard the sound of the shot."

"Did all the other guests remain except Miss Page?"

"Yes. That is, everybody except Daniels."

"Oh! Mr. Daniels left, did he? When?"

"A few minutes after Miss Page had gone. He said he was going to see where she was, and would try to bring her back again."

"Joe, how does it happen that you never told any of this before?"

"Where were you when you heard the shot?"

"Just outside the door of the banquet-room."

"What did you do?"

"I ran down the hall in the direction from which the sound came."

"Did you meet anyone?"

"Yes. I ran bang into Daniels at the corner where the corridor turned. I nearly upset him, I guess, for he caught at my arm and held on as if to steady himself."

"Did you say anything?"

"Yes. I said, 'Did you hear a shot? Somebody's killed.' And Daniels said, 'Oh, my God! I know it.'"

"Did he seem very much excited?"

"Yes—and sick. He was almost green, and he kept saying, 'God—God—I must pull myself together.' But for that matter we were all pretty much upset, and when we got to the door of—of—the gray suite he wasn't any more excited than the rest of us."

"That is all, thank you, Mr. Williams," said Langdon; but while the words were still on his lips the prosecutor was on his feet.

"I petition the Court," he cried in ringing tones, "to have all the foregoing testimony, together with that of the detective Brennan and the boy Joe Murphy, stricken out as irrelevant. All this is wasting the time of your honor and the gentlemen of the jury. It is not what this man Daniels did but what Mary Page did on the night that James Pollock was brutally murdered with which we are concerned. The State has proved that this woman, Mary Page, entered the room where James Pollock awaited her. That a shot and a scream came from that room, and that the defendant was found in the room with the dead body!"

"And I say," stormed Langdon in response, "that Mary Page neither saw nor heard what occurred in the gray suite that night. And if it please your Honor, I will call as my next witness, Dr. Foster—to testify to the inability of the defendant to understand events that were happening."

"I see no objection to SUCH testimony," said the Judge thoughtfully.

There was a breathless tension in the room when Langdon, addressing his new witness, said vibrantly:

"Dr. Foster, you have told the court that the defendant, Mary Page, is a victim of attacks of 'repressed psychosis,' superinduced by the sight of intoxication, and the smell of alcoholic concoctions. When suffering from such an attack would the patient be conscious of what went on about her?"

"Certainly not. No more than a person in delirium."

A long, quivering gasp of ineffable relief floated from Mary's pale lips at the words, and two little flames of hope and excitement leapt into her eyes.

Even Langdon had seemed at times to cherish vague doubts and had pressed her cruelly to try to remember—even hazily—the events that were a blank to her; and in consequence the words of the great alienist were balm to her aching heart and seemed in truth a wondrous vindication.

Langdon, watching her in amazed concern, saw her slender body shake like a reed in a storm of emotion, and reading in it not the breaking of the icy fetters of immobile despair, but the shattering of a wonderful self-control, hastened to her side, with an admonitory and reassuring whisper of encouragement. To his surprise she smiled at him through the unshed tears and caught his hand for an instant in a feverish grip as she murmured tremulously,

"There's nothing the matter, Phil. I—I—am just hopeful."

"I may have to call you to the stand for a little," he went on anxiously. "Do you think you—you—will be able to?"

"Why, of course," she answered, with such a surprised note in her voice that Langdon was perforce reassured, and turned his attention again towards Dr. Foster, who was flushing angrily under the badgering of the prosecutor.

"What you tell us is very interesting," the latter was saying sarcastically. "And so you followed the life of the defendant, or let us say you traced her life back year by year. And did you decide which event was the direct cause of her—er—peculiar mental breakdowns?"

"I did."

"What was it?"

"Her father's brutality on the night she fled from the house in wild terror. Miss Page had suffered from her horror of alcohol from a baby."

"Then it was her father's treatment, rather than his intoxicated condition, that drove her insane?" persisted the prosecutor; but Dr. Foster saw the drift of the question and shook his head emphatically.

"It was not. It was the sight of his intoxication, and the reek of the whiskey on his breath. The pain of his brutal grip on her shoulder, and the sight of his ill-treatment of her mother naturally had their effect—but they were not the main causes of her delirium."

"How do you know that Mr. Page gripped her shoulder brutally? Isn't that merely hearsay evidence?"

"No. The marks of the hand were plainly visible on the shoulder of Miss Page when she was brought to me. These heavy bruises overlay a curious birthmark that came and went, and the nails of Mr. Page's hand had dug such furrows into the flesh that the scars still remain."

"I have here a copy of this morning's News which has an article in it entitled, 'What is Repressed Psychosis?' by Dr. Foster. Is that your brochure?"

"It is."

"In it you say, 'The cruel grip of Mary Page's drunken father left its mark indelibly upon her shoulder, for under the stress of intense excitement that mark reappears.' Is that hearsay—or have you seen it?"

"I have seen it."

With a sneer that brought a hot flush of anger surging into the doctor's face, the prosecutor turned and handed the paper that he held to the foreman of the jury saying slurringly:

"Gentlemen of the jury, in this news paper which I offer as an exhibit for the state, you will find a long article by the learned witness, which is palpably an effort to rouse cheap sympathy for the prisoner. In it he says substantially what be has said in court, but in both instances, gentlemen, he has failed to prove the truth of what he says."

"I said, 'Did you hear a shot?'"

"My unsupported word has been taken in the court room without question before this," thundered Dr. Foster. "What I have written and said would be accepted before any medical board in the world"—

"But this," interrupted the prosecutor suavely, "is not a medical board. This is a court of law; and I petition his honor to strike out the evidence advanced regarding this mental state of the prisoner. I contend that unless the facts can be PROVED before his honor and the gentlemen of the jury that the entire testimony is most questionable—and of no value."

With a little moaning gasp of dismay Mary half rose from her chair, her lips forming a mute appeal against this drastic threat. Those who were watching her saw in the movement no more than a hysterical impulse born of the legal wrangling, but it was something far deeper and greater. For to Mary, Dr. Foster stood as the keystone of her proof of innocence. He believed her—and to strike out his evidence meant that there was no one—no one left who—understood.

Langdon, knowing that he must call her to the stand next, was aghast at her agitation and, fearing a general breakdown, sent the bailiff for smelling salts and a glass of water. He had no fears that the evidence of the alienist would be stricken out, but he was nevertheless racking his brains for some method of proving the recurrence of that strange bruise upon Mary's shoulder when, with the abruptness that characterized him, the District Attorney dismissed the witness.

And now it was Mary whose name was called by the bailiff, and the little quickening stir of interest and sympathy that never failed to greet her swept through the room and seemed to give her a momentary strength. But her face was so white and her hands so unsteady that the bailiff, without waiting for another order from Langdon, hurried after the smelling salts, his exit through the door into the prison letting in an incongruous burst of hilarity that brought an angry frown to the Judge's face.

He was, however, the only one who noticed it, for the attention of everyone else was fixed upon Mary, who stood swaying in the witness box, her eyes turned appealingly toward Langdon. But though he read their mute prayer correctly he dared not hesitate, and the very first question was the one she had been dreading.

"Miss Page, will you try to tell the Court as fully as possible exactly what occurred on the night when you left the banquet and joined James Pollock in the Hotel Republic?"

It swept away all her new found hope and plunged her dizzily down into despair. To her it seemed to prove that even Langdon placed little or no credence upon the words of Dr. Foster, and she had a feeling of being suddenly isolated—alone—in a world of hostile faces. A sob caught in her throat and the room grew black before her, and when she spoke her words came slowly—one at a time, and sounded strange to her own ears—as though coming from a great distance.

"I—left—the—banquet — room — and went—into — that — other — room. Mr. Pollock—was—there. He wouldn't—let—me—leave. He—he—tried — to — kiss me. Then he threatened me. He—had—a glass of whiskey. I—saw him—coming towards me—and—that's all—I can remember!" Her voice rose shrilly on the last words, and she repeated them, the tears running down her cheeks. "That's all—oh, you KNOW that is all—that I—remember!"

Startled by her outburst and her pallor, Langdon went quickly to her side and laid his hand on hers.

"Of course I know," he said reassuringly. "I just wanted you to repeat it to the court. That was all—and—I won't ask any more questions now."

"But I have one or two to ask," broke in the prosecutor, exultant over the opportunity to cross-examine Mary now that her composure had given way. And, in spite of the whispers of "Shame! He's no right to torture her now," that drifted from the spectators and brought a warning rap from the judge's gavel, he stepped briskly forward and asked:

"Miss Page, Dr. Foster has told a remarkable story of your strange susceptibility to the smell of alcohol. Can you yourself tell of any definite occasion other than the two that have been mentioned—when you were overcome in this—well, very peculiar manner?"

The biting sarcasm of his rasping voice acted upon Mary like a dash of ice water. She straightened up haughtily and her voice was so cool and quiet that the bailiff, who was handing Langdon the smelling salts, made a comic face as if mocking their precaution.

"I have been overcome in that 'peculiar' manner on several occasions."

"Will you name one?"

"Yes. If you will look through the files of the Rochester papers of two summers ago, you will find that I had—an attack while playing in stock in that city."

"Will you describe the circumstances, please?"

"There was a big supper scene in the play which dealt with city life. The company were supposed to be drunken revelers, and I was to join them and drink too. As usual, I had expected to find cold tea in my glass—but for a joke—real champagne had been substituted. I remember only a sickening rush of horror as of some awful impending disaster. I know I screamed—but the next thing I remember was being home in bed. They told me I had rushed from the stage like a madwoman. That of course can be verified by the papers or by any member of that company."

The prosecutor laughed insultingly. "And you," he taunted, "you who go mad at the smell of alcohol are yet sufficiently familiar with it, to recognize real champagne—the moment you lift your glass!"

"I didn't KNOW it was champagne," she protested. "I merely knew it was wine of some kind. It's—it's the smell"—

"The bouquet is the term more frequently used," badgered the prosecutor. "And can you tell us some other occasions, Miss Page, when you drank in that perfume and—were overcome?"

The sneer in his voice was becoming a torture to Mary. She felt like one beating herself against a stone wall. She was bruised and weary, and her agony found vent in a sudden pathetic little cry:

"What is the use of my telling you? You won't believe me!"

"What I believe has nothing to do with the matter," cried the prosecutor. "You must answer the questions put to you while you are on that stand."

"I tell you"—began Mary. Then, with a little choked exclamation she caught at the rail with groping hands. "Philip!" she called. "Philip!" And as he sprang to her side, she collapsed half fainting into his arms, shuddering and sobbing in such obvious hysteria that it did not need Langdon's plea for a short recess to make the Judge say briefly:

"Court will adjourn for fifteen minutes—or until such time as Miss Page is in a condition to be brought back to the stand."

With a grateful glance at his honor, Langdon half carried, half led Mary toward the prison door. Then, as the bailiff came forward to relieve him, he turned sadly back toward his table to try again to think of some new witness, or some method other than by torturing Mary herself upon the witness-stand to prove the truth of the statements of the alienist.

"He—had—a glass of whiskey."

Halfway to his seat, however, he was arrested by a long, low wailing scream that echoed and throbbed through the stone walled corridor.

Twice it came—the horrible scream of a woman in mortal agony or in the throes of delirium. The Judge—halted midway as he was leaving court—stood as if frozen, and even the prosecutor dropped the papers that he held and stared horrified at the door to the prison, which was suddenly flung violently open, revealing Mary struggling in the grasp of the bailiff. Her face was livid, her eyes wide, and her hands were clutching, clawing and beating at the stronger ones that held her. Then again she screamed and wrenching loose, took two or three lurching steps forward, panting like one whose breath is almost spent.

With a hoarse roar of excited horror the spectators sprang to their feet and surged forward; but Langdon was quicker than they, and in three strides was beside her, his arms around her, calling her name with a poignant agony that filled the courtroom and echoed for days in the memory of those who heard it.

It even pierced the mists of delirium in which Mary's tortured soul was sunk, and for a moment she lay quiet, supine, in his arms, moaning softly.

In the instant silence which fell over the room, two voices in the corridor rose with unexpected shrillness.

"I didn't mean no harm!" cried one hotly. "I saw the lady was faint like and I thought a bit of liquor would pull her round. That's all, so help me Gawd, and the minute I puts the bottle in front of her—it—it happened."

With sudden harshness his honor, stepping back to the bench, said:

"Bring in those men from the hall. And let everyone in the room be seated immediately."

Awed by his tone, the spectators slunk back, while two of the court officers hurried into the hall, returning with a pair of sheepish policemen, one of whom was hastily thrusting a bottle of whiskey into his breast pocket.

At the sight Langdon gave a cry of triumph.

"Your honor—that man has a bottle of whiskey. What is more—he is drunk—and his presence in the corridor through which the defendant had to pass, explains—her condition. That, your honor, and gentlemen of the jury, is surely proof enough of the truth of the statements made by Dr. Foster!"

The judge, obviously impressed, frowned down at the policeman, whose flushed and unsteady gait made his condition impossible to disguise.

"Were you in the corridor when the prisoner was led from court?" he asked sternly.

"Yesh, your honor," stammered the policeman.

"Did you speak to her?"

"Yesh shir. I—I—seen she wuz faint like, and I says, says I, a nip will do 'er good. So I jhush—offered her a bit, and she screams and flies at me like a wil' cat."

As if to illustrate his words he went towards Mary and gestured as if again offering her the bottle, and instantly that wailing cry rang out again, and, struggling desperately, Mary twisted herself in the grip of the kindly hands that held her. The grasp of one bailiff was indeed too kindly, being no more than a hold upon the thin silk of her blouse, and as she twisted the stuff gave way and tore—leaving the whiteness of her shoulder exposed. At the sight the prosecutor suddenly gave a hoarse cry and pointed at it. For there lay a hideous bruise—the shadow of a man's hand, with livid scars where the nails cut cruelly into the delicate flesh.

SHE'S THERE BECAUSE SHE PERFORMS—THE 3400 r. p. m. CHALMERS

Most cars start alike. But very few finish alike. Therein comes a mighty difference.

Step on the little button 10 months after date and you'll readily note the inequality.

One is sluggish, "dead", without emotion, and responds to the touch with the speed of old-time oxen responding to the lash.

The other is alive, alert, ready; radiates desire to plunge ahead.

This is the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers kind. The other kind is the species known to the trade as "one-year" cars.

Chalmers makes a five-year car. There's many an old 1909 Chalmers 30 Blue Bird giving a good account of itself today. You'll find the everlasting pep there five years from the day you take your first turn at the wheel.

Largely because of the 3400 r. p. m. engine. Which delivers mighty power with easy effort.

It's mostly in the design. The pistons are aluminum, about two pounds lighter per piston; the reciprocating parts lighter, which eases up the thrust on the bearings.

Then the crank-shaft, which is very heavy, and balanced to the weight of a hair in a special Chalmers device, spins at the rate of 3400 revolutions per minute.

It means excellent reserve power. For at 10 miles an hour the engine is turning up only 500 r. p. m. while at 20 she is doing about 1000 r. p. m. So that at excessive road speed she has the punch to deliver when called upon.

16% of her power is used at 10 miles an hour. So that she has 60% to 84%—when a twisting, hilly road looms ahead, when a sharp corner with a rugged grade hoves in sight; when the man ahead is showing you too much dust.

You'll like the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers for one single little reason. She sure can perform.

Ask your dealer about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

Base Ball Meeting at Plummer.

An auto load of delegates from our local base ball team drove to Plummer Monday evening to attend a base ball meeting held at that place in regard to organizing a base ball league for the coming season.

The towns expecting to take part in this league are Plummer, Brooks, Erskine, St. Hilaire, and perhaps, Gully and Gonvick. Representatives were present from the above mentioned teams. A league was not formed at present, but a schedule of games was planned for the next four Sundays, and if these games are a success the managers of the various teams will then meet and other steps in forming a league will be taken.

This arrangement will assure the teams in the league games for every Sunday in advance and a standing of each team will be kept which will undoubtedly cause a great deal of interest among the "fans."

Barn Burns.

On Tuesday evening, just before six o'clock, the fire department was called out to a fire at the Adolph Satterberg residence on Minnesota avenue and on arrival found that the barn was in a mass of flames. The building was a frame structure about twenty by forty feet, and was just newly painted and remodeled. The department arrived too late to extinguish the flames but was in time to save practically all the contents, among which was Mr. Satterberg's Studebaker machine. The wind was in a favorable direction to keep the sparks from catching on any of the other buildings and with the aid of the department all the adjoining buildings were saved. The fire started in the loft near the northeast corner of the building and the origin of it is unknown. The wind was strong and the entire barn burned quickly. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

MIDDLE RIVER

Quite a few of the ladies of the Arts and Crafts club attended the club convention in Thief River Falls last week.

Mrs. G. F. Walter and two children left last Saturday for Minneapolis, where they will visit until the Doctor goes down after his new Studebaker car which will be some time this week.

Work on Knute Nelson's new house is coming along nicely and it will be only a short time before the concrete for the basement will be allin. The contract was let to Mr. Cronin of Thief River Falls.

B. A. Boberg, of Roseau secured the contract to build Rud and Dunrud's new garage and on last Friday he with a crew of assistants began work thereon.

Clifford Engelstad of Gatzke, who in the earlier part of the winter won a prize of $7.50 in a subscription contest in one of the St. Paul dailies, bought a Ford car from Knute Nelson last week.

The school board was unable to procure either Pres. Vincent or Gov. Burnquist for the dedication exercises to be held the 19. They have however procured ex-governor Eberhart and they will try to get C. G. Selvig of Crookston and Prof. Hay of Thief River Falls to be present that day.

R. C. Bell, of Rollis, went to Grand Forks Monday.

The building activity in Middle River promises to be as thriving this year as last. A. W. Peterson is building a new house and in addition to this Knute Nelson, Oscar Williams and John Olson are going to build residences. The Phillipsons house which was begun last fall will be completed this year.

The town of Spruce Valley is making some noted improvements on the roads of the township. The road from the railroad east to the Bresse corner has been put in excellent shape.

Henry Hanson, of Gatzke, went through here on his way to St. Paul where he went to have an infection of his eyes treated.

Mrs. B. Sathre went to Thief River Falls Monday returning Tuesday.

Oscar Schenkey went to Thief River Falls Monday returning on Tuesday.

Carl Martin and Jim Muir returned Tuesday from Gatzke, where they had been to get a 10 horse power stationary gasoline engine that belonged to J. B. Arpin and was shipped to Warroad. They reported that it was a heavy haul even for the big teams that they used.

Con Wedmer and his brother, Olaf, autoed with their wives to Thief River Falls Sunday, returning Monday.

Frank Weiland of Thief River Falls came to Middle River Tuesday.

The hard wind that we had Sunday disarranged a few of the signs in town.

GOVERNMENT'S REPORT FOR MAY IS PUBLISHED

Forecast Indicates That Wheat Production Will be Far Below Past Two Years.

The government bureau of crop statistics, under the date of May 8, has sent out a summary of the crop situation in the state of Minnesota as it appeared on May 1. The forecast indicates a reduction in nearly every case from the production of last year, the figures more nearly resembling those of two years ago.

Winter Wheat—The forecast on May 1 this year was for 885,000 bushels, while the final estimate of the crop for last year is 1,170,000 bushels. Two years ago it was 655,000 bushels, and three years ago 810,000 bushels.

Rye— Forecast for the present year, 5,280,000 bushels; final estimate of last year's production, 5,850,000 bushels.

Meadows—Condition this year, 82 as compared with a ten year average of 87.

Spring plowing—Estimated that an average of 60 per cent had been done to May 1, 1916, as compared with 74 per cent last year, and 60 per cent the ten year average.

Spring planting—47 per cent done on May 1, 1916, estimated, compared with 71 per cent at the corresponding period last year, and 66 per cent the ten year average.

Hay—Old crop on farms May 1, estimatedat at 385,00 tons as compared with 395,000 tons a year ago, and 324,000 two years ago.

	1916	1915
Wheat	$1.10	$1.47
Corn	.70	.64
Oats	.39	.49
Potatoes	.68	.49
Hay	8.90	7.50
Eggs	.17	.17

INCUBATOR FIRE COSTS LIVES OF FOUR PERSONS

Farmer Near Warroad, His Mother, Sister and Son, Lose Lives When House Burns.

Fire destroyed the home of Herman Ingman, a farmer living near Warroa, at 3 a. m. Sunday. Ingman, his aged mother, his sister and his son, George, were trapped by the flames and burned to death.

Five other members of the family were rescued, but Mrs. Ingman, wife of the farmer, and her oldest daughter were badly burned.

The fire is supposed to have started from an incubator, which was in the cellar of the house. George, aged 19, was the first to be awakened by heat and smoke, but was overcome while attempting to arouse the others.

SOO SWITCHMAN INJURED

Elmer Roll, Falls From Top of Box Car in Soo Yards,—Is Improving Rapidly.

As the result of the trucks leaving the tracks in making a "flying switch," stopping the car "dead," Elmer Roll, switchman with the day crew, fell from the top of a moving car to the ground below, a distance of about 12 feet Monday morning. A terrific wind was also blowing and it is thought that when the car stopped suddenly, causing him to lose his balance slightly, the wind assisted materially in toppling him off the car's roof. He was taken to the Physician's hospital, where it was discovered he had received minor injuries to his back besides being badly shaken up. He is now recovering rapidly, and will soon be back on the job.

Mr. Rooll's home is at Glenwood, Minn.

Russell Returns—W. D. Russell, Soo Line fireman, returned Tuesday evening from a two week's stay at Adams, N. D. He will leave shortly for Superior.

Goes Home.—Soo Line Fireman, O. L. Larson left Wednesday morning for Roseau to enjoy a brief visit at the home of his parents.

CALLBOY PLAYS PART OF HERO

"I CAN thank my lucky stars I was able to swim," said Night Dispatcher "Jim" Wiley, of the Soo Line, Friday afternoon shortly after he had emerged from the cold waters of the Red Lake river as the result of taking an unexpected dip, when the canoe in which he was riding capsized on striking a "dead-head" under the Soo railroad bridge. The swift current of the river also assisted in overturning the boat. The congenial dispatcher is some classy swimmer too, believe us. "Yes," he continued, "it was pretty hard swimming with all my clothes on, but by swimming on my back it was rather easy. One should always do this if they can, because it conserves their energy. The water was a little chilly allright, but I didn't mind it—it proved rather invigorating," he chuckled and started off for the Soo depot to report for duty.

"Joe" Bartley, day caller, who was pacing the hallway on the second floor of the depot awaiting orders to summon an afternoon train crew, reached the hallway's end just as the boat overturned and from the window observed "Jim" and his troubles. "Joe" rushed to the river, obtained an antiquated sailing craft and set sail for the ill-fated canoe, bumped "without warning." By the time he reached the center of the river, "Jim" had swam to shore, where he stood directing the rescue work, and yelled to Bartley, "never mind the canoe save my watch in my coat pocket. It tipped out of the boat." "Joe" trailed the floating coat down stream to the G. N. bridge, where he was successful in grabbing it. The canoe, however, went over the dam and was caught by Bartley in the neighborhood of "Lovers' Lane." When he returned the boat was turned over to him for his faithful services.

RAZOR STROP PATENTED BY THIEF RIVER BARBER

Lars. L. Furan Invents Power Device Which Will Do Work Better And Quicker Than by Hand.

Lars L. Furan of Thief River Falls, was last week notified that he had been granted a patent on a razor stropping device which looks like a winner. The new machine will do away with the old system of hand stropping entirely, and the patentee and others who should know what they are talking about say that it will prove a great improvement over the system employed without much change ever since razors were first invented.

The device consists of two rotating disks, covered on their inner surface with the same kind of hide as is ordinarily used for razor straps. Between these disks the razor is placed, and the mechanicism is so arranged that first one side of the implement and then the other is held against the revolving surface. The tension is furnished by a spring, and the same pressure is thus continually assured, causing the blade to receive exactly the same amount of attrition on both sides. The razor oscillates of its own accord through the medium of a swivel, this serving to give each side of the blade an equal amount of attention.

Mr. Furan states that the machine may be operated by hand or where more than one is used, electric power may be employed if so desired. A whole room full of these revolving straps may be operated by one motor, and every razor in the place will be strapped to an exact and uniform edge. The inventor believes that the machine can be put on the market for less than $5.00 and will in a very large degree solve the problem of working more than one barber with the same set of tools. At present every journeyman must strap his own razor in his own particular way or he is helpless. By strapping all razors alike and with the highest possible degree of efficiency, all barbers will be able to use any of these tools at hand.

Mr. Furan is negotiating for the manufacture of the article, and expects soon to have it on the market.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Flynn, a representative of the Palmer company, whose writing system is in use in the public schools, spent Monday and Tuesday of this week supervising the writing work. The Palmer system is the most popular plan of penmanship in this country and its introduction into local schools this year was a wise move.

The Stephen high school baseball team defeated the locals last Saturday by a score of 15 to 1.

A favorable report on the Washington school experiment of intensive use of the building was made on Monday to the Board of Education by the Superintendent and the seven teachers whose rooms were involved in the trial. It is evident that this plan could be extended with safety into other grades and buildings.

Miss Granager, the visiting nurse, returned from Crookston last Friday and will now complete the physical examination of the school children.

Several excellent addresses were delivered in the normal department and the high school assembly by some of the ladies who attended the Federation meeting in this city last week. It is interesting to note that most of the clever women who attended the club gathering were at one time school teachers.

A great gathering of Pennington county boys and girls will take place next Saturday at the Lincoln building at 11 o'clock. These are the 300 young people who have enrolled in the various industrial contests inaugurated by the agricultural department of the high school. Prof. T. A. Erickson, state club leader, will be present and give final instructions to the boys and girls. About $250 cash, as well as other prizes, will be distributed to the winners in the fall. Every boy and girl under 18 in the county has the privilege of enrolling and competing for some of the prizes. It costs nothing to enter.

Through the generosity of John Brumund, a pleasing entertainment will be presented at the Princess, Friday of this week, by some of the high school pupils to clear up a small deficit in the athletic treasury.

CONFERENCE ON 8 HOUR DAY QUESTION

Committees of Seventeen Named to Negotiate With Railroad Employees.

Meeting Will Begin June 1 in New York City—Will Develop Strike or Arbitration.

An official announcement of the general conference committee, which will represent the railroads of the United States in negotations with the four organizations of railway train service employees, who have demanded 8 hours a day and time and a half for all overtime, was made on Wednesday, May 3. Seventeen members compose the committee. They are as follows:

West—C. W. Kouns, general manager, Eastern lines of Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway, Topeka, Kansas.; C. H. Emerson, general manager St. Louis & San Francisco, St. Louis.; James Russell, general manager, Denver & Rio Grande railroad, Denver; P. H. Morrissey, assistant to vice president, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, railroad, Chicago. One to be appointed.

Southeast—F. H. Chapman, vice president and general manager, Southern railway, Washington, D. C.; N. B. Maher, vice president, Norfolk & Western railway, Roanoke, Va.; L. M. Baldwin, general manager, Central of Georgia railroad, Savannah, Ga.; Lyman Delane, vice president, Atlantic Coast line railroad, Wilmington, N. C.; W. L. Seddon, vice president, Seaboard Airline, Norfolk, Va.

Representatives of the brotherhoods will meet with the railroad representatives in a series of conferences beginning June 1 in New York city.

It is contemplated that representatives of the employees from the different districts will first meet with the railroad representative from that district and take up with him the reply of the railroads he represents to the demand made upon them by the employees. Then the result of the district conference will be taken up at a meeting of all the representatives. It is expected that that these conferences will develop whether the employees and the railroads will arbitrate or not and whether the employees will strike as it has been intimated in some instances.

Week-End On "J" Line.—F. Burgraff, lineman for the Soo at this division point, spent the latter part of last week on the Wheatline repairing the telegraph lines.

Returns From The West.—H. D. Keene, Soo Line trainmaster of the Winnipeg division, returned Friday evening from over the Wheatline, where he had passed the day acting in his official capacity.

Smith Leaves.—Leslie Smith, who holds a three right with the Soo Line as fireman, has resigned and left the latter part of last week for Two Harbors to accept a position with a mining company.

To Two Harbors.—C. Carlson, who until a month ago has been employed as machinist helper at the Soo round house, left the latter part of last week for Two Harbors, to accept a position as fireman on an ore train.

Goes to Convention.—J. S. Barnett, Soo Line conductor, took his departure last Friday evening for St. Louis, Mo., to attend a convention of railroad conductors. He will return the latter part of this month. Mr. Barnett has had charge of the Noyes—Thief River Falls freight run.

To Minneapolis.—Fireman George Johnstone, of the Soo Line on the Winnipeg division, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis and St. Paul on a brief pleasure trip. He returned the first of the week.

Fills Position.—Hugo Golden former night call boy, was transferred to the position of night yard clerk the latter part of last week filling the vacancy caused by the departure of George Costello, who left for Chicago on a business and pleasure trip.

Raise In Salary.—The Soo Line has seen fit to raise the salary of the section employees and machinist helpers and now comes the official announcement that all workers of the car department on the Winnipeg division have been granted a raise of salary of 1½ cents per hour, straight time. The raise was effective May 1. There are 54 men employed in the car department at the Soo yards in this city.

Finish "Exams."—Traveling Engineer Charles Stabler of Harvey, N. D., of the Soo Line, finished conducting the firemen and engineers examination at the round house the latter part of last week. There were between 30 and 40 men who were quizzed, and from reports all made splendid showings. Mr. Stabler left for Harvey Saturday morning.

Officials Return.— Superintendent W. A. Barnard, of the Winnipeg division, had his private car attached to the Wheatline local last Saturday evening, having returned from points along the line after spending Friday and Saturday on an official business trip. He was accompanied by Assistant Master Mechanic J. W. Hendry on the trip.

Improving the Grounds.—Workmen have been busy for the past week at the Soo depot grounds filling in and leveling out the low places with good black sod. The yard is to be sown with grass seed and will no doubt stand high among the pretty lawns of the city. Beautiful flower gardens are also contemplated, and will be well attended to during the summer months. The Soo is to be congratulated in their endeavor to keep things up to the minute.

Hoveland to Leave.—Amund Hoveland, store clerk at the Soo round house has been granted a ninety day leave of absecnce and will leave shortly for an extended trip to South America. Mr. Hoveland received his passport last week from Washington, D. C., and is about ready to start on the trip. He will make a short visit to his claim near Grygla, before leaving, however. Ingvold Fossum, local store keeper, has assumed Hoveland's duties.

Saturday in Cities.—John Nelson, Soo Line engineer, left last Friday night on 110 for Minneapolis and St. Paul, where he passed Saturday on a business trip, returning early Sunday morning. Mr. Nelson has been holding the 109 flyer run between Mahnomen and Emerson.

"Hank" is Off."—W. E. Hankins, switch foreman at the Soo yards, is now off for his annual thirty day vacation, having left last Friday evening. "Hank" is due in the "Windy City" with the issue of this paper, to spend a few days sight-seeing. From Chicago he will leave for Brooklyn, Long Island, where he will enjoy a visit with his mother, thence going to New York city, Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia, Pa., to spend a few days at each place. From the latter city he will go to points in Kansas to visit with friends and relatives. The last lap of his trip will take him from Kansas to Duluth to attend the state B. P. O. Elks convention on June 15, returning to Thief River Falls Saturday June 17. J. E. Blomquist is acting as switch foreman during "Hank's" absence.

LeDou Returns.—Bert G. LeDou, Soo Line conductor, returned Saturday evening from the Twin Cities, where he had spent a week attending to business matters of a personal nature.

Turnbaugh Returns.—Soo Line Engineer James Turnbaugh, who was called to Goodridge by the illness of his father, and who has spent a week in Thief River Falls renewing old railroad acquaintances, left Monday to resume his duties on the Fordville-Drake line. Mrs. Turnbaugh, who is still in the city visiting with friends, will return later.

Goes to Shoreham.—Soo Fireman Thomas Maclaskey, took his departure Sunday evening on 110 for Shorehame, having been transferred to a run out of that place. Mr. Maclaskey has made Thief River Falls his home for the past five months.

Goes On Leave.— Soo Fireman Frank Olson left Sunday evening for a two months vacation, having been granted a leave of absence. He stopped off in Minneapolis over Monday and Tuesday and then proceeded to Chicago, where he will be the guest of his sister.

BOUQUETS HANDED TO SOO LINE

"THE SOO yards and station grounds are the cleanest and neatest appearing I have observed west of Chicago," said A. J. Jackson, an eastern railroader, to the Times' representative, the first of the week, while stopping off in Thief River Falls for a day. "The depot is a splendid structure, and is one of the finest for the size of the city I have seen," he continued, "besides it is a building the people can take a vast amount of pride in." He then went on to compliment the city on its liveness and metropolitan aspect.

Goes To Superior—Alfred Johnson, fireman for the Soo, left Tuesday morning for Superior, Wisconsin, where he will hold a run out of that division point. He has of late been firing on the Wheatline.

Transferred—Joe Larabee, Soo Line fireman, returned Monday evening from Minneapolis, where he had spent a few days on a pleasure trip. He left again the following morning for Superior, having been transferred to a run out of that division point.

Returns to The Cities.—Mrs. C. A. Philstrom returned to her home in Minneapolis on Sunday evening after spending Sunday in the city visiting with her husband, who is engaged as traveling auditor by the Soo Line, making Thief River Falls his headquarters.

ss.
County of Pennington,
In Probate Court,
Special Term, May 2nd, 1916.

In the Matter of the Determination of the Heirs of Guri K. Qvande, Deceased Homestead Settler.

ORDER FOR HEARING.

On reading and filing the petition of Josephine Korstad, nee Josephine Qvande, praying, among other things, for the judicial determination, by this Court, of who are the heirs of Guri K. Qvande, deceased homestead settler, and what are the respective rights and interests of such heirs in the homestead land of said deceased, and to assign said homestead to the parties legally entitled to the same,

IT IS ORDERED, That said petition and said matter be heard and examined on Monday the 5th day of June, A. D. 1916, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of said day, at the office of the Probate Court at Thief River Falls, in said County and State.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week for three (3) successive weeks immediately prior to said date of hearing in the Thief River Falls Times, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Thief River Falls in said County and State.

Dated at Thief River Falls, Minn., this 2nd day of May, A. D. 1916.

BY THE COURT,
WILHELM MICHELET,
Judge of Probate Court.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, containing a power of sale, executed by Andrew A. Hanson, an unmarried man, mortgagor, to Johnson Van Sant Co., mortgagee, dated the 31st day of December A. D. 1910 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Red Lake (now Pennington) on the 6th day of January A. D. 1911 at 11 o'clock A. M. in Book 38 of Mortgages on page 223 thereof, which said mortgage was assigned by Johnson Van Sant Co. to Grant Van Sant, by instrument dated the 6th day of May A. D. 1911 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Pennington on the 29th day of March A. D. 1916 at 1 o'clock P. M. in Book 56 of Mortgages on page 121 thereof, of the records of said office; and said assignee has exercised the option reserved to the holder of said note and mortgage by the terms thereof, and has declared the entire sum immediately due and payable, and there is due and payable at the date of this notice upon said mortgage and the debt thereby secured, the sum of Eighteen Hundred Fourteen and 9-100 Dollars ($1,814.09), and taxes in the sum of Sixty Two and 7-100 Dollars ($62.07); and no action or proceeding has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

AND THEREFORE, That by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained which by reason of the facts aforesaid has become operative, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the land and premises described therein and covered thereby, situate, lying and being in the County of Pennington and State of Minnesota, and described as follows: The Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter (SENW) and the East Half of the Southwest Quarter (E½SW), and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter (NWSE) of Section Seven (7) in Township One Hundred Fifty-Three (153) of Range Forty-Four (44), will be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder therefor, for cash, by the sheriff of said Pennington County, to satisfy and pay the amount which shall then be due on said debt so secured by said mortgage, and the sum of Seventy Five Dollars ($75) stipulated in said mortgage as attorney's fees, and the costs and expenses of these foreclosure proceedings as allowed by law, and that the sale will be made at the front door of the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington County, at the hour of 2 o'clock in the afternoon, on the 27th day of May, 1916.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Fifty-five and 83-100 Dollars ($55.83), which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Charles Bengtson and Hanna Bengtson, his wife, Mortgagors, to the Citizens State Bank of Thief River Falls, (a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota), Mortgagee, bearing date the 6th day of May, 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington and State of Minnesota, on the 12th day of May, 1913, at 4:00 o'clock P. M., in Book 7 of Mortgages, on page 238.

AND WHEREAS, The said Citizens State Bank of Thief River Falls, (a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota), the Mortgagee and Holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of six hundred and No-100 Dollars ($600.00), with interest thereon at the rate of Ten (10) per cent per annum from the 31st day of May, 1914, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or, otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof;

NOW, THEREFORE, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute, in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz: Lots numbered Three (3), Four (4) and Five (5) in Block numbered Thirty-nine (39) of the Original Townsite of Thief River Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Pennington County, State of Minnesota, lying and being in Pennington County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, except the South Half (S½) of said Lot number Three (3) in said Block number Thirty-nine (39) which has heretofore been released from said mortgage by the said Mortgagee; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State, on the 17th day of May, 1916, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Seven Hundred nine and 64-100 Dollars ($709.64), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty and No-100 Dollars ($50.00), Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated March 28th, A. D. 1916.

"Well, I Should Say 'Gets-It' DOES Work"

"Look a' There, If You Don't Think It's Just Wonderful for Corns!"

"Bless my stars, look at it! Land of the livin'! Why, just look at it! That corn came right off,—just like peeling bananas. Put your finger on my toe, right there,—don't be afraid,—that's it,—feel how smooth the skin is? Well, that's where the corn was. Well, that beats all!" That's the way "Gets-It" works on all corns, every corn, every time. It's the new, simple way of curing corns. You'll say goodbye to all foolish contraptions like bundling bandages, sticky tape, plasters, toe-eating salves, and gravediggers such as knives, razors and scissors. "Gets-It" stops pain. Applied in 2 seconds. Never fails. Nothing to stick to, hurt or press on the corn.

"Did You Ever See the Like? No Wonder 'Gets-It' is the Biggest Selling Corn Cure in the World!"

Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

REGULATIONS FOR LIGHT AND WATER

New Charter Provides That City Manager Shall Have Full Charge of This Department.

MUST PAY FRANCHISE TAX

In Return City is Assessed at Full Rates For all Light and Water Used For Street Illumination and Fire Protection.

The new city charter soon to be accepted or rejected by the people contains many features with which they should become thoroughly acquainted before they can be expected to vote intelligently upon the subject. The Times has heretofore touched upon some of the matters of general interest, and will continue to do so from week to week until the readers of the paper shall have received a very good idea of the charter's most important provisions. Among these none are of more interest than the manner in which the light and water departments are to be conducted.

Under the new code the city manager will be the executive officer and superintendent of these departments. His duties wil include the hiring and dismissing of all subordinate employees and exercising of a general supervision over the affairs of the department.

Rates Fixed By Council.

The council will by ordinance establish such rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary for the supplying of water and light to the inhabitants of the city. It will also fix all rates and the period for which advance payments shall be required, establish the time for the inspection of meters and accounts and exercise a general control over these public utilities.

The water and light accounts will be regarded as a lien against the property whereon the same are used, and the owner and lesee will both be held liable for their payment. In case of failure or refusual to make such payment, the same may be enforced by foreclosure in the district court. The cost of the labor performer in connecting any premises with the water and light supply is to be regarded as a mechanic's lien and collectable in the manner usual in such cases.

City Must Pay For Utilities.

The city manager will be required to keep as nearly as possible an account of the water and light used by the city, and this shall be paid for the same as in the case of any other user, payments to be made quarterly. In cases where it is impossible for the manager to fix the exact amount of water used by the city, the council shall determine as nearly as possible the amount so used.

Plant Must Pay Franchise Tax.

The city will charge a gross earnings or franchise tax against the water and light plant, such tax to be paid annually or quarterly into the general fund of the city. The sum to be paid as such tax by this department will be determined at the time other expense levies are made. The tax to be paid by the department for the ensuing year shall be determined on the basis of gross earnings during the current year. In no case, however, shall this franchise tax exceed ten per cent of the gross earnings of the departments.

$10,000 for Depreciation.

A subsidary fund of $10,000, to be known as the Depreciation Fund shall annually be established out of the revenues derived from the water and light department. This money can be used only for expenses incidental to the depreciation in the physical value of the plants. Any money in this fund not required for present use may be invested by the sinking fund board.

Public Utilities Certificates

The council may, whenever it shall be deemed proper and needful, issue and sell interest bearing certificates for the extension, improvement or enlargement of the water and light plants. These certificates will be secured by mortgages upon the plants and the revenues thereof, but the same shall not be a general liability of the city and shall be paid solely from the revenues derived from the plant or from the sale thereof. The power to issue such certificates shall, however, only be exercised after a referendum vote has been had on the subject and such action ratified.

SPEECH AND SONG STORY AND SAGA

Seventeenth of May Celebration Here Will be Biggest Event in The Northwest.

The Thief River Falls division of the Sons and Daughters of Norway will be host at the greatest celebration of Norway's independence day to be held in northwestern Minnesota at the Auditorium on the 17th. An interesting program has been arranged and the committee has sent invitations to all nearby cities and villages asking that everyone come and help them celebrate the day considered of so much importance in the land of their own or their forebears' nativity.

Peer Stromme, editor of the "Normanden," and one of the most widely known Norwegians in America, will deliver the principal address. H. C. Rowberg will be chairman of the meeting, and the following program has been arranged. Owing to the fact that Mr. Stromme must return on the train leaving Thief River Falls at 10:00 o'clock, the committee anounces that the program will be begun at 8:00 sharp:

Music	Ben Lonson
Address	Peer Stromme.
Song	Miss Clara Bakke.
"Skroner"	Olaf Neset.
Violin solo	Paul Morck
Folk Songs	Miss Ruth Storli and Rheuben Aga.
Duet	Dr. P. L. Vistaunet and B. Dan Bjorkman.
"America"	Audience

Dancing will follow the close of the program numbers and lunch will be served in the basement of the Auditorium. As it is no ones intention to benefit financially by this entertainment, the tickets have been placed on sale at 50 cents each which includes all the doings of the evening—entertainment, dance and lunch.

The Sons and Daughters of Norway wish it understood that people of all nationalities will be made welcome at this "fest." While the greater part of the program will be rendered in Norwegian, the dancing and lunch will be in languages understood and enjoyed by everyone.

SECOND ANNUAL CORN SHOW ON DEC. 11TH

Prizes Aggregating $5,000 to be Divided Between Men and Boys of Each County.

One of the important agricultural events of the Northwest for 1916 will be the second annual national corn show, which will be held at St. Paul, Minnesota, December 11-16 inclusive. Contests will be open to every farmer's son in the Northwest.

The corn show territory will remain the same as last year, Pennington county remaining in the first district with Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Polk, Red Lake, Norman, Mahnomen, Clearwater, Beltrami, Hubbard and Cass.

Four prizes will be awarded in each district of each state, a first and second prize for men and a first and second prize for boys, trophies for the latter to be of like design and equal in value to those awarded the adult exhibitors.

Each exhibit must consist of ten ears of any variety of Indian Corn raised by the contestant in a field of one or more acres, but not less than one acre. No Fee will be charged for entry of exhibits.

GOOD POTATO CROP IS PREDICTED THIS SEASON

Higher Prices Promised and Greater Acreage Probable in Northwestern Minnesota.

Letters sent out to people in this neighborhood by Congressman Steenerson contain the information that potatoes will in all likelihood be a good crop to expand on this season, owing to a short acreage in the southern portions of Ohio and other northern states where potash is necessary to insure a paying crop. Congressman Steenerson says the potash used is imported from Germany and the source of supply has been cut off by the war. He therefore urges farmers in Minnesota to increase their potato acreage as potash does not have to be supplied in this state in order to make the crop a success. He believes there will be a big demand for the tubers next fall, with stiff prices. This advice will probably be generally heeded as potatoes can be safely seeded later than wheat and still produce a big crop. There is an abundance of good seed available and in addition to the good prospects for a strong market, a potato crop is one of the best raised to get the ground in shape for a grain crop the following year.

FORMER "MUDHEN" OWNER IS JAILED AND FINED

To have your boat confiscated by the government, then wrecked by the ice, and on top of these misfortunes to be fined and jailed for having used the boat aforesaid as an illegal liquor vending establishment would seem like plenty of hard luck to most folks. This has all happened to William Cook, who formerly operated the steamer "Mudhen" on Red Lake. The Times last week contained a photograph of the wreck of this steamer and told something of its trouble with the government.

On Thursday last, when the criminal calendar was taken up in the United States court at Fergus Falls, the case of Cook came up before Judge Page Morris. Cook had pleaded not guilty to the indictment, but after hearing what the government had to offer, changed his plea to guilty. Judge Morris sentenced him to five months in the county jail at Bemidji and to pay a fine of $500.

ASK MODIFICATION OF TRACK REMOVAL ORDER

Complainants Must Show Cause by May 29 Why Stay Should Not Be Granted.

The property owners along Davis avenue who have been demanding that the tracks of the Minnesota Northwestern railway be removed from that thoroughfare have been ordered to show cause why a plea for an extension of time should not be granted. Judge Grindeland granted the order at a special hearing on Thursday evening, and it is returnable on May 29.

The request for an extension was based on the statement that the city of Thief River Falls has at present under consideration an ordinance which may make it impossible for the railroad to use the street by moving its tracks to the west side thereof, and asks that the time limit for the removal of the tracks be extended to July 1.

The complaining property owners were ordered not to interfere with the tracks of the road until after the hearing shall have taken place and the matter decided. The order was served upon the complainants Friday.

Frank Grady of Crookston, is the attorney now in charge of the case for the property owners.

CLERKS OF COURT MUST FILE FOR RE-ELECTION

Those elected Two Years Ago Will Have to go Before Voters This Fall.

H. E. Ives, clerk of court of Pennington county, will have to go before the voters for re-election again this year, on account of the recent ruling which has been given by the supreme court. Mr. Ives says that he is not greatly suprised at the ruling and that he is perfectly willing to trust the voters of the county again but would have been a little better pleased if the trouble and expense of an election could have been avoided.

In the last legislature the terms of many of the county officers were extended from two to four years. In an effort to make all the county officer's terms end at the same time, it was also enacted that the clerks of court, who had been elected in 1912, and whose terms would end January 1, 1917, should hold over for two more years. In that way all the county officers in the state would be elected in the same year, every four years. Mr. Ives and fifty two other clerks of court in the state were elected in 1912 and in accordance with the latest ruling of the supreme court will come up for re-election next fall.

The supreme court held that as the terms of the clerks of court were stipulated in the state constitution, it was impossible for the legislature to change them. The opinion was written by Judge Dible.

BIG MEETING OF DIST. BANKERS

Thirteenth Annual Convention of Ninth District Group Was Held Here on Tuesday.

PROMINENT MEN SPEAK

Banquet at Hotel Evelyn in Evening Attended by About 150 Bankers and Their Friends—Most Successful in Every Detail.

The thirteenth annual session of the ninth district group of the Minnesota Bankers' association which was held in this city on Tuesday, was one of the best attended and most successful in the history of the association. Besides bankers from nearly every town and city in the district. there were present a number from the Twin Cities and other Minnesota points. These last left on Wednesday for Bemidji, at which city the meeting of the Sixth district group was held.

Morning Sessions.

The morning sessions were taken up with address of welcome by Mayor Gambell, response by O. W. Lundsten, president of the Minnesota Bankers' association, and address of H. S. Erickson, president of the Ninth district group association.

Committees were appointed and the delegates registered as they arrived on forenoon trains, the club being headquarters during the convention. The following local bankers acted as a reception committee, meeting the different trains and making the visitors welcome: George G. Johnson, president of the Commercial club and cashier of the First State bank; C. L. Hansen, president of the First National bank; T. L. Melgaard, president Citizens State bank; Henry S. Dahlen, cashier of the Peoples State bank.

Officers Elected.

Officers elected were: G. J. Johnson, Argyle, president; E. Donaldson, vice president; J. H. Bradish, Hallock, secretary; B. Rathbun, Detroit, treasurer; executive committee, T. J. Evans, Fergus Falls; J. P. Foote, Crookston. Member State Bankers' association, three year term, C. L. Hansen, Thief River Falls.

The Farmer and the Banker.

At the afternoon session the "Relations Between the Farmer and the Banker" was the subject of an interesting discussion by Professor J. H. Hay of the city schools, who went into the question at considerable length, emphasizing the necessity for co-operation between these two vital factors in the progress of a community and pointing out that the farmers are laboring under a wrong impression, namely, that the banker, because of his associations with so-called "big interests," is liable to take advantage of him and that the farmers, being unorganized, are more or less at the mercy of financial organizations.

The suspicion, resulting perhaps from articles in farm papers and politically colored reports, circulated with a selfish intent, is still in existance, although being eliminated in a measure by bankers, especially those in rural communities, meeting the farmer on an equal footing and showing an interest in his undertakings and enterprises.

The speaker suggested as a remedy that bankers devote more time to personal acquaintance with the farmer and get into closer touch with him. That they spend less money on catalogues and more in offering prizes for farm products and dairying in rural communities, thus indicating a personal and substantial interest which would go to show that they were not after the almighty dollar, and that alone, was suggested.

Rural Credits Bill.

Doubt was expressed as to the real benefits to rural communities of the rural credits bill as at present outlined should it become a law.

O. M. Corwin, vice president of the Wells Dickey Co., in discussing rural credits, stated: "Low rates of interest cannot be accomplished by legislation. The development of the country is not ripe for the ammortization of the principal and until the farmer has all the capital he requires for his business he is not justified in attempting to pay back the principal.

"In old farming communities this might work, but in new territory where this legislation will benefit, if at all, on the question of rates the farmer cannot ammortize his principal without detriment to his operations."

Federal Reserve Bank.

The subject of the federal reserve bank from its organization was interestingly discussed by Gray Warren of Minneapolis, he taking the place of Theo. Wold, who was unable to be present. Mr. Warren has but recently returned from a visit to Chicago, where he attended a meeting of the federal reserve board.

His address was one of special interest to the assembled bankers and a general discussion of the subject followed. The afternoon sessions took up the entire time until 6 p. m., when a recess was taken until the banquet hour.

The convention was voted one of the most successful in the history of the organization and visiting bankers from the Twin Cities as well as delegates voted the local committee and the Commercial club good hosts and Thief River Falls was one of the most progressive cities in the state.

At the Banquet.

The banquet was presided over by W. W. Prichard, Sr., of the First National bank of this city, recognized as the dean of bankers in this section of the state. Mr. Prichard, in a few preliminary remarks, reviewed the early history of banking operations in northern Minnesota and in introducing the several speakers indicated his familiarity with the men of finance generally in spicy personality and witty sally. He was given an ovation at the conclusion of a very clever introductory address.

Visiting bankers and a number of the delegates spoke briefly on subjects of interest to men of finance and the banquet, elaborate in every detail, closed one of the most successful conventions in the history of the Ninth district group.

COMMITTEES NAMED FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Citizens and School Children Will Unite in Fittingly Honoring Men Who Preserved Uunion.

Memorial day is to be fittingly observed in Thief River Falls. Subcommittees appointed by the Commercial club are preparing a program with the children of the schools and the citizens generally will be asked to participate and thus show that they realize the debt they owe to the men of 1861-65.

Memorial day should this year prove an occasion of more than ordinary importance throughout the United States. Commemorating as it does the achievements of the soldiery of the North during one of the greatest struggles in the world's history, interest in this anniversary should grow with the passing of time instead of gradually diminishing, which it seems in great danger of doing.

The school children will play an important part in the exercises, and this is most fitting. The war was fought in order that a free and united country might be their heritage, and they should never be permitted to forget the debt they owe.

All the arrangements have not been completed, but are in the hands of capable committees, all the members of which will do their utmost to make this the most successful Memorial day observance in the history of the city. These committees are as follows: Program—H. O. Kjomme, Rev. F. J. Seltz, W. W. Prichard, jr. Band—Geo. Johnson, N. J. Anderson. Vocal Music—Miss Evelyn Grindeland, Mrs. C. A. Nason, Chase F. Mix. Decorating—Mrs. T. L. Melgaard, Mrs. Daniel Shaw, Charles Anderson, R. Gulbranson. Autos—John Bratrud, H. R. Halvorson. School Children's Parade—Supt. J. H. Hay. Marshal of the Day—W. J. La Bree. The cemetery board will have charge of the work to be done at the burial place of the departed soldiers.

COUNTY OFFICERS WILL HOLD OVER.

The four-year term law for county officers was upheld by a decision of the state supreme court last Thursday. All sheriffs, county treasurers, auditors, county attorneys, registers of deeds, coroners, superintendents of schools and county surveyors elected in 1914 will hold over until 1918, and will not have to stand for re-election this year.

The case came up from Wright county on relation of Fred J. Fisher, who sought to file for county treasurer, but was refused by J. A. Berg, county auditor. Fischer's attorneys claimed that the law was unconstitutional, and that the legislature had no right to lengthen terms. This position is held untenable by Commissioner H. B. Dibell, who wrote the opinion.

"There is no question here of extension of the term of an incumbent," says the opinion, "or of depriving an office of its elective character." The offices covered by the 1913 law, it says, are not mentioned in the constitution. The claim that the provision in the constitution, that elections shall be held every two years, fixes terms at two years, is held to be "ingenious but unsound." It is a question of policy to be determined by the legislature, the opinion holds.

NORSE NATION'S DAY OBSERVED

One Hundred and Second Anniversary of Norway's Independence Fittingly Observed.

GOOD MUSICAL PROGRAM

Peer Stromme, Poet, Journalist and World Traveller Delivers Main Address of the Day.

"Ja vi elsker dette landet som det stiger frem
Furet veirbidt over vandet
med de tusind hjem."

With the above sentiment in mind, loyal sons and daughters of the land of the mid-night sun, gathered at the Auditorium Wednesday evening to celebrate the 102nd anniversary of Norway's independence. The large building was crowded to its capacity, not only by Norwegians, but also by representatives of other nationalities, who gathered to help their friends and neighbors to celebrate. It was to some Norwegians what the 4th of July is to Americans.

The local lodge of the Sons of Norway had charge of the celebration, or entertainment, and greater success crowned the efforts of those in charge than had been anticipated. An excellent program had been prepared and was rendered in a most pleasing manner. All the numbers were well received with liberal applause. During the day the national flag of Norway, with the "Good Old Stars and Stripes," fluttered in the breezes from the Auditorium flagstaff, while smaller flags of the two nations were prominently displayed about the city. At 3:30 in the afternoon at the high school campus, a Norwegian drill in charge of Miss Ruth Storli, was given by 60 girls dressed in the national costume of Norway and proved to be an interesting part of the day's program. Peer Stromme, orator of the day, who was present at the exercises made a brief address at the ground shortly after the exercises closed. The girls then formed in line and paraded the business section of the city singing Norway's national air. The members of the committee who had charge of the celebration feel deeply indebted to Miss Storli for the excellent manner in which her part was carried out.

Peer Stromme, editor of Normanden and one of the most widely known Norwegians in America, delivered the main address in the evening. His address, which dealt with patriotism and the work that Norwegians had done in America, was punctuated with applause very frequently. After speaking in Norwegian, Mr. Stromme spoke for some time in English.

Other numbers of the program were a cornet solo by Ben Lenson, song by Miss Clara Bakke, "Skroner" by Olaf Neset, violin solo by Paul Morck, folk songs by Miss Ruth Storli and Rheuben Aga, duet by Dr. P. L. Vistaunet and B. Dan Bjorkman. The program ended with the singing of "America" by the audience, all of whom arose during its rendition.

Following the program the floor was cleared of seats and dancing took place until after midnight, lunch being served in the basement of the Auditorium. As it was no ones intention to benefit financially by this entertainment, the tickets were placed on a very reasonable scale which permitted all to enjoy themselves at all the doings.

EIGHT WILL TRY FOR CITIZENSHIP POPERS.

There are eight applications on file at the office of Clerk of Court Ives, and these will be heard at the June term of the district court. The names of the parties desiring to become citizens of the United States are: Amund Gunderson Moe and Hans Hanson Theigen of Mayfield township; Simon Malhum of Hickory township; Sakarias Jacobson Hole of Star township; Oluf Larson Aanstad, Sigrud Salverson and George Kootsikas of Thief River Falls, and Emil Person of Polk Center township. The first named six are at present citizens of Norway. Kootsikas is from Greece, and Person hails from Sweden.

The Times will reach some of our subscribers late this week owing to a rather serious breakdown. One of the most important shafts in the news press snapped during the printing of the second run on the paper and delayed the issue about five hours. A new shaft was turned at the garage of M. Anderson & Sons and Aga's Boiler and Machine Shop, but it was nearly midnight before the work was completed.

"HI" THESPIANS TO PLAY FRIDAY

Graduating Class of 1916 Will Present "728," A Masterpiece of German Comedy.

REHEARSALS END TONIGHT

Matinee For School Children in Afternoon at Three O'clock—Price is Very Nominal.

"728," a German masterpiece of comedy in four acts, which under its former name, "Casting the Boomerang" was a glittering success in the hands of John Drew, will be presented tomorrow (Friday) evening by the graduating class of 1916 of the Thief River Falls high school. The evening performance will begin promptly at 8:30, to which an admission of 35 and 50 cents will be charged. A school children's matinee will be given in the afternoon at 3, and an admission of 10 cents will be charged for the little folks, making it exceptionally nominal.

The play has been directed for the past few weeks by Mrs. Charles A. Pitkin, and will without a doubt shine forth with the same rays of standardness as in former years. The several parts which have been assigned to those who are especially adapted to the parts have so far been carried wonderfully, and when they have completed the final rehearsal tonight, all will be able to carry their respective parts in a most satisfactory manner. So thorough have the high school thespians been trained, that there will be none of those usual slips of the memory or no prompting will be necessary.

The money derived from this play will be used in the purchase of the class memorial and in defraying other expenses of the class.

Following is the cast of characters:

Courney Corliss	Roy Brown
Florence Bargiss	Mary Prichard
Mr. Bargiss	Harold Schmitt
Mrs. Bargiss	Jean Hay
Mr. Hollyhock	Milton Weeks
Mrs. Hollyhock	Evangeline Burns
Prof. Gasleigh	William Hoag
Signor Tamborini	Rheuben Aga
Jessie	Alice Wilson
The Postman	Ray Robinson
Jobbins	Walter Siems

Act I.—The theory of the Boomerang. The search is begun, and the "Scattered Leaflets" arrive.

Act II.—The Serpent in the Garden . Serpent—Mr. Gasleigh. The boomerangs are cast.

Act III.—Intoxication of the Metropolis. The Drama of the Missing Lamp and the Romance of the Forsaken. A novel illumination.

Act IV.—The Boomerang's return His Lordship proposes, and Destiny is fulfilled.

Time of presentation.—Two hours and a half.

The scene of the first and second acts is at Bargiss's country place, somewhere in the Empire State.

The scene of the third and fourth acts is in the city near Central Park.

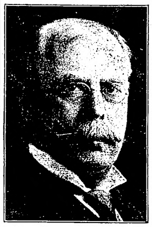
ALL ARE EAGER TO SUPPORT THE BAND

Soliciting Committee Find no Trouble in Securing Funds Necessary For Years Maintenance.

It took only a few hours on Saturday afternoon to secure pledges aggregating $1,000 for the support of the Thief River Falls Concert band. A committee composed of N. J. Anderson, Anton Langseth, George Loken and G. Howard Smith started out to raise money enough to ensure the money necessary for maintaining the band another year, and by evening they were only $300 short of the estimated amount. This was easily secured the next morning, and the finest musical organization in northern Minnesota will continue as at present constituted until this time next year.

The band is not a money making institution. While its services are constantly in demand these are of such nature that the financial return is often barely sufficient to cover the actual expenses. The musicians themselves have become so accustomed to donating their time that they probably would not know how to act if payment, even remotely representing the value of the service performed, were tendered. They cannot be expected, however, to foot the bills incident to keeping up an organization of this kind, and the response of the business men last week indicates that they are not supposed to do so.

This $1,300 is required to pay the actual running expenses for another year, no part of the sum going to the band members. That the people of the city responded when asked to insure the maintenance of the band is, of course, highly gratifying, but they are entitled to no wonderful amount of credit for so doing. The money will be well used and the band will have earned every dollar of it five times over before the time comes for making arrangements to meet another annual expense estimate.



CONGR. HALVOR STEENERSON.

FIRST BALL GAME HERE ON SUNDAY

Thief River Falls Nine Will Open on Home Grounds With Twin Valley as Opponent.

The opening base ball game of the 1916 season on the Thief River Falls diamond will be played on Sunday afternoon, May 21. The first aggregation to test the merit of the new team will be Twin Valley. This team has been in existence practically as at present organized for some seasons and the outfit is said to be fast and snappy.

Other Bookings.

On Sunday, May 28, the Fosstonians will be here for a game, and reports have it that this team is this year stronger than ever. On May 30, Memorinal Day, Manager Nason wlil take the team to Grand Forks for their first game away from home. Two sessions will be staged at the North Dakota city and these will easily be the most trying of the early season performances. Grand Forks is expected to prove rather fast company for a somewhat inexperienced team to tackle, but it is just as well to place the boys where they have to put forth the best there is in them.

Warren For Two Games.

On June 14 the Thief River Team will play at Warren, a return game being scheduled to take place here on the 18th. Warren is the ancient enemy of Thief River Falls in the base ball arena, and they have always proven enimies capable of furnishing a couple of hours of very strenuous amusement. They claim to be stronger than ever this year—but all ball teams make the same claim early in the season.

Week Day Games To Be Tried

Manager C. A. Nason says that as soon as he gets things properly organized, week day games will be tried out. If these can be made to pay expenses they will become a regular thing during the season. It is likely that afternoon games on week days would not bring people out in sufficient numbers to warrant their continuance, but evening games might, and these will be given a try-out.

There is little question but that the line-up of the Thief River Falls team is the best—on paper, at least— of any wearing the uniform of this city in some years. They will have plenty of opportunity to show what they can do, as Mr. Nason is in correspondence with a number of clubs anxious to get games here.

CUTS THROAT WITH SMALL PEN KNIFE

Tallak J. Austad, 38, formerly of Thief River Falls, committed suicide in a Crookston lodging house on Friday morning by cutting his throat with a pocket knife. He bled to death before medical assistance could be summoned by his brother who was in the room with him at the time the deed was committed.

The body was taken to Steiner, for burial. The deceased was born in Bygland, Polk county, and had been gone only for about four years, all that time having been spent in Zortman, Montana, where he worked in the gold mines. None of his relatives here had ever known of a suspicion of insanity and are at a loss to know what caused his trouble. He had worked all the time in Zortman but had nothing to show for it.

WILL CONSERVE RED LAKE PINE

Bill Permitting Indians to Dispose of All Dead, Down and Matured Trees is Passed.

A MENACE AND A WASTE

Indians Strongly in Favor of Measure Because of Steady Deterioration of Timber—Congressman Steenerson Given Great Credit.

The amendment to the Indian appropriation bill providing for the sale of certain timber on the Red Lake reservation for the benefit of the Indians, was passed last Saturday, after having been before the conference committees three or four different times. The provisions of this particular section of the bill are not yet know here, but it is understood that all fully matured timber, as well as that already down, will be disposed of as quickly as possible.

Congressman Steenerson introduced the first bill on the subject nearly four years ago and since that time efforts have been made to get the legislation passed in order that the Indians might derive the benefit from the sale of the timber while this was at the highest market value, but some obstacle was always interposed, and the matter hung fire until now.

Value Growing Less.

There is no doubt but that if this timber had been sold ten or fifteen years ago it would have brought a better price than at present, but it is also true that a great deal more of it will be ruined if it is allowed to stand a few years longer. Much of it was fully matured fifteen or twenty years ago and has deteriorated steadily since that time. A considerable percentage of it has blown down and is a constant danger to the younger and thriftier growth because if its liability to fire. Any part of this down timber that still remains merchantable will be included in this sale and the Indians will thus realize something from what would otherwise prove a total loss.

Part Forest Reserve.

Mr. Steenerson's amendment provides that certain portions of the reservations shall be set aside as a reserve known as the Red Lake Indian Forest. This is to consist of the following lands: Townships 150, 151, 152 and 153, ranges 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36, with the exceptions of sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 18 in township 153.

It is further provided that the lands fronting on the lake and which are not covered with standing timber and which are suitable for the raising of crops may be allotted to individual Red Lake Indians, provided that no such allotment shall exceed 80 acres, unless the Indian has already cultivated and improved a larger area, in which case the allotment may be extended to include his improvements, up to 160 acres.

Three Hundred Million Feet.

In advocating the passage of this bill Mr. Steenerson said: "The timber on the Red Lake Indian reservation, mostly spruce, pine and tamarack, has been estimated at from 129,000,000 to 300,000,000 feet, board measure. A large part is within the proposed forest, which will be administered under forestry methods and reproduce timber in perpetuity. The balance of the timber outside the forest reserve is authorized to be sold and the proceeds used for the benefit of the Indians. The Interior department has favorably recommended these provisions.

Drainage Project Next.

"I introduced the first bill on this subject nearly four years ago, and three years ago in company with officials of the Interior department, inspected the timber and agricultural lands on the reservation. The western portion of the reservation is now swamp land, but if drained will be rich agricultural land. I obtained a drainage survey of this part of the reservation as a preliminary to putting a drainage project into operation.

Progress Among The Indians.

"The Red Lake Indians have during the past years made considerable progress in industry and civilization, particularly agriculture. Great credit for this progress is due to the very able and diligent service of Walter F. Dickens, Indian superintendent at the Red Lake agency. He has, among other things, inaugrated an annual agricultural fair at the agency, which has been a great success. The interest of the Indians in this fair and the active competition for prizes for agricultural products is perfectly wonderful."

It is Hr. Steenerson's opinion that by authorizing the sale of mature timber the department will be enabled to help the Indians to further progress in farming.

A CHAPTER ON CITY FINANCES

New City Charter Devotes Considerable Attention to This Highly Important and Interesting Subject.

NO LEVY FOR LIGHT PLANT

Council May Issue Indebtedness Certificates to Run Not More Than Twenty Years, Drawing Not More Than Six Per Cent.

The section of the new city charter dealing with the city finances will perhaps interest more people than any other one part of the document. The commission spent much time and study on this particular department and it would seem that their efforts have resulted in the adoption of a very satisfactory measure.

After providing that the fiscal year of the city shall commence at noon on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, the provision goes on to state that all disbursements except the principal and the interest on bonds and certificates of indebtedness, shall be made only upon the order or warrant of the city manager or mayor, duly authorized by the city council, and every resolution and order shall specify the purpose for which the disbursement is made and the fund out of which it is to be paid No orders are to be issued until there is sufficient money in the fund against which it is drawn to meet them, together with all other outstanding orders against said fund.

Officers Liable.

If an order is issued violating any of the provisions of this chapter, the same will be considered void, and the officer issuing it will be personally liable for the amount called for. No contract with the city will be binding unless the amount involved as well as the fund out of which any moneys in connection therewith shall be paid is specified in the contract.

Twelve Different Funds.

The permanent funds of the city are divided under twelve classifications,.as follows: Interest, Sinking, Public Safety, Library, Public Works, Permanent Improvement, Electric Light, Water Works, General, Park, Poor, Permanent Improvement.

All the above will be maintained by direct taxation, with the exception of the electric light and water works funds. In the case of the former, provision is made for the payment into the fund of all income from the plant, and sale of supplies. At the time of making the annual levy the council will ascertain the sum required for the payment of interest during the next year, and such sum will be transferred to the interest fund. Of the remaining revenue a sinking fund will be provided for the purpose of meeting bond payments or other charges when these may come due. Any moneys in this sinking fund may be invested to the best advantage by the council.

Practically the same provisions are made in the case of the water works plant. It is stipulated, however, that in addition to the revenue derived, a sufficient sum shall be taken from the general fund to meet any cost of extending, operating and maintaining the department.

Fifteen Mill Limit.

The aggregate amount which may be levied in any one year for all purposes shall not exceed 15 mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of the city. This shall not apply to the interest and sinking funds, provision being made for the levying of one mill on the total assessed valuation for the purpose of creating and maintaining a sinking fund.

The city may issue bonds or certificates of indebtedness for the following purposes: To pay, or refund any debts of the city; to purchase, construct, extend, improve and maintain public utility plants, such bonds or certificates to be specific liens upon the plants named in the ordinance authorizing the issue; for the benefit of the permanent improvement revolving in an amount not exceeding twenty thousand dollars.

To Keep Within Levy.

Whenever the exepnses and obligations incurred, chargeable to any particular fund of the city are sufficient in the aggregate to absorb eighty per cent of the entire amount embraced in the tax levy for that year, together with eighty per cent of the amount estimated in the apportionment for the current year to be received by said fund from other sources, no officer, board or official body of the city shall have any power to create any additional indebtedness, except the remaining 20 per cent of the tax levy is collected, which shall be a charge against said city.

It is also provided that on or before the 20th of September of each year the city manager shall submit to the council an estimate of the appropriation necessary for the ensuing year, as well as of the revenues available for meeting the same. This estimate shall be in form of a detailed and comparative statement and shall contain all such information as will aid the council in asertaining the exact condition of any fund or department under the manager's control.

NEW GARAGE STARTS WITH BIG BUSINESS

Ford Service Station Here Already Has Large Number of Sales to its Credit.

The new garage of M. McFarland on West Third street was last week opened for business, and the proprietor reports trade very good. This is known as the Ford station, a specialty being made of these cars and accessories for the same. Fifty-eight machines have been distributed to buyers in this section this spring, and Mr. McFarland says that he expects to run this number up to 70 by the Fourth of July.

The garage carries about $2,000 worth of parts and repairs at all times. The system used for keeping track of these is the same as that employed at the Ford factories in Detroit, each article being contained in a separately numbered and labeled compartment.

The new garage is one of the finest in this section and would be a credit to any city. It covers a ground space of 140x40 feet, and is all used for garage purposes. A steam heating plant in the basement will make the big building available the year around.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Strengthened by Thief River Falls Experiences.

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Thief River Falls people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Thief River Falls people:

Mrs. George Williams, 412 Main Ave. N., Thief River Falls, says: "I think highly of Doan's kidney Pills and have all reason to. as the cure they made in my case has been permanent. It is a little over four years ago that I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I was bad off with my kidneys and back and wasn't able to work for a whole summer. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

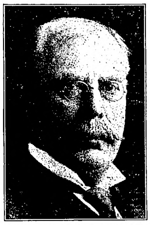
An Expert on Postal Affairs



HALVOR STEENERSON

Congressman, Ninth Minnesota District, and candidate for re-nomination at primaries June 19, 1916.

The most important work of congress is done by old members, who have, through ability, long experience and study, become experts on one particular subject.

The post office department of the U. S. is the largest business institution in the world. It comes closer to the people than any other department of the government. The services of the best talent in the country in the direction of its affairs is none too good.

Halvor Steenerson is one of the best posted men in America on postal affairs. This was recognized when, in 1914, he was selected, by the democratic administration, as one of the three American delegates to the International Postal Union congress at Madrid, Spain.

The rural mail delivery service was first proposed by Major Kyle, a congressman from South Dakota. But its development has been largely by the efforts of the present congressman from this district, and it is his ambition to see it extended to reach every farmer in the country. He has always given the affairs of the district careful attention, and has been active in other matters, but his services on the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads is his special contribution to the welfare of the country.

When Halvor Steenerson became a member of congress he abandoned the largest law practice in northern Minnesota, and an income larger than the salary of a congressman. He did so because he was not ambitious for great riches, and had a desire to serve the country in its highest law-making body. The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses describe Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane. There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky.

POLLOCK'S THREAT.

THE green shaded lamp flung a wide pool of mellow light over the scattered papers on the table and brought out boyish glints in Langdon's dark head as it lay on his folded arms, sunk in ineffable weariness.

All through the long hours of the night he had kept his lonely vigil—now poring over the legal documents on the table, now pacing the floor in a frenzy of anxiety, or making his way down the echoing corridors to look in with mute suffering at the room where Dr. Foster and Nurse Walton watched so silently beside a moaning, twitching figure on a narrow prison bed. But when the scanty furniture of the office was gradually emerging from the enveloping cloak of night into visible ugliness he had at last sunk into a doze of complete exhaustion. Miss Walton, coming to the door, an eager message on her lips, turned silently and pityingly away. Some betraying sound reached him, however, and he lifted his head with a start, blinking to find the lamplight paling before the gray of morning.

Yawning, he got to his feet and crossed to the window. He flung it wide and drew in great breaths of the chill air.

For the first time since Mary's attack of madness in the courtroom he realized fully how tremendous an asset the tragedy was to the defense, and in spite of his grief, as a lover, over her suffering, the lawyer in him exulted in the episode which cemented into place the cornerstone of his case.

The thought of this lent a hint of buoyancy to his tired body as he made another trip to the cell where, at Dr. Foster's orders, they had carried Mary, still screaming with frenzy.

Mary herself was sleeping soundly when he glanced into the cell, and Dr. Foster was on his feet, frankly stretching, while Miss Walton was bathing her tired eyes at the basin in the corner.

Both greeted him with a smile, and, answering the question in his eyes rather than the one he huskily whispered with his lips, Dr. Foster said:

"She will be all right now. She woke, conscious, just after your last visit and is now sleeping soundly. There's nothing to worry about—at least, not just at present."

"Thank God!" Langdon's voice broke on the words, and Dr. Foster put out his hand and patted the shoulder of the younger man reassuringly, saying:

"We all say that, but you'd better go get some rest now; you look done up."

"Oh, I'm all right," said Langdon. "But, Doctor, is she—is it going to be possible to go on with this trial? Can Mary bear it?"

"I think so." The answer came slowly. "Of course yesterday's scene was bad, very bad. But you must realize that the attack, while it was plainly due to the whiskey thrust upon her, was only to some extent brought about by the fact that the liquor was handed her at a time when she was hysterical and had been re-enacting events that kept her earlier experiences constantly in her mind. Given healthy surroundings and happiness, I wouldn't worry about attacks in the future."

Langdon nodded absently, for his heart was echoing the earlier words of the great alienist: "Given healthy surroundings and happiness I wouldn't worry about attacks in the future," and he was vowing to himself that, cost what it might, he would yet win freedom and happiness for her.

He had not dared hope that she would be well enough for the trial to continue for some days at least, but when she woke a few hours later she vowed she was perfectly able to go into court even then. And so, no more than an hour late, the proceedings were continued.

That hour had seemed a very short time to Mary and to Langdon, but it was a very long one to the excited spectators who crowded the rooms to the doors, whispering excited reminiscences of the day before.

Whatever doubts had lingered in the minds of the public as to the veracity and the strength of the defense built up by Langdon had been shattered at one blow. For Mary, as everyone said, might indeed have been actress enough to feign madness at the sight of the drunken policeman, but she could not have feigned that great bruise on her shoulder. The shadow of the gripping hand with those livid scars beneath it told mutely of how the cruel fingers had torn into the tender flesh.

The newspaper bearing Dr. Foster's article on "Repressed Psychosis" which the District Attorney had so sarcastically introduced as evidence had been pored over by every juryman, and from coast to coast the dramatic story of the scene in court was the one subject at the breakfast table of rich and poor alike.

She Came In, Very Pale, Very Wan, but Serenely Calm and Smiling.

It seemed incredible to those who had watched the frenzied, screaming woman carried out the day before that she could ever regain her sanity. When she came in, very pale, very wan, but serenely calm and smiling, nothing but the fear of being shut out from the final scenes of the great drama kept the crowds from wild applause.

The prosecutor alone did not look at her. He felt at that moment almost as if he hated her with personal vindictiveness. For he, too, had had an all-night vigil, seeking some ruse or legal technicality that would keep the events of the day before out of the records of the case. He knew only too well that any jury, having seen Mary's seizure, would be readily convinced that she might have suffered in the same fashion on the night when James Pollock was killed, and that if they were convinced of that, proving Mary's guilt was going to be the hardest struggle he had ever known.

In consequence the opening hours of court were marked by a series of bitter wrangles during which even his honor lost his temper, and the restlessness of the spectators became open disorder. But for all his acidity of wit and skill at argument it was a losing fight that the District Attorney waged. He was conscious of that himself. Therefore it came as no surprise when it was at last brought summarily to an end by the judge, who ordered the testimony of the policeman as to Mary's madness entered as evidence.

With a long breath of relief Langdon turned back toward his seat, suddenly becoming conscious that he was holding a crumpled scrap of paper which the bailiff had thrust into his hand some moments before. He remembered now that the court officer had said something when he gave it to him, but he hadn't caught the words, and it was with entire indifference that he opened the note and read the hastily scrawled words. But at the sight of them indifference gave place to excitement. Crumpling the paper up in his hand, he turned sharply to the bailiff.

"Call George Brennan!" he said, and there was triumph in his tones.

Brennan was the same cleancut young detective who had told of the disappearance of Daniels, and the first question asked him revealed what had been in the note.

"Mr. Brennan, I have just received a message which says that you have found Mr. Daniels. Will you tell the court, please, the circumstances of the finding of the missing man?"

"Well, it wasn't exactly a case of 'finding' him," said the detective, with a smile. "You see—he just came home! I was hanging around the apartment house in case anyone brought a message to Mrs. Daniels when I saw him come into the vestibule. He had a three days' growth of beard on his face and his clothes were all mussed up as if he'd been sleeping in them. He looked like a bum after a three days' jag, but I had no trouble recognizing him."

"Did he seem excited—or anxious to get into the building without being seen?"

"No. He moved slowly, as if he was dazed. He hesitated quite a while before he rang the bell of his apartment, but as soon as he'd pushed it he got impatient, and kept calling, 'Hello!' up the speaking tube, and when someone answered he said 'Open the door quick! It's me—your father.' When the latch clicked he went in, but he made no effort to close the door after him, so I followed. Both Mrs. Daniels and the daughter were in the doorway of the apartment to meet him, and while they were kissing and hugging him I walked in."

"Did Daniels seem startled at the sight of you?"

"No. He seemed sort of stupid as if he was sleepy, but when Mrs. Daniels told him I was a detective and that he was wanted as a witness in the Page trial he woke up fast enough and got very excited. He said he had nothing to tell and wouldn't accept service of any subpoena. 'I don't know anything,' he kept saying, and when I asked him where he had been he said he'd been on a little spree to forget his business troubles."

"Did you tell him he would have to appear in court?"

"Yes. But it wasn't what I told him about the law, but what his wife said that seemed to convince him. She told him she had every faith in him, and that what he had to tell wouldn't do any harm, and for him to go. So he said he would if I'd give him time to wash up."

"Is Mr. Daniels in court now?"

"Yes, sir. He is in the witness room."

A stir of excitement swept through the room, but deepened to an ominous whisper of suspicion when, Brennan dismissed, the bailiff summoned the former manager of Mary Page. For Daniels slunk into the room with an ashen face and trembling hands. Great beads of sweat stood out visibly on his forehead, and his voice when he took the oath was husky and uncertain. If ever guilt was written large upon any man, it was apparently written upon the erstwhile jaunty theatrical manager. The judge, studying him with eyes psychologically keen, wished he had the full papers of this case before him to learn more of this new witness, and inwardly vowed a recess to study them should the evidence take any unexpected turn. Daniels, however, recovered some measure of self-control under the preliminary questioning and gave his occupation as "manager of the Covington Theatre" with a hint of pompousness, but Langdon's next question brought the startled look back into his eyes.

"Mr. Daniels, you say you knew the defendant well and that you starred her in 'The Seekers.' Will you tell us frankly, please, just what made you select Miss Page for the leading role of the new play and what share James Pollock had in your decision?"

"I starred Miss Page because Jim Pollock said he would put up the money."

For an instant Daniels hesitated and cast a furtive look at Mary. Then, clearing his throat, he said with a hint of brusqueness:

"Well, I guess it's no secret now. I starred Miss Page because Jim Pollock said he would put up the money to back the show if I would give her the chance."

Mary gave an involuntary gasp of dismay, and again Daniels shot a furtive glance in her direction as Langdon asked:

"Did Miss Page know of this?"

"Of course not. I told her that I had seen her work in stock and thought she was a good actress."

"What agreement did you have with Mr. Pollock regarding his attention to Miss Page?"

"None. That wasn't my business. That was up to him. All I asked was fair play, and that he should stick to me even if Miss Page turned him down. I knew she didn't like him."

"Isn't it true that you had a quarrel with Mr. Pollock as early in your partnership as the day Miss Page signed her contract?"

"Yes, it's true. James was mad because you had been called in by Miss Page to look over her contract. He said you were butting in where Miss Page was concerned, and he wanted me to keep you away from the theater."

Langdon flushed and frowned.

"Please remember, Mr. Daniels," he said harshly, "that you are addressing the court and not me personally. I request, your honor, that the name 'Mr. Langdon' be substituted for the word 'you,' as used by the witness."

"Your request is granted," said the judge, who was still narrowly studying Daniels.

"Was that first day the only time you and Mr. Pollock quarreled about financial support for the play in case Miss Page left the company?" The question was quietly asked, but pregnant with a meaning that brought the blood into Daniels's face.

"No, it wasn't," he snapped. "When I found how dead set Miss Page was against him, I knew he wasn't going to win out in that game. I tried to make my position safe, but he wouldn't promise anything, unless I promised to arrange things so that you—I mean Mr. Langdon—was denied admission to the theatre."

"When did you have the last quarrel on that subject with Mr. Pollock?"

"On the day that 'The Seekers' opened."

With an abrupt gesture Langdon caught up the sheet of paper on which were pasted the torn scraps of the note to Pollock and held it up before the witness.

"Mr. Daniels, did you write that letter to Mr. Pollock?"

"My God! Where did you get that?" The cry was a confession, but Langdon repeated his question, and this time Daniels said with sudden sullenness:

"Yes, I wrote it."

"When?"

"The day 'The Seekers' opened. There—had been a scene in Miss Page's dressing room, and—and—I was afraid the show would be queered if Pollock didn't let the girl alone."

"Why didn't you finish it?"

"Because"— Daniels hesitated and moistened his dry lips with a nervous tongue. "because—I—I—thought it sounded pretty raw, and I'd better let things go till I saw Pollock that night."

Again the ominous little murmur that meant suspicion crept through the room, and Daniels shuddered, gripping the sides of his chair to hide the trembling of his hands as Langdon turned to the stenographer and said quietly:

"Mr. Wilson, will you be kind enough to turn to the testimony of the bellboy, 'Joe,' as given yesterday and read it, beginning with the words, 'was there anyone in the hallway when you looked back?'"

There was a slight rustling of papers, when the clear voice of the stenographer rang out.

"Question: Was there anyone in the hallway when you looked back? Answer: Yes. The fat man who had been at the banquet, the one they called Mr. Daniels. Question: What was he doing? Answer: He was standing close to the door of the gray suite with his ear against it, as if he was listening."

"That will do, Mr. Wilson. Now will you please turn to the testimony of Randall Williams, and read the testimony beginning with the words, 'Where were you when you heard the shot?'"

"Question: Where were you when you heard the shot? Answer: Just outside the door of the banquet room. Question: What did you do? Answer: I ran down the hall in the direction from which the sound came. Question: Did you meet anyone? Answer: Yes. I ran bang into Daniels at the corner where the corridor turned. I nearly upset him, I guess, for he caught at my arm and held on as if to steady him self. Question:"—

"That will do, thank you," cried Langdon sharply. "And now, Mr. Daniels, will you tell us what you did when you overheard the voices of Miss Page and Mr. Pollock talking in the gray suite and why you were so agitated when you met Mr. Williams?"

"Because," the voice of the manager rose to a sudden scream, "because I thought he had killed them both—as he had threatened to do!"

In an instant the prosecutor was on his feet, but, quick as he was, the judge was quicker. The unexpected turn HAD come in the evidence, and his honor briefly announced a thirty minute recess.

Had HE been the stage manager, rather than Daniels, he could not have chosen a more dramatic moment to bring the testimony to its temporary close.

Every man and woman among the spectators was keyed to the highest tension by the swiftly moving events, and to drop from these heights to the flatness of mere waiting strained patience to the breaking point. The scraping of chairs along the floor, the shuffling of feet, the waves of shrill whispering question and comment—all the sounds of restless humanity replaced the tense silence which had gone before—and when at last the clock had ticked out its slow half hour and the bailiff brought Daniels back to the witness stand there was an audible sigh of relief from the spectators that under any other circumstances would have won a laugh from Langdon.

Now, however, he was too intent upon the possibilities that lay behind Daniels' startling statement to be even conscious of the audience that was watching with such avid curiosity the enactment of this drama. He was more than thankful to the judge whose hasty recess had momentarily stopped the protest from the prosecutor, and it was with a rush of relief that he saw the latter take his seat when court reopened and realized that, after all, Daniels's statement was to pass without a legal wrangle. It made his first question an easy one.

"Mr. Daniels, you say that you had heard Mr. Pollock threaten to kill the defendant and himself. Will you tell the court when that threat was made and to whom?"

"It was made to me, on an occasion when I almost became an unwitting accomplice in a murder, during the rehearsals of 'The Seekers.'"

"Whose murder?"

"Mr. Langdon's."

A startled sob caught at Mary's throat at the words and, lifting her head, she looked at Langdon with such an expression in her eyes that for a moment he forgot the court, the judge and the witness on the stand, and knew only, with a blinding rush of joy, that whatever happened—she loved him. That realization was surging through Mary herself at the moment, and she felt as if she were seeing him for the first time—truly and fairly.

A Startled Sob Caught at Mary's Throat.

The protective maternal instinct that is always the real keystone of a woman's deeper love came to the fore for the first time and was followed by a swift fierce gladness that James Pollock was dead! Whatever the tragedy and the suffering that enmeshed her, at least Philip was safe, and at the thought all the fear and the horror of the law left her, and she drew a long happy breath that was almost a mute paean of gladness that it was she who could pay for his safety.

Langdon himself was equally shaken by the wonderful little interlude that had come like a streak of sunshine through the dreary gloom of the court scene, but those about him attributed the unsteadiness of his voice to excitement, and only Mary guessed the real reason and flushed rosily under her own thoughts.

"Mr. Daniels," Langdon was asking in that strange, choked voice, "will you please tell the court the circumstances of the—the attempt upon my life?"

"I didn't know it was, you know," protested Daniels. "I understood it was just to be a kidnapping—to—to get you—Mr. Langdon, I mean—out of the way till after the opening of 'The Seekers.'"

"You say 'just a kidnapping,' Mr. Daniels," broke in the judge harshly. "Did you not know that the law does not consider 'kidnapping' a light offence?"

"Yes, I know." Daniels's voice was husky and uncertain. "I knew, but—all I had was invested in this new play, and if James Pollock had pulled out then, I'd have lost it all and—I've got a wife and daughter. I didn't think any harm would come to Mr Langdon; in fact, Mr. Pollock promised it wouldn't, or I'd never have let that man Shale take the watchman's place."

"When was that?"

"During the rehearsals, as I said Jim came to me and said that Philip Langdon was butting in too much, that he was upsetting Miss Page and making trouble for him—that is Pollock—and he wanted him out of the way Then he said he had a plan to kidnap Langdon and take him out to the country till after the opening of the play. At first I wouldn't listen, but—finally I—did. It sounded simple enough. I was to send for Langdon late that night, supposedly to ask him something about the Page contract. In the meantime we were to drug the watchman and let Shale—Pollock's jackal, they call him, you know—take his place. Then when Mr. Langdon was leaving the watchman was to nab him and carry him out to a waiting automobile and cart him off."

"Were these plans carried out?"

"No. That is, not the latter part. It was then that I found out about the attempt at murder."

"Will you tell the court in detail just what happened on that night?"

"Well, I—I sent for Mr. Langdon," said Daniels nervously, "and he came. In the meantime we had given the regular watchman knockout drops and left him in a corner of the balcony, and Shale took his place. When Mr. Langdon was leaving I called this supposed watchman and, acting on Jim's instructions, told him to show Mr. Langdon out of the stage door. But I tell you"—his voice rose suddenly to a high, shrill note of hysterical emphasis—"I tell you I knew nothing of that open trap door in the stage. I thought he was going to take him right out of the theatre. And when I heard Mr. Langdon's cry—I—I was so horrified to move for a minute. Then I rushed down and turned on the stage lights."

"Will you tell us what you saw?"

"I saw Mr. Langdon hanging to the edge of an open trap that led down some thirty feet to the cement cellar below, and Shale standing to one side, with a black-jack in his hand. I thought he was going to hit Langdon, and I snatched it away from him and dragged Langdon back upon the stage. The very first words he said made me realize he didn't know the real reason of that open trap, so I hid the black-jack behind me and took Mr. Langdon to the door myself and saw him safely away."

"Did you see Mr. Pollock again that night?"

"Yes. When I got back to the stage I found him there denouncing Shale for having failed to do his part, and when I asked him if he had meant murder, he said, 'Yes! I meant to have him killed through an apparent accident. What is more, I tell you here and now, that I'll kill Mary Page and I'll kill myself, before Langdon shall win her!' That's what Jim Pollock said, and that's what I thought he had done—that night. I SWEAR I didn't go into that room! But I heard them quarrel, and I heard the scream and the shot. And I thought he'd done it—and I ran away, in sheer horror—that's all! My God! You must believe me. It's true that I quarreled with Jim Pollock, not once, but many times. It's true that he didn't play fair with me, but can't you see that I had everything to lose and nothing to gain by his death! It's meant ruin to me—and ruin to my wife and little girl."

His voice broke pitifully over the last words. Leaning forward, he buried his face in his shaking hands, waiting for the next question. But it didn't come. That tragic outburst had carried conviction, not merely to Langdon but to everyone in the room, and whatever shadows of suspicion had hung over Mr. Daniels faded before the pitiful but indubitable veracity of his story. The mystery, if mystery it was, of James Pollock's death was still as impenetrable, and the cords of the law that for a time seemed to be loosening from about Mary Page, had tightened again.

But to Mary and Langdon that testimony of the manager had brought something that for the time at least seemed greater than the law—an understanding of Mary's heart, vision of what might yet be if freedom could be won for her.

It was a strange moment for a great love to find expression, and a strange story which had wakened it; and, while Langdon felt deep in his heart that no words were needed after that glance of Mary's he could not forbear following her to her cell when court had adjourned. She glanced up at him with sudden shyness when he came in, and her hands went out waveringly, but whether to hold him off or to cling she could not herself have told. Langdon had no doubts, however, and caught them close in his warm grasp and drew her to him in a silence more eloquent than words. Then, stooping till his cheek lay against her hair, he whispered unsteadily:

"Mary, when Daniels told of James Pollock's attempt on my life, your eyes said something to me that they have never said before. Did you mean it, dear?" Then, as she clung to him mutely, he laughed softly and added:

"I know you did. You can never deny it now, my darling, and when all this is over, I am going to ask you a question—and—and make you put into words what your eyes told me today. May I, Mary?"

"I—I think you'd better go now, please, Phil!"

For an instant she swayed against him, her head buried in his shoulder, then with a sad little sob she drew back.

"That's all such a long, long way in the future, Phil," she said wearily. "Oh, let's not even think of it. There are so many things in between."

"Dear!" he cried in sudden pity, and would have taken her in his arms again, but she shook her head and turned away, saying unsteadily:

"I—I think you'd better go now, please, Phil! I'm so tired."

"Of course," he answered quickly, contrition in his voice. "I was a brute to bother you now. Only, I wanted you to know, dear, that whatever happens my love is around you, and I will protect you—with my life, if need be." Catching up one of her slender little hands, he crushed it against his lips. Then he was gone.

MIDDLE RIVER

Last Saturday evening the local camp of the M. W. of A. initiated 4 new members and after the initiation a banquet was served in honor of G. Breese and bride by the wives of the Woodmen. The young people spent the evening in dancing and also several of the older people who were not too old to get on the floor and have a good time. The banquet was very elobrate, the table being decorated with cut flowers that were donated by the young men of the lodge. The newly married couple were presented with a chair as a token of esteem from the lodge, the groom being V. C. of this camp. Mr. Roy Ingalls made the presentation speech after the banquet. There were over sixty people seated at the banquet. After that dancing was indulged in until the wee hours.

It has at last been ascertained who is to speak at the dedication program to be held next Friday. Ex-Governor Eberhart, Rural School Commissioner Swaine and Prof. Hay will be the principal speakers. An exhibit of the school work done by the pupils will be another feature of the program.

THE CLUB

Secretary Fred T. Lincoln has taken it upon himself to issue a "Commercial Club Bulletin" telling of the work done by the organization. The first issue is a mimograph containing such information as the members are in danger of forgetting, and announcing to others the fact that we are up and a-doing all the time. Following are some of the paragraphs taken from the circular:

Thief River Falls has come to be called "The Convention City of Northern Minnesota." Note the following dates already made:

May 4 and 5—Ninth District Federation of Woman's club convention.

May 16—Convention of Ninth District Group, Minnesota Bankers association.

June 30—Red River Valley Medical society convention.

December 23-24—Red River Valley Dairymen's association meeting.

The lunches will be discontinued during the summer unless it be for some special occasion, the call to out-of-doors recreation being too attractive to warrant the attendance desired. The luncheons have been vry successful and well attended and will be resumed in the early fall.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on Thursday, May 25, at 8 p. m. Plan to be present.

The market days, so successful last season, will be resumed in the early part of June. They will be planned on a more extensive scale this year, and band concerts in the evening will be a feature.

The annual community picnic this year will be held in August, and will be made another big event, with plenty of attractions for the public. Good speakers wil be secured and some new features introduced in the line of sports. Make your plans to attend.

The auto tour committee will meet soon to plan the first run of the season, which will be into some territory not yet visited by the merchants and requiring less than a day for making the trip. The big tour this year will be to the Lake of the Woods.

The club will boost the county fair this year and do its share to make it a success.

ORDER TO ESTABLISH DITCH.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)—SS.
County of Pennington,)

In the Matter of the Petition of A. C. Tvedt and others for a public ditch in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as County Ditch No. 63.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said Board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for said ditch in the above entitled matter, on the ninth day of May, A. D. 1916, at 2 o'clock p. m., of said day; and it appearing by proper evidence that due notice had been given of the pendency of said petition and of said time of hearing thereon and that Glenn H. Martz, the Civil Engineer appointed by this Board to survey the route of said ditch, has completed his work and duly filed his report thereon in the office of the County Auditor of said County, and that the Viewers appointed by said Board to view and report upon said work have duly completed their labors and made and filed their report in due form of law in the office of said County Auditor, the said Board of County Commissioners did, at the time above specified, proceed to hear said petition and said Viewers' report thereon; and said Board having duly considered said petition and heard all the parties interested for or against the construction of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto, find as follows, to-wit:

FIRST—That the said Civil Engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all respects according to law.

SECOND—That the Viewers appointed herein have duly completed their labors and have made and filed their report thereon according to law.

THIRD—That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded.

FOURTH—That the damages and benefits arising from the construction of said ditch have been duly awarded and assessed, and that said work will be of public utility and promote the public health and that said reports of said Engineer and Viewers are complete and correct.

FIFTH—That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said Viewers' report and said Engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the County Auditor of said County, and that all other proceedings in the matter have been made and taken in accordance with the provisions of law.

Now Therefore, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, we, the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, at said special session of said Board, held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the proposed ditch will be of public utility and conducive to public health and public benefit and convenience, do hereby locate and establish the said ditch according to the report and the specifications of said Civil Enginner made and filed herein; and do hereby establish and confirm the report of the Viewers made and filed herein.

It is Furthr Ordered, That the damages awarded to the persons and corporations named in the Viewers' report herein, be paid out of the County Treasury of said County on warrants to be drawn and attested by the Auditor of said County and signed by the Chairman of this Board of County Commissioners, and delivered to the persons entitled thereto as provided by law.

Given under our hands this 10th day of May, A D. 1916.

By the Board,
PETER C. WOLD,
Chairman Board of County Commissioners, of Pennington County, Minnesota.

Attest:
T. P. ANDERSON,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said Board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for said ditch in the above entitled matter, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1916, at 2 o'clock p. m., of said day; and it appearing by proper evidence that due notice had been given of the pendency of said petition and of said time of hearing thereon and that Glenn H. Martz, the Civil Enginner appointed by this Board to survey the route of said ditch, has completed his work and duly filed his report thereon in the office of the County Auditor of said County, and that the Viewers appointed by said Board to view and report upon said work have duly completed their labors and made and filed their report in due form of law in the office of said County Auditor, the said Board of County Commissioners did, at the time above specified, proceed to hear said petition and said Viewers report thereon; and said Board having duly considered said petition and heard all the parties interested for or against the construction of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto, finds as follows, to-wit:

FIRST—That the said Civil Engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all respects according to law.

SECOND—That the Viewers appointed herein have duly completed their labors and have made and filed their report thereon according to law.

THIRD—That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded.

FOURTH—That the damages and benefits arising from the construction of said ditch have been duly awarded and assessed, and that said work will be of public utility and promote the public health and that said reports of said Engineer and Viewers are complete and correct.

FIFTH—That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said Viewers report and said Engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the County Auditor of said county, and that all other proceedings in the matter have been made and taken in accordance with the provisions of law.

Now, Therefore, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, we, the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, at said special session of said Board, held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the proposed ditch will be of public utility and conducive to public health and public benefit and convenience, do hereby locate and establish the said ditch from station 9 to station 129 inclusive, according to the report and the specifications of said Civil Engineer made and filed herein; and do hereby establish and confirm the report of the Viewers made and filed herein.

It is Further Ordered, That the damages awarded to the persons and corporations named in the Viewers report herein, be paid out of the County Treasury of said county on warrants to be drawn and attested by the Auditor of said county and signed by the Chairman of this Board of County Commissioners, and delivered to the persons entitled thereto as provided by law.

Given under our hands this 11th day of May, A. D. 1916.

By the Board,
PETER C. WOLD,
Chairman Board of County Commissioners, of Pennington County, Minnesota.

Attest:
T. P. ANDERSON,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner McGinn, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Peterson:

Resolved that the County Attorney be authorized and directed to interpose and answer and defend on behalf of the county in the case of Illinois Steel Bridge Company vs. Pennington County, and be it further resolved that the County Surveyor be directed to assist in such defense, make such survey and plats as desired by the County Attorney in connection with said case.

All members voting for the resolution, it was so declared adopted.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Peterson, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Aubol,

Resolved that the sum of $200.00 be and the same is hereby transferred from the County Revenue Fund to the County Attorney's Contingent Fund and the County Auditor and the County Treasurer are hereby directed and authorized to make the proper transfers on the books in their respective offices. Resolution declared adopted.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Larson, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Aubol:

Resolved that the District Engineer be and he hereby is authorized and directed to employ five patrolmen for work on the various sections of the State Road System of the county with duties to be presented by said Engineer, such patrolmen to receive salary of $115.00 per month, and be it further resolved that the said Engineer be authorized to enter into contracts on behalf of the county with such patrolmen, providing for salary and specifying their duties. Be it further resolved that the County Auditor be and he hereby is authorized to draw and issue the warrants on the Road and Bridge Fund of the county to each of said patrolmen in payment of such salaries, provided that no such warrants shall be so issued until said District Engineer shall have filed a statement with said Auditor certifying that such patrolmen have made proper report to said District Engineer, and have rendered satisfactory service and in all things complied with the instructions of said Engineer, and the terms of the contracts to be entered into. All members present voting for the resolution, it was so declared adopted.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Peterson, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner McGinn:

Resolved that the County Auditor be and is hereby authorized to sell the culverts taken out of the grade on County Ditch No. 55 in the Townships of Deer Park and Hickory and to collect for same according to prices determined by the Board and to place the amount so collected to the credit of County Ditch No. 55. Resolution was so declared adopted.

At a special meeting of the County Board of Pennington County held May 11, 1916, Commissioner McGinn offered the following resolution, duly seconded by Commissioner Aubol:

WHEREAS, The Town of North, and other interested parties and municipalities have offered to contribute the sum of $2,000.00 to aid in the construction of a bridge over Thief River, on the section line between Sections 22 and 21, in the Town of North, said county.

NOW THEREFORE, Be it resolved, that said offer be and the same hereby is accepted, and that said County Board proceed to construct said bridge on the following terms and subject to the following conditions:

1. Said Town of North, with other municipalities and parties interested, shall deposit in the Treasury of said county to the credit of the Road and Bridge Fund thereof, the sum of $2,000.00 within thirty (30) days from date hereof, such money to belong to said county and to be subject to County Warrants, in the event said bridge project is carried out.

2. Said bridge is to cost not to exceed the sum of $2,600.00, and if a sufficient bridge cannot be built for said cost, the money so deposited shall be refunded to the proper parties or municipalities.

3. The care, up-keep, maintenance and repair of said bridge shall rest upon the said Town of North and said county shall not be in any way obligated for the same after the construction of said bridge is completed

In the event of any breach of said conditions all monies so deposited shall be returned, and said bridge project shall be discontinued.

Be it further resolved, that the sum of $100.00 shall be, and the same hereby is, appropriated out of the Road and Bridge Fund of the county, to aid in the construction of said bridge.

Those voting for the resolution: Commissioners McGinn, Aubol and Larson. Those voting against the resolution: Commissioner Wold. Commissioner Peterson not voting. Resolution was so declared adopted.

ORDER APPOINTING VIEWERS.

In the Matter of the Petition of Carl J. Swenson and others for Repair Ditch No. 32 in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota:

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)—SS.
County of Pennington,)

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 14th day of July, A. D. 1915, signed by Carl J. Swenson and others, praying for the repairing of a ditch in said County, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 32, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the County Auditor of said County; and said County Auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said County Board of said County have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit: Glenn H. Martz, to make a survey of said ditch.

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint Gust Naplin and Walter McAndrews and James Evenson, three resident freeholders of said County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers; and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the County Auditor of said County designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the County Auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work, and the land damaged or benefited thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said County Auditor of said County within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefited or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefited or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said County, and the description to be given in legal form), and th total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefited or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefited or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefited thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch, including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 as amended.

The County Board of Pennington County, Minnesota.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
ss.
County of Pennington,
In Probate Court,
Special Term, May 2nd, 1916.

In the Matter of the Determination of the Heirs of Guri K. Qvande, Deceased Homestead Settler.

ORDER FOR HEARING.

On reading and filing the petition of Josephine Korstad, nee Josephine Qvande, praying, among other things, for the judicial determination, by this Court, of who are the heirs of Guri K. Qvande, deceased homestead settler, and what are the respective rights and interests of such heirs in the homestead land of said deceased, and to assign said homestead to the parties legally entitled to the same,

IT IS ORDERED, That said petition and said matter be heard and examined on Monday the 5th day of June, A. D. 1916, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of said day, at the office of the Probate Court at Thief River Falls, in said County and State.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week for three (3) successive weeks immediately prior to said date of hearing in the Thief River Falls Times, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Thief River Falls in said County and State.

Dated at Thief River Falls, Minn., this 2nd day of May, A. D. 1916.

Thief River Falls Senior Class Play.

The Senior Class of the Thief River Falls high school will give their class play entitled, "728" in the Imperial Opera House Friday, May 26th.

Commencement Exercises.

The commencement exercises of the 8th grade of the local school will be given Saturday, June 3, in the Imperial Opera House. One of the main features of the evening will be the address to be given by ex-congressman Frank M. Nye.

Recital.

On Friday, May 12, at the Imperial Opera House, a recital was given by Miss Ruth Sellars, a member of the faculty of the Red Lake Falls public schools.

Miss Sellars is a graduate of the Dickinson College at Carlisle, Pennsylvannia, and is an accomplished elocutionist.

The Juvenile orchestra rendered very fine selections for the occasion, and Mrs. A. Larson played the piano accompaniment for a few of Miss Sellar's readings.

A fairly large crowd was in attendance and the following program was rendered.

Music: —Orchestra.
"Lochinvar" —Sir Walter Scott.
"The Littelest Rebel" —Edward Peple.
Music —Orchestra.
"That Old Sweetheart of Mine"—James Whitcomb Riley.
"Moo Cow Moo"— Vance Cook.
"Two Loves" —T. A. Daly.
"Old Aunt Mary" —James Whitcomb Riley.
"In May" —Edwin M. Stern.
"The bravest Battle" —Joaquin Miller.
"I Aint A Goin to Cry No More"—
Music —Orchestra.

Under Southern Skies.

The first Broadway feature ever shown here was put on at the Imperial Hall last Wednesday evening, entitled "Under Southern Skies," with Mary Fuller as the leading star. This was a five reel feature and was very good. A large crowd atended and all appreciated the picture immensely. Another Broadway feature was to be played this week entitled "Judge Not" or the "Woman of Mona Diggings." A picture of this kind will be shown Wednesday of each week.

Social Dance.

A number of auto loads of young people arrived in St. Hilaire Friday night at the close of the recital, expecting to attend the dance at this place, but as there was no dance billed or planned for that night, hurried preparations were made then with the idea "better late than never" and in less than a half hour the dance hall presented a lively spectacle. The larger part of the crowd consisted of young people from Red Lake Falls.

The St. Hilaire Orchestra furnished music for the occasion and every one present enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Old Markham.

This week will undoubtedly complete the tearing down of the old Markham hotel. This will not add to the beauty of Main street unless another building is erected in its stead which it is very doubtful will be done for some time. A great many of the St. Hilaire people have pleasant memories of the old hotel and are sorry to see it go.

Wedding Party Arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boese, who were married at Crookston last Wednesday morning arrived here to visit at Mrs. Boese' parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Amble. They returned to Grand Forks, where they expect to make their future home. The bride has been a resident of St. Hilaire a number of years, and has many friends who extend their heartiest congratulations to the young couple.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beebe entertained a number of their friends at a one o'clock dinner Sunday. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Mc Andre, Mr. and Mrs. G. Roth, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hall, Mr. A. R. Jones and Mr. J. Stewart, also Margaret Patterson and Gladys Sherva were guests of Miss Lulu Beebe.

Funeral Service.

Peter Peterson, of River Falls, passed away at his home last week, and the funeral services were held at the United Lutheran church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Bergford officiating. He was laid to rest in the Eastside cemetery. Mr. Peterson has been a resident of River Falls for the past fourteen years and before that time resided in southern Minnesota.

Mr. Peterson leaves a wife and grown up family of children to mourn his loss. The entire community extend their sympathies to the bereaved ones.

The North Bridge is completed this wekk and traffic has commenced over that route already.

ON account of the great advances in price of all supplies used in the modern laundry of today, the laundries all over the North west have been forced to raise the list or run at a loss and shut down.

The advance in this price is not even enough to offset the additional cost of opperation as in some instances supplies have four doubled and in each case more than doubled.

Owing to this fact the undersigned laundries of Thief River Falls find we are compelled to raise our lists, and trust the public will appreciate the existing condition and continue to co-operate with us in building up this inbustry of our city.

John A. Duffy, candidate for Representative, 65th Legislative district. Your vote and support solicited.

Announcement.

I hereby wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for Clerk of Court at the Primaries June 19th. Your vote and support solicited.

Respectfully
Adolph Eklund.

To the Voters of Pennington County.

I announce myself as a candidate for the office of Clerk of Court in Pennington County at the primary election to be held June 19th, and respectfully solicit your support.

Herman A. Ohm.

To the voters of Pennington County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Clerk of the District Court for Pennington county. I wish at this time to pledge to the voters of Pennington county that if I am nominated and elected, I will give the office my undivided attention, and I will serve the public to the best of my ability in a strictly impartial manner. In the accounting department as a member of the Board of Audit, in the Naturalization department, in fact in all of the different duties of the Clerk, I feel better prepared and able to give more efficient service than in the past.

Thanking the voters for past favors, and hoping for your continued support if you deem me worthy, I remain

Respectfully yours,
Harry E. Ives.

Announcement.

I have filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Ninth Minnesota District. Owing to my personal business interests I have been reluctant to take this action, but have been persuaded by the persistent demands of a large number of the Republicans in all part of the district.

I have prepared to accept the responsibility which I ask the voters of the Ninth District to confer upon me by placing myself in a position to devote all my time and energy to the duties of the office.

My platrom is brief; I stand first and foremost for genuine Americanism and strict and honorable neutrality.

I would insist on a "dollars worth of service for every dolar spent."

I know that the government records show that we are spending more to maintain our army and navy than did Germany, England or France before the present war, and I would demand a "dollar's worth of preparedness for every dolar so spent."

I believe in preparedness which would protect, but not one which would inspire the spirit of invasion or impose the burdens of militarism.

I stand for business methods, economy and efficiency in National government.

Yours truly,
A. G. ANDERSON.

Judicial Ditch Number 42, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota.

Clerk of Court's Notice of Hearing on Petition. Engineer's Report and Viewer's Report in The Matter of Judicial Ditch Number 42.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
SS.
Pennington County.

District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

In the matter of the petition of Soren C. Jensen and others for a public drainage ditch in the Counties of Pennington and Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42).

Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, praying for the construction of a public drainage ditch, designated and numbered by the Clerk of said District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, as Judicial Ditch forty two (42) and that the preliminary hearing provided by law before the Judge of the District Court has been had thereon and the said Judge appointed a Civil Engineer to make a survey of the route of said ditch and to perform such other duties in relation thereto as are provided by law, and that the said engineer duly made his report thereon and filed the same in the office of the Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, Minnesota, and that the said Judge of the District Court duly appointed viewers to assess damages and benefits in the matter of said ditch and to perform all other duties in relation thereto as provided by law, and that the said viewers have completed their work and have filed their report in the office of said Clerk; and that as appears by the report of the Engineer hereinbefore mentioned, the starting point, route and termini of said ditch designated as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42), including a description of the land over which the same passes is as follows, viz:

Said ditch is located within Township One Hundred Fifty-two (152), N., Range Forty One (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota, and is described as follows:

Commencing at a point Twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty two (22) and twenty three (23) and twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) said town, so as to provide an additional outlet for Judicial Ditch No. 1, Red Lake and Pennington Counties, thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the section line between sections twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty(20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty six (26), twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) and thirty five (35), thence west parallel with and twenty (20) feet north of the section line between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the quarter corner between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34), thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the quarter line a distance of nine hundred and five (905) feet, at which point said ditch terminates and has its outlet in the Clearwater river.

And the said engineer's report shows the dimensions of said ditch and the particular and exact location thereof, and the names of the owners of the lands and the names of the municipal corporations and other corporations that will be effected by the construction of said ditch as the same appears in the report of the viewers hereinbefore mentioned, are as follows, towit:

4TH OF JULY TO BE CELEBRATED

Arrangements Completed For the Biggest Event of Its Kind in City's History.

COMMITTEES ARE NAMED

Citizens From Surrounding Towns And Farmers of Entire County Will Be Invited And Made Welcome on This Occasion.

The American Eagle will scream in Thief River Falls, Tuesday, July Fourth for the first time in nine years, although the spirit of loyalty and patriotism has not been lying dormant here all these long years. It will be no faint-hearted croak, but a good, lusty scream, a mustering of the clans of every nationality who are privileged to live in a land of plenty, free from internal strife and enjoying the fruits of labor and co-operation.

Old glory will float to the breeze from every loyal home and every house top, public and private building, business places will be gay with bunting, young and old will lay aside the cares of the day and meet on one common footing in the "Hub City" of Northern Minnesota, Thief River Falls, famed for life, energy and hospitality. Little children will put on their best bib and tucker and march in a merry throng in parade to the inspiring music of the famous Thief River Falls band.

Rural residents will join in the celebration and be given every courtesy and entertainment possible, free of charge, within the power of the live business men to afford them. The rosy morn will be ushered in with the intonation of cannon, announcing that the "Spirit of 76" has lost none of its power and inspiration and that people of a free country are ready to greet their neighbors and friends in a fitting observation of the big day in American history.

It will be a day full of clean sports and entertainment, crowned in the evening with a monster display of fireworks on the river front and a grand Fourth of July ball at the auditorium under the auspices of the Thief River Falls band. A number of unique features to be introduced to add to the enjoyment of old and young.

How would you like to "step" thru an old-time quadrille, neighbor, just like you did in the old days? How would you like to see couples contest in a relay-two-step for prizes? And, what about that prize waltz, young man, you and your best girl? Oh its going to be a REAL celebration, for the business men are set on it and have asked the commercial club to "take hold" and they have agreed to it.

Why not? no valid reason, they say why we should not make this a day worth while to everyone in the city, county and adjoining counties and it is a most fitting year to celebrate by reasons of the conditions at home as compared with those abroad.

Now, it's a long pull, a strong pull and all-together, you men of the different committes and with this in mind, the answer will be, "the best and cleanest celebration ever held in northern Minnesota." In the words of General Vim, "Let's Go."

The Committees.

General committee—W. H. Fredericks, John Bratrud, George Johnson, Herbert Fuller, Emil Zeh.

Finance—C. W. McDaniels, chairman.

Parade—Jesse La Bree.

Music—Joe Greenfield.

Autos—John Bratrud.

Fire Department—Paul Medderigh.

Floats—Anton Langseth.

Down town sports— C. A. Pitkin.

Fire Works—M. C. Cutter.

Auto Races—Fred Haug.

School children—Supt. J. H. Hay.

Base ball— Charles Nason.

Printing and publicity—Fred Lincoln.

The cimmittee chairmen will name five assistants and report the same to the commercial club secretary by Monday evening, no later. The general committee will secure a speaker and conferring with the different committee chairmen, outline the program.

Duties of Sub-Committees.

In order that there may be no confusion and the work of each committee thoroughly understood, the following information is given:

The finance committee will collect all the moneys subscribed and pay all bills when properly passed upon by the committee chairmen. Committee chairmen will be advised the coming week just how much money they can depend upon for their part of the celebration, this to be decided by the general committee.

The parade committee will have charge of forming the parade, naming a place of gathering, be responsible for the prompt starting of the parade, line of march and other details.

The auto committee will provide or arrange for autos for the different organizations, city officials, womans club officers, and general supervision of the autos in meeting prior to the parade and in decorating for the same.

The music committee will confer with the general committee as to what is desired of the band and be in full charge of the same during the day.

The committee on down town sports will arrange the program of the same and the different streets on which they are to be held, prizes and all details.

The committee on floats will canvass different merchants and business industries, explain the hour for the gathering of the floats to form in line for the parade, arrange the same in line and be in charge of this important feature.

The auto races committee will select a starter and timers, decide on prizes and make up the race program at the fair grounds.

The base ball committee will arrange for a game with an outside team and hour for game, decide on cash prize for winning team and other details.

The fire works committee will purchase fireworks, decide on place and hour for exhibiting the same and name assistants to handle the display.

The printing and publicity committee will arrange for posters and bills and the circulation of the same and all advertising in connection with the celebration.

The school children, who are to appear in the parade will be under the direction of Supt. Hay and his assistants and will report to him. It is planned to have 200 children, at least, in line carrying flags and in gay gowns and in ribbons.

Small bills will give hour and place for all sports and contests, fire works display, hour and place, speaker and place of oration, in fact all the details of the big celebration.

FOSSTON NEXT ON BALL SLATE

Manager Nason's Colts Will Take On Fast Fosston Nine in Second Game of The Season.

TWIN VALLEY BEATEN 6-2

First Game of Season Played Last Sunday and Opened With A Win— Indications Are That Locals Will Deliver Goods.

Next Sunday at the Fair Grounds will occur the second game of the 1916 base ball season, when an aggregation from Fosston will try conclusions with Manager Nason's team. So far all the members of the team have shown up wonderfully and from present indications a winning team will result—one that will be able to deliver the goods at all times.

The 1916 season was officially opened last Sunday when the Twin Valley team, a fast, snappy and fine bunch of young men, appeared on the diamond. The day was not a gala one for the opening game as was expected, as a drizzling rain fell from the time the first ball was pitched until nearly to the close of the contest, making it especially difficult to handle the ball. But for all that the game was a splendid exhibition of the national game.

Mentzel, Hoffmeister, Christie, Collins and Carney starred for Thief River Falls and their work brought out applause time and time again from the handful of fans present. Mentzel pitched a great game for the locals, striking out 23 men. The Twin Valley twirler was credited with 18. The total number of strike-outs was 41 out of 51 put-outs, divided as above. This breaks the record of the Northwest if not for the state for the total number of strike-outs in one game. "Hoff" on the receiving end for Thief River Falls showed up well and had the Twin Valliers hugging the bases at all times. Delbern for the visitors, pitched a good game.

At any event—no matter how small or how large—there is always something that some of the less observant people do not realize. The Times representative spotted a few of the "Firsts" at the opening of the ball season and here they are:

The first pitched ball, marking the opening of the 1916 season, landed in Catcher "Hoof's" mitt at exactly 3:20 p. m. Collins was the first Thief River Falls man to bat, first to strike out. "Cliff" Rice credited with the first put-out by caught fly. Hoffmeister first to get a base on an error. John-

The annual commencement exercises of the Thief River Falls public schools will occupy the attention of pupils and parents during next week. This year's class is the second largest that has yet graduated from the high school and is composed of fifty young men and women. The class of 1915 exceeded this class by three. In addition to the commencement exercises of the high school, the week's program also includes the exercises of the graduation of seventy-one eight graders.

The first event of the week will be the Baccalaureate sermon, to be delivered at the Auditorium by Rev. A. A. Larson, of the Swedish Evangelical church. The services will begin at 8 o'clock.

On Monday evening at the assembly room of the Lincoln high school will occur the graduation of the pupils of the eighth grade and the presentation of diplomas by Supt. J. H. Hay. Through the courtesy of Miss Chapman, principal of the Washington school, the Times is able to give the complete program and list of graduates, which is as follows:

1. Pilgrims' Chorus (Tannhaeuser), Wagner—Eighth Grade Chorus.
2. Class History—Clarence Vevea.
3. Recitation: "June," Lowell—Alice Berg.
4. "In a Garden by the Sea"—Girls' Chorus.
5. "The Alaskan Government Railway"—Albert Erickson.
6. Selection from John. L. Stoddard's "Norway"—Elnor Overland.
7. Piano Solo—Ruby Anderson.
8. Class Prophecy—Stanton Dahlen.
9. Recitation—Louina Poirier.
10. "Wireless"—John Melgaard.
11. "Welcome Bright and Sunny Spring"—Girls' Chorus.
12. "Our Diplomatic and Consular Service"—Leland Schuster.
13. Recitation: "An Order for a Picture," Cary—Elsie Sundahl.
14. Piano Solo—Elnor Overland.
15. Review of "The Perfect Tribute" by Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews—Henry Aastad.
16. Class Will—Theodore Prichard.

Song, "The Blue Danube"—High School Chorus.

The final event of the commencement week will be held in the Auditorium on the evening of Thursday, June 1, at which time the presentation of diplomas to fifty members of the class of 1916 will occur. This will mark the end of their high school career and will thereafter be members of the high school alumni. These exercises were to be held on Friday, June 2, but owing to the fact that the commencement speaker, Dr. James Parson, could not be present on that date a change was necessary. The program for that event follows:

"Legend of Bells" from Chimes of Normandy—High School Chorus.

Invocation.

Salutatory—Mary Von Prichard.

Address—Dr. James Parsons.

Trio, "La Cinquintaine"—Myrtle Berg, Dorothy Bottleson, Nora Holmes.

Valedictory—Milton G. Weeks.

Song, "Alma Mater"—Class 1916.

Benediction.

PUBLIC IS WARNED AGAINST IMPOSTORS

Armenian Refugees, and Others Should be Turned Down, Says Mission Secretary.

The censor department of the commercial club calls attention of the public to the fact that at this time of the year there are many transient solicitors visiting the city and that before making donations it is advisible to be certain that the parties have the proper credentials from this committee.

The committee recently passed favorably upon the request of Assyrian solicitors, seeking financial aid for their countrymen abroad. They were able to furnish such evidence of good faith as to satisfy the commercial clubs of unquestioned standing, mayors of cities and officials of counties. There has been nothing to indicate that they were impostors, but, through the courtesy of Rev. Rufus L. Barackman, who at the request of the committee made careful inquiry into the matter, and the following letter has been received from Secretary George T. Scott of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign missions, with permission to publish in the local press.

Timely Warning.

"As you do not mention the names of the two men, we cannot tell whether our records would show them as well-known impostors or not, but the chances are that if they are receiving money personally, very little if any of it will reach the objects which the donors intend. Persia and Turkey contain many nice houses that furnish comfortable homes for some of these fake solicitors who gather the money in America for refugees, mission schools, etc. Any solicitor who himself receives cash or checks drawn to his order and does not insist that the funds be not handed to him but sent to a reputable and well known treasurer or board is pretty sure to be a faker.

"Funds for general relief of the people in Turkey and Persia to day should be sent to Charles R. Crane, treasurer, 70 Fifth avenue New York City. The Armenian and Syrian relief committee, of which Mr. Crane is treasurer, will be glad to use the money for relief purposes or in any definite way the donors may designate.

"Ten of these smooth-tongued impostors were rounded up not long ago in Canada and shipped across the border into the United States, and the deportation officials of New York City was in my office a few days ago quite distraught as to how to get them back home where they belong."

With kindest regards, I am
Very sincerely yours,
George T. Scott,
Assistant Secretary.

SENIORS STAR IN GERMAN COMEDY

Annual Class Play is Ably Handled And is Appreciated by Large Audience.

RHUBEN AGA TAKES LEAD

Cast Members Are Also Deserving of Much Credit For the Excellent Manner in Which They Handled Their Parts.

The '16 class play, "728", presented at the Auditorium last Friday evening, was attended by a large and appreciative audience, and made a decided hit with all those present. The play was directed by Mrs. Charles A. Pitkin, who is deserving of much credit for the brilliant success of her efforts. All parts assigned to those who were especially adapted to the part, were carried with the most satisfactory results. None of the usual slips of the memory were noticeable and no prompting was necessary.

Rheuben Aga, as Signor Palmiro Tamborini, late Maitre de Ballet, on a mission for an original, was easily the star of the caste. The part assigned this young man, who is a Norwegian at that, was especially difficult, but he interpreted his lines in a very pleasing manner, and furnished practically the entire amount of the comedy of the play by his clever impersonation of Tamborini from sunny Italy. Mr. Aga's Italian dialect was splendid and much laughter emanated from the audience each time he appeared. Mr. Aga was followed by a close second in Harold Schmitt, as Launcelot Barges, Mr. Schmitt displayed considerable ability as an actor, taking his part with a familarity that was surprising.

Mary Prichard, as Flos, the much sought "7-20-8," handled her part ably and seemed to fit into the part as if it had been composed especially for her. Mrs. Hypatie Bargis, a lady possessed of ancestors, aspirations and a hobby, taken by Miss Jean Hay, was a difficult part and was handled in an especially excellent manner. Roy Brown, as Courtney Corliss, and William Hoag, as Professor Gasleigh, were rather heavy parts and showed much study, and it is to the credit of both that the parts were played well. Jessie, with yearnings beyond her station, taken by Miss Alice Wilson, and Miss Evangeline Burns, as Dora Hollyhock, were not heavy parts but were particular ones, and the ease with which each handled their respective assignments is commendable. Milton Weeks, as Paul Hollyhocks, devoted to the potato-beds until Tempter comes, overcame the difficulties with an easy grace. Ray Robinson, a postman, and Walter Siems, as Hollyhock's farmer, depicted a mail carrier and a tiller of the soil in true style.

The matinee in the afternoon, which was attended by school children only, netted about $51. The money derived from this play will be used in purchasing a class memorial and also in defraying other expenses of the class at graduation. Through the efforts of the class play manager, the high school thespians will repeat the play tomorrow evening at St. Hilaire in the Imperial Hall.

The Sunshine society has some partially worn clothes and shoes to distribute. Anyone in need of same call on Mrs. H. [illegible] over First State bank, Monday afternoon, May 29th.

MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM IS OUT

Fitting Exercises Will Be Held in the Auditorium Tuesday Morning At Ten O'clock.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS DAY

Honorable E. M. Stanton Will Deliver the Address—Band And High School Glee Clubs Will Participate in the Program.

MAYOR GAMBELL'S PROCLAMATION

In conformity with the custom and in honor to the old soldiers who have died for their country, I hereby respectfully request that the business places of this city be closed on Tuesday, May 30, 1916 from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., to give the people an opportunity to observe and participate in the Memorial services.

I would further urge that every resident of Thief River Falls and surrounding country show his or her patriotism by attending the exercises at the Auditorium and taking part in the parade.

F. H. GAMBELL, Mayor.

The Program.

Selection—Minnesota State Band of Thief River Falls.

Invocation—Rev. G. O. Parish.

Vocal Solo—Miss Evelyn Grindeland.

Address—Hon. E. M. Stanton.

Patriotic Songs—High School Glee Club.

America—Audience. (Led by Glee Club).

Benediction—Rev. R. L. Barackman.

Fitting Memorial day services will be conducdted in this city next Tuesday, May 30, at the Auditorium. Governor J. A. A. Burnquist has issued the usual proclamation urging the people of Minnesota to absreve the event and pay proper homage to the departed heroes of past wars. In accordance with the usual custom, Mayor F. H. Gambell has issued his proclamation, which appears at the head of this article, and which it is hoped will be appropriately observed throughout the city.

The exercises will take place at the Auditorium, commencing promptly at 10 a. m., and will be brief. Following the exercises the parade will form at the corner of Second street and Main avenue and the order of the parade will be as follows:

Band.
Veterans.
Firing Squad.
Fire Department.
Boy Scouts.
Camp Fire Girls.
School Children.
Citizens.

The line of march will be north on Main avenue to Third street, east to Horace avenue, then north to Fourth street, west to La Bree, south to First street, then south to the cemetery. The school children and veterans will be taken by auto to the cemetery from First street. Informal exercises will take place at cemetery, participated in by the several lodges and other local organizations.

The rifle squad will also fire several salutes over the final resting places of the departed heroes and taps will be sounded by Joe Greenfield, director of the band.

Veterans will be called for at their homes by autos and will be taken to the Auditorium and cemetery and then back to their homes.

Automobile owners who wish to take a place in the parade are requested to notify John Bratrud, chairman of the auto committee.

Warren Here Saturday.

The Warren high school base ball team will cross bats with the local high school team Saturday afternoon at the fair grounds. Thief River Falls administered a defeat upon the Warren boys two weeks ago and it is to regain lost laurels that the Warrenites are coming to this city. The second victory was recorded for Thief River Falls last Saturday when they defeated Argyle by the one-sided score of 18 to 1. Heavy hitting won for Thief River Falls, while only one Argyle boy hit safely.

Concerning Endorsements

Senator Knute Nelson is a good hearted old scout. He has also at times been suspected of being something of a politician. Therefore when the friends of a candidate for office on the Republican ticket ask if it is possible for him to say a good word for their protege, the senator nearly always finds it possible to do so. On account of the immense popularity of Senator Nelson throughout the state these good words are very often received with a degree of importance far greater than intended by him.

In this manner A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls, candidate for congress in this district, came in for a rather nice notice last week. In speaking of Mr. Anderson, Senator Nelson said that he was a capable man, a good citizen, honest and upright. This is just the kind of an endorsement Senator Nelson would be glad to give to any worthy citizen and it would have been decidedly strange if he had not done so in the case of Mr. Anderson. Everyone agrees fully with what the senator said about the Fergus Falls banker, but few would go so far as to say that these things in themselves are sufficient reasons for electing him to congress in place of Mr. Steenerson. The latter is more capable, just as good a citizen, just as upright and honest as is Mr. Anderson, and it is likely that Senator Nelson would have willingly admitted as much had he thought that his remarks would be used as an indication that he preferred one of these candidates above the other. Anyone knowing Senator Nelson knows that he is not in the habit of endorsing candidates for congress, no matter from what district they hail, and it is not likely that he would go out of his way and change this policy of a life-time in order to allign himself against a man serving for years on the same delegation with him.

Those opposed to Congressman Steenerson have pounced upon this innocent interview and are quoting it to show that Senator Nelson favors Anderson. That such is not the fact is evidenced by the senator's attitude toward the candidates for congress in the Eighth district. In that baliwick C. P. Craig, one of the best known men in the state, has entered the race against Congressman C. B. Miller. In a letter to a Duluth friend Senator Nelson took occasion to say a few complimentary things about the work of Mr. Miller as a member of congress, and the friends of that gentleman immediately set up the claim that he had the unqualified endorsement of the senator.

To prove the unsoundness of their reasoning it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that Congressman Miller voted exactly as did Congressman Steenerson on a matter upon which the senior senator stood alone among the members of the Minnesota delegation. If this was sufficient to forfeit the friendship of the senator in the case of Congressman Steenerson, it should have had the same effect in the case of Congressman Miller. If his vote on the warning measure is sufficient to condemn Steenerson, voting the same way on the same measure must also condemn Miller. Senator Nelson is too old a hand to condemn a man for a certain action and then commend another man for doing identically the same thing.

As a matter of fact, it will likely be found that Senator Nelson simply said a good word for a couple of men with whom he has been acquainted for years and did not for a moment think that his utterances would be taken either as an endorsement or a condemnation.

Farley Dare of the Walker Pilot, has no opposition as candidate for reelection to the legislature. If Farley had not made good at the last session this highly desirable condition of affairs would not be possible. So conspicuous was the work of this legislator that Itasca, the other county in the Fifty-second district, will in all probability send a newspaper man as its representative. L. A. Rossman of the Grand Rapids Herald-Review, is a candidate and everything points to his election. With McGarry in the senate and Dare and Rossman in the house, the people of that very important section of northern Minnesota will be represented by as a capable trio as can possibly be selected.

And still the greatest interest seems to center around the lieutenant governorship. It is practically admitted that Gov. Burnquist is to receive the nomination for chief executive and this transfers the fight to the office next in importance. Without in any way attempting to question the ability of the other two gentlemen, there is not the slightest doubt but that James A. Peterson is the man best equipped for this important post. The influence upon legislation exerted by the lieutenant governor is tremendous. He has the appointing of the committees of the upper house, and it is within his province to thus in a large measure shape legislation. Mr. Peterson is an experienced man and as such would have a great advantage over either of the others seeking the office. There is no question but that in point of ability he is the superior of either Mr. Frankson or Dr. Gates and he is much better known than either. His nomination looks certain. Frankson will be severely handled in the northeastern counties because of his attitude on the tonnage tax proposition, and Dr. Gates is not sufficiently well known in the northern part of the state to command any considerable following.

It will seem to quite a lot of young folks in Thief River Falls as if life really begins for them next Friday. They will then graduate from high school and from now on will have to choose their own course, in some degree at least. They probably feel quite grown up and competent, but they will get over this and come to the same conclusion as nearly all others before them—namely, that what they have learned simply places them in a better position to learn more. They may think that they have completed a very important part of life's journey, but they have only begun, and it is what they make of themselves from now on that will count. Everything heretofore has been preparatory and everything has been done for them by someone else. Practically all the thinking they have had to do has been that required in order to meet school room requirements. From now on many of them will be expected to employ the results of this period of preparation for the benefit of themselves and others, and then their responsibility may be said to have actually commenced. Parents and teachers have given the very best there is in them in order that a creditable product might result from their care and instruction, and these young men and women can repay this expenditure only by making the most of the knowledge they have gained.

Get a copy of the proposed new City Charter—and read it.

ON account of the great advances in price of all supplies used in the mo ern laundry of today, the laundries all over the North west have been forced to raise the list or run at a loss and shut down.

The advance in this price is not even enough to offset the additional cost of operation as in some instances supplies have four doubled and in each case more than doubled.

Owing to this fact the undersigned laundries of Thief River Falls find we are compelled to raise our lists, and trust the public will appreciate the existing condition and continue to co-operate with us in building up this industry of our city.

VOTERS SHOWING LITTLE INTEREST

Statewide Primary Less Than Four Weeks Distant.

APATHY APPEARS GENERAL

Senatorship Only Contest Able to Attract Even Passing Notice of the Public.

St. Paul—(Special)—Though the statewide primary is less than a month away little interest is being taken by the voters in the coming contest. Apathy of a kind that is not at all to the liking of those interested prevails. This condition, perhaps, is not so marked in the matter of the United States senatorial nomination, in which four candidates are struggling for the mastery, but as it concerns the other state officers the don't-give-a-darn feature is of the absolute kind. Voters will not interest themselves, and some of the daily prints which generally give much space to the political doings about this time of the year are taking notice of the fact to the extent that they are letting political news severely alone. Showing the ignorance that prevails among those who should be up on current events, a politician of statewide fame says that on a recent visit to a northern county he was asked by a banker who were contesting for the Republican nomination for governor. In the matter of the candidates for the other offices his ignorance was just as dense. One candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor says that one of the questions invariably put to him while on the road is "who are your opponents?" When it is known that one candidate for lieutenant governor, Thomas Frankson, a former member of the legislature, has literally plastered the state with his pictures and his cards, and that two others have not been far behind him in respect to publicity, such ignorance would seem uncalled for. Though generally picked as a winner Governor Burnquist might as well be running for constable as far as any general knowledge of his candidacy and movements are concerned. This same condition prevails in the case of S. G. Iverson, who, though some may not know it, is putting up a vigorous campaign. As I said, there is some interest being taken in the senatorial contest, but it is largely because of the bigness of the men involved and the general desire to meet them face to face. The kingmakers say this condition of apathy will dissolve soon, but the dissolution process will have to begin without delay if any general interest is to be shown. Things political are certainly dead now on the voters' side of the house.

Frank E. Minnette of St. Cloud, father of the present telephone law, which puts all telephone companies operating in Minnesota under the control of the state railroad and warehouse commission, is again a candidate for legislative honors. Two others are contesting his right to the nomination, but as the old warhorse has generally weathered the storms in the past the belief down here is that he will get by. At the last session of the legislature he led the fight for the antis against woman suffrage and was successful in defeating it. This activity on his part probably did not endear him to other sections of the state, but in his district the antis have the call and he was simply answering their demands. Mr. Minnette is a forceful talker and leader and if elected will undoubtedly be found among those on the list of aspirants for speaker.

The congressional field in the First district, where four candidates were contesting the stewardship of Sidney Anderson, has been reduced to three by the withdrawal of George P. Tawney of Winona. State Senator Duxbury of Caledonia is probably the most prominent of the three remaining. Anderson is not regarded as a hard man to beat, but with a field of three against him the whole thing resolves itself into a farce, and this is about how it struck Mr. Tawney. If Congressman Anderson is to be retired the general opinion is that some of the others will have to follow Mr. Tawney's example.

Minnesota, as you probably know, is building a $500,000 historical building adjacent to the state capitol and its construction just now is being greatly hampered by labor troubles. A St. Paul firm has the contract and it is in bad with organized labor. Governor Burnquist and the state board of control have endeavored to lend their good offices looking to a settlement, but so far their efforts have not been attended with success.

When it comes time to organize the Minnesota delegation to the Republican national convention the liveliest contest is likely to come over the member of the resolutions committee. The suffrage issue has been injected into the matter already by the activity of St. Paul women, who have taken it up with delegates at large and district delegates, urging them to support a suffrage plank in the platform. The women's committee, headed by Mrs. George M. Kenyon, waited on former Governor Eberhart, who assured them that he is still a believer in the suffrage cause, as he has declared himself before. But he told them that the only Minnesota man who would have much to say on this subject would be the member of the resolutions committee, who has not been selected yet. Senator George H. Sullivan of Stillwater, the most vigorous opponent suffrage has in the state legislature, is understood to be a candidate for this committee assignment and a fight is likely, as men of the more progressive tendency on the delegation are opposed to Sullivan as the state's representative.

A feature of the contest for the Republican nomination for state treasurer is the general opinion concerning the nationality of two of the candidates. In the minds of many Henry Rines of Mora, one of the candidates, is a German, while R. L. Johnson of Austin is looked upon as a Scandinavian. Instead Rines is a Scandinavian and Johnson is of Scotch and English extraction. Johnson's name brought him nearly 70,000 votes when he was a candidate for the office two years ago. Down here Rines is generally picked as the winner. The third candidate for the place is Peter Schwarg, a real German, whose residence is in the First district.

HENRY RINES.

C. R. Davis, A. J. Volstead and Halvor Steenerson, the ranking members of the Minnesota delegation in congress, all face serious opposition either in the coming primaries or in the general election. Since they were first nominated in tremendous primary contests back in 1902, these three have breezed through at election after election, with only an occasional flurry of opposition. This is the first time that all the trio have had serious opposition at the same time and unquestionably the criticism aroused by the delegation's vote of tabling the McLemore resolution is responsible.

Capitol gossips are now discussing the principal issues before the next legislature and the general opinion runs to telephone legislation. Advanced telephone tolls are the burden of complaint in more than one district and many of the candidates for legislative honors are pledged to relief.

The only contest in the Socialist primaries has been eliminated by the withdrawal of Ole E Tolin of Dalbo as a candidate for congress in the Tenth district. His filing was a case of crossed wires.

A Mistake in the Policy of the Bethlehem Steel Company

To the People:

The Senate of the United States has passed a bill to spend $11,000,000 of the People's money to build a government armor plant. The measure is now before the House of Representatives.

It is said that manufacturers of armor have "gouged" the country in the past, and that a government plant is necessary to secure armor more cheaply.

The mistake of the Bethlehem Steel Company has been that it has kept quiet.

We have allowed irresponsible assertions to be made for so long without denial, that many people now believe them to be proven facts.

We shall make the mistake of silence no longer.

Henceforth we shall pursue a policy of publicity. Misinformation will not be permitted to go uncorrected.

It is and has been the policy of our Company to deal with the American Government fairly and squarely.

We shall henceforth place the details of our relations with the Government before the American People.

The United States has for twenty years obtained the highest grade of armor and has paid a lower price for it than has any other great naval power.

Figures officially compiled for the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs from the Naval Year Book show that under conditions prevailing just before the European war, the chief naval powers of the world were paying these prices for armor:

England, $503 per ton; France, $460; Germany, $490; Japan, $490; UNITED STATES, $425.

A government plant cannot make armor any cheaper than we can do it; and—

We are prepared to manufacture armor at any price which the Government itself shall name as fair. THAT BEING SO, SHOULD $11,000,000 OF THE PEOPLE'S MONEY BE WASTED TO BUILD A GOVERNMENT PLANT?

STEENERSON SAVES POSTMASTER JOBS

Ninth District Congressman Defeats Plan to Abolish Fourth Class Offices in 56,000 Towns.

Thanks to the efforts of Representative Halvor Steenerson, 56,000 rural postoffices in this country will not be abolished.

At the instance of the postoffice department, the senate placed in the bill to increase the limit of postal savings to $1,000, a provision authorizing the establishment of a central office in each county in the country, with the other postoffices as branch stations.

Although the same provision had been submitted to the house postoffice committee and rejected, the house members generally were not informed upon it, and the Minnesota member had to make his fight practically alone for a time, when he won over the democratic house conferees.

Critizes Increase of Power.

"The most serious objection to the proposal," he said, " lies in the fact that it is along the lines of many others that are brought here every session of congress, for an increase in the discretionary power of the department. It is advocated as 'civil service reform.' We are told that this will promote 'efficiency."

"Every time we unduly increase the discretionary power of the administrative officers we reap trouble. Look at the rural delivery service. The law simply authorizes the department to establish it. There are no restrictions except those prescribing the salaries. The department has used its large discretionary power, and now see where we are. Department officials have sought to revolutionize the service. Every time we get a new postmaster general he thinks it is his function to turn things upside down; to undo everything that has been done by his predecessor, republican or democrat. Hence we have an outcry on both sides of the chamber against the changes in the rural delivery service, and bill after bill is introduced to limit the discretionary power of the department, and the people are up in arms.

Jobs For More Democrats.

"Take this proposition. It would have wiped out 56,000 postoffices, creating vacancies that would be filled by worthy democrats, who would all be included in the classified service, to serve the government for life. As to efficiency, who can tell? Assertions that the efficiency of the service would be improved are purely speculative. Results heretofore reached after an enlargement of the discretionary power of the department certainly have not been satisfactory.

"It would result in a change of personnel in the public service. If the department wanted to make a change in Crookston, or in any other office, the department could send a man up from Virginia. Out in the northwest, where people make money and cannot afford to be in public service, the offices will be filled from states near Washington, where everybody seems willing to serve in the public civil service."

MANAGER PLAN IS CALLED SCIENTIFIC

The city manager plan of conducting municipal affairs is being heartily endorsed wherever it has been tried. The most conspicuous example of its success is furnished by Dayton, Ohio, the largest city operating under a city manager charter.

At Minneapolis last week J. M. Schweitzer, a business man from the Ohio city, delivered an address before the Saturday Lunch club, his remarks being devoted to an explanation of the system. He illustrated by charts and diagrams the relationship of the principle of scientific industrial corporation management to the business of conducting the affairs of a municipality. Mr. Schweitzer argued for the "commission manager" system of city management rather than the straight commission plan, which, he said has in notable instances been a failure.

Municipal government in Haverhill, Mass., Galveston, Texas and Des Moines was analyzed. The speaker said that the commission manager plan will meet general acceptance when it is understood. It eliminates the difficulties that have arisen under the plan of having five commissioners who have to get together on the big issues and sometimes do not find it easy to agree. It centralizes authority in one man.

"We are asked if we are not afraid to put so much authority into the hands of one man," he said. "The best answer that I know to that is the old party 'boss' himself. In the hands of the 'boss' are powers greater even than a manager has under the commission manager plan, but the 'boss' is always incompetent, corrupt or selfish and he holds the power not because the people gave it to him but because the conditions arising from party politics in municipal affairs make it possible for him to take it."

SHIPPING CLUB OF MUCH VALUE

Methods Emplyoed by Thief River Shippers Association Endorsed by Government Bulletin.

FARMERS GET FULL PRICE

Also All Benefits of Transportation Rates on Carloads as Well as Personal Supervision in Marketing Shipments.

Farmer's shipping associations are being organized over this country and are proving among the most valuable aids ever devised for the economical and safe marketing of cattle, hogs and sheep. While the Thief River Shipping association has not been in existence very long, yet its success has been so marked as to prove its value. That the organization is established on the proper lines and conducted in a manner certain to bring the best results is evidinced by the endorsement given associations of this kind in the Weekly News Latter, a government publication dealing with matters pertaining to agriculture. The leading aritcle in the issue of May 10, is on the subject of these associations, and contains a strong endorsement of them. The Bulletin says:

"Farmers live-stock shipping associations have proved so successful that, although the first was not formed until 1908, the Department of Agriculture now has a list of approximately 500 that are now shipping in a co-operative way. About 200 of these are in Minnesota, where the movement started, and the remainder are chiefly in the Middle West.

"The main purpose of these associations is to enable their members to ship in carload lots to the central markets instead of being more or less at the mercy of local buyers in disposing of a few animals from time to time. The fact that no capital is required for the organization of such an association, says a new publication of the department, Farmer's Bulletin 718, which deals with this subject, makes these associations possible in communities in which more complicated forms of co-operation would no succeed. The Bulletin, however, points out that such associations are scarcely practicable in regions where there is so much live stock that it is generally marketed in carload lots under any circumstances or where there is so little that the association has practically nothing with which to work.

"To organize such an association it is necessary only for the farmers of the community to meet together, adopt a single constitution and by-laws, a sample of which is given in the bulletin already mentioned, to elect officers, and, in turn, for them to appoint a manager. It is recommended, although it is not absolutely necessary, that the organization incorporate. This can be done at a nominal cost—usually not more than $10. For this small expenditure of trouble and money the association usually enables the farmer to market his stock when it is ready instead of compelling him to wait until the local shipper is ready to buy it. He obtains for himself the benefits of the cheaper carload transportation, and the shipments of the association realize for the owner the market price for his stock less the actual cost of marketing. In particular it has been found that when thin stock, calves, or lambs are sold in small numbers, the local price is usually very low. It is on this class of stock that the associations have been able to save their members the most money.

"In order to avoid misunderstanding, it is important that all stock be marked at the shipping point. This precaution prevents disputes in regard to shrinkage and dockage and assists in making adjustments in case of loss or damage in transit. There are three common methods of marking. Numbers or other characters may be clipped in some conspicuous part of the animal, paint may be employed, or numbered ear tags used. The last method is the least frequent because it is somewhat difficult at the stockyards to get close enough to the animal to see the number on the tag. If the second method is adopted, ordinary paint is undesirable, especially for hogs as it does not dry readily enough to prevent smearing. This difficulty may be overcome by using paint containing about one-fourth varnish. In the case of sheep, however, painting is objectionable because the marks will not scour out and wool manufacturers object to them, and branding fluid is therefore preferable. Whatever system of marking is adopted. the important features are that it should be uniform for all shipments and that the marks should be plain and conspicuous. In many cases hogs are not marked, but are graded by the manager at the shipping point. A record of those subject to dockage is kept in such cases. Marking is advised, however, as a precaution against mistakes.

"Since no payments are made for stock shipped until returns from the central market are obtained, these cooperative associations may be formed without capital. All that is necessary is for the farmers to comply with their engagement to furnish the stock to the manager when, where, and in such quanities as they say they will. In some associations a fixed sum of money is exacted from a shipper for a failure to deliver stock to the manager as agreed. In every case the amount to be exacted should be reasonable and should fairly represent the actual loss which it is estimated the association will suffer as the result of non-delivery. The provision for liquidated damage is proper, because n moacfautospre -det-os.iecmcmcmmz the manager must arrange for a certain amount of car space and if all of it is not used the expense to those who do ship is proportionately greater.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses describe Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress and Pollock's pursuit of her. There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky. Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill the latter.

IN THE ALLEY

A WITNESS room, like an ocean-liner, begets strange friendships in its enforced intimacy, and also has this in common with the great ships, that those who come on deck only toward the close of a stormy passage, find themselves unreasonably ostracized by their fellow passengers who have been daily sharing the excitement of the voyage. Thus the three newcomers among the witnesses in the trial of Mary Page were left sitting primly on a bench close to the door while the incongruous but friendly group of those who had already testified stood near the window.

The trio themselves were oddly conglomerate—a burly man in what were obviously his best clothes, with a collar a size too small and a buxom woman whose flushed face looked out from under a marvelous purple bonnet. Her hands were encased in very large white cotton gloves and she held back her skirts aggressively from contact with the short and elaborate gown of the over-dressed, tired-looking woman whose face was pasty with powder and hard with rouge.

All of the witnesses, for that matter, from the little bell-hop to Mrs. Page herself, surveyed this last comer with disapproval; and Amy declared succinctly that if "Mr. Langdon put THAT on the witness stand—it would be GOOD NIGHT!"

Langdon, however, greeted her with a warmth that more than overbalanced their chilliness, and his welcome to the other man and woman was equally enthusiastic. To him, the presence of these three was a triumph. It meant that he had succeeded where the police had failed, and that he had still another surprise to spring upon the jury in this most astounding trial.

Some hint of all this crept into his tone lending it a new, almost boyish note, when, at the beginning of the day's proceedings, he rose and said:

"Your Honor, and Gentlemen of the Jury: Ever since the beginning of this trial one point has remained a mystery. The state has admitted its inability to offer evidence on this mooted subject, and therefore I crave the indulgence of the court to digress from direct proceedings this morning, to show you where and how Mary Page spent those hours between the death of James Pollock and her surrender to the law on the following morning!"

"That would be good night!"

"What!" The startled exclamation was wrung involuntarily from the District Attorney as he half rose from his chair, but it was drowned in the stir of excitement that swept through the entire room. For this had indeed been a mooted question and a decidedly sore point with the Prosecutor—the whereabouts of Mary during those hours immediately following the murder.

"Miss Page," continued Langdon when the Judge's gavel had restored order, "did not herself know exactly what was happening. As always follows an attack of repressed psychosis, the mind of the sufferer was like that of a patient coming out of ether—a flash of recollection and a stretch of blank unconsciousness; therefore, it is not until now that I have succeeded in piecing together the story of that night, and I shall call as my first witness, Kate O'Neill!"

Kate proved to be the buxom woman in the purple bonnet who gave her age as "round about thirty-five" and her occupation as "a cook, and a good one" to the delighted amusement of the spectators.

"Miss O'Neill," said Langdon after the preliminary questions, "you say you are a cook. Where were you last employed?"

"In the boardin'-house of Mrs. Watson," she answered with a strong Hibernian accent. "And the very ould divil of a job it was, too!"

"That is on the same street as the Hotel Republic, is it not?"

"Sure! and it's but two doors away, and what wid the dancin' and the music goin' on there, and the phonygraph at the Club back, 'tis never a quiet moment we had the whole night through."

"But your duties at the boarding-house kept you up pretty late, anyway, didn't they?"

"Sure an' they did then. What with hot bread two days a week, and me cake-bakin', I set up every night till 'most cock-crow."

"Now, Kate," Langdon's voice was very friendly, almost coaxing, in fact, "I want you to tell me if you ever went out into the alley or street that ran back of the boarding-house late at night."

"Go on wid you!" she retorted, bridling. "Didn't I tell you that?"

"I know you told me, but I want you to tell the court. You had a friend who was watchman for the block, didn't you? Denny by name."

"He was not me friend, he was me finance!" she responded with dignity. "And some nights when it would be cold, and I had made mysel' a sup of hot tea or maybe coffee, I would take a bit out to Denny. It's weary work watching houses in the dark."

"Of course your mistress knew nothing of this?"

"Sure, and what would I tell that ould snoopin' divil for? It weren't none of her business!"

"On the night when James Pollock was shot in the Hotel Republic, you had been up late, had you not?"

"Yes, sor. I had set the dough for bakin', and seein' as how the fire was hot, I thought I'd fix up a bite for Denny when he made his rounds."

"Will you tell us please, what you saw when you went to the back gate with the—er—bite for Dennis?"

"Well, then, it was this way. I shlipped out and opened the gate, just a bit at a time, for sometimes it would get the ould Nick in it and squeak fer all the lard we put on it, and I took a look out fer Denny. There was a man standin' in the shadows so near I could have put my hand on him, but I knows it wasn't my man by reason of the narrer shoulders, so I stood waitin' fer him to move on."

"Did he seem to be watching for anyone?"

"Yes, sor. He was starin' up at the Hotel Republic, and I thought he was watchin' a man who was on the fire-escape. Then I decided it weren't a man I saw, but just a shadder, and suddenly a young lady, all dressed up in evenin'-clothes, climbs out of a winder and starts down the fire-escape and the man says, 'Thank Gawd! She was slow enough!'"

"Were you near enough to recognize the young lady?"

"Not then, no sir. All I could see was the shimmer of her dress and the light on her face when she passed the winders. She was walkin' kind of queer and unsteady, like as though she might have been drunk or sick, and when she reached the street she just stood there dazed. She had no coat nor hat and she was drawin' her breath like a bit of a childer that's been cryin'."

"Did the man who was waiting speak to her?"

"Yes. He said, 'Where in —— have you been? I been waitin' a good half-hour. And believe me, this alley is no cozy corner to lounge in.' But the girl didn't answer him. She just leaned against a wall and moaned like. At that he took hold of her arm and shook it and told her not to git cold feet, that he had it all fixed to git away safe. He called her Sadie, but she didn't seem to recognize the name and she wouldn't go with him. Then he took hold of her and dragged her along right past me, so near I could have touched her."

"Were you close enough to recognize her then?"

"Yes, sor."

"Was it the defendant, Mary Page?"

"It was, sor. Though she looked terrible sick and different, and there was an awful lookin' bruise on her shoulder like somebody had hurt her bad."

"Could you see where they went?"

"Yes, sor. Sure and I slipped out the gate and followed them a bit to see where they would go. But they stopped just beyond me on the alley and the man gives a whistle. Just three notes, like it might have been the echo of the band at the hotel, but somebody was listenin' for it, and I heard a winder go up in one of the houses across the way.

"At that the man sings out in a whisper, 'I got Sadie down here, let it down quick.' Then I saw something comin' down like a bit of white on the end of a rope, and I could hear it slap, slappin' the side of the house as it hit."

"Could you see what it was?"

"Not then, sor, except that it was something on the end of a rope."

"Did the man say anything that you could hear, to the girl—Miss Page?"

"Yes. He said, 'Larry is up there He's all right, but don't blab too much and don't give him a peep at the shiners. Keep close till I git back. I won't be long.' At that the girl seemed to wake up, as if she was comin' out of a dream, and she clutched at his arm and began to cry. 'James!' she says, 'James Pollock!' And the man he laughs. 'So that's what's eatin' you, is it,' he says. 'Well, fergit it. My Gawd, you ain't guilty just because you was in the hotel. They can't connect it up with you. I give you my word.' 'Oh, thank God, thank God!' she whispers, and begins to cry harder than ever, and the man shook her again. 'Cut out the water works,' he says angrily, 'and get into this seat, unless you want the bulls to pull you in.'"

"Then I looks up and I says nix, he's a gumshoe crook."

"What did he mean by 'this seat'? Could you see?"

"Yes, sor. The rope that the man had let down had a sort of a swing at the end of it, and he made the girl sit in that, then he whistled again and the other man pulled her up and she disappeared in a winder."

"What did the man do?"

"He waited till she was gone, then he went on down the street and round the corner. Then I saw Denny comin' up the other way and I went to meet him, and I found he'd been watchin' too. That was why I couldn't see him when I come to the gate."

"That is all, thank you, Miss O'Neill," said Langdon; but the Judge leaned forward with an arresting gesture.

"And having seen all this," he said harshly, "didn't you read the papers the next morning? Didn't you see that a girl was missing, or connect her in any way with the occurrences you had witnessed?"

"Well, I ain't sayin' but what I had my suspicions," she admitted readily.

"Then why didn't you tell someone?"

"Huh!" she retorted. "And let that ould divil of a Mrs. Watson know I was meetin' Denny and maybe givin' him a bite, and lose me job? I guess not!"

"Then why," persisted his Honor, "have you told now?"

"Sure, and it's me that's bein' married this week, yer Honor, and I'm after lavin' Mrs. Watson last Saturday," she said amid a stifled gale of mirth from spectators and jury alike.

Even the prosecutor smiled, waiving his right to cross examine, for the moment at least; and Langdon, with a cheery and encouraging nod towards Mary, called the second of his three new witnesses:

"Dennis Gallagher."

Denny, whose collar seemed to have shrunk to even more torturing tightness during the interim of waiting, took his place on the stand with a face the hue of his fiancee's bonnet, and cleared his throat noisily between each sentence as if the linen band about his neck were somehow pressing his vocal chords.

He was, he admitted, a private watchman who had most of the block near the Hotel Republic, and he usually paid a visit to the back gate of the Watson boarding-house once or twice during the course of his rounds.

He verified all that the buxom cook had already told, since he himself had watched proceedings from a dark corner a little further along the alley, but his account was amplified and more definite as to detail.

"Did you," asked Langdon, "know who resided in the house into which the girl was lifted by means of the rope swing?"

"I did, sor," he answered. "It was Barker's, the gamblin' place, you know, sor. They kep' it dark in the back and in the front, but it was bright enough inside, begorra."

"Were you watchman for that building?"

"No, sor. They had their own man to keep an eye out for the bulls, but it was that very night they were pulled. Tim, the policeman at the corner, had wised me up to it only an hour before.

"'Stick around, Denny,' says he, 'there'll be big doin's soon. They're goin' to raid Barker's,' sez he, 'and I'll bet we pull a few big bugs, or my name is mud.'

"So I was kind of hangin' around waitin' when I see this other fellow posted in the alley. First off, I sez, he's a plain clothes man. Then I looks at his feet and I says nix, he's a gumshoe crook, and then the girl comes down the fire escape."

"When the girl had disappeared into Barker's, what did you do?"

"I joined Katie and says to her, said I, 'it's goin' to be a big night, and that girl has jumped out of the fryin' pan into the fire.' And begorra, sor, I'd no more than said it, then I heard the signal blow and saw the bluecoats marchin' up the alley and across the street at the end surroundin' the place. 'Good night to Barker's,' says I; and we watched 'em batter in the door and march up stairs. It was then that I felt the other man tuggin' at me arm."

"The other man?" It was more an exclamation than a question and Dennis nodded.

"Sure the feller that had been standin' some place in the shadows. 'Wot are the perlice after?' he says all hoarse like. 'Who are they lookin' fer—the girl?' 'Not on your life,' says I, 'they're raidin' Barker's.' 'Barker's?' says he, as if he'd never heard of the place. 'I—I—thought the trouble was in the hotel. I—I—heard a shot.' 'Then,' says I, 'you've got one on me, fer with all these auttymobiles hangin' about, the man that kin tell a bullet from a tire has some ears.' 'You're right,' says he, 'it was probably a tire.' And he laughs; then he slunk away, as if he didn't like the perlice even if they weren't doin' anything but raid a gamblin' joint."

"Can you describe that man?"

"No. He was kind of fattish, and short. He looked like the sort of a feller that hits 'em up considerable, but I didn't take particular notice, sor."

"Did you and Miss O'Neill remain in the alley after he had gone?"

"Yes, fer the police had run up the shades and we could see right into Barker's place. Then I seen the girl again."

"Do you mean Miss Page?"

"Yes, sor; leastwise, I suppose it was her. She was standin' with her hands over her face, and one of the policemen jerks 'em down and turns to another one and says, says he, 'Is this the girl?' I could hear plain even down in the street, but the other bull seemed puzzled. 'It looks like it might be,' he says, 'especially the glad rags, but she ain't got Maggie's ear marks.' Then he grabs the girl by the arm and says, 'Wot's your name?' But she didn't answer, just moans, and at that he laughs and says, 'Playin' dumb, eh? Same old game. Now I'm dead sure you are Maggie Hale that bums around the restaurants and hooks the suckers. Well, if you won't talk to us, you can tell it to the judge.' And with that he marches her away where we couldn't see her."

"Just a minute, Mr. Gallagher," interrupted Langdon. "Let's return to that fattish man in the alley. Did he come up the street with the police?"

"No, sor. He was alongside o' me by that time."

"Then he came from the other end of the street?"

Dennis scratched his head.

"Not as I seen, sor," he admitted.

"Would you have seen him had he come from the corner beyond the Hotel Republic?" Langdon's voice was vibrant with eager excitement and the spirit of it swept through the courtroom in a shivering whisper.

"Yes, I'd a seen anybody comin' from either end of the street. I allus could when I stood at the gate with Katie, fer there's a big arc light they have to pass under and you can see them plain as plain."

"One moment." Langdon swung about to the court clerk. "Read out the testimony of Kate O'Neill beginning with the question, 'Did he seem to be watching for someone?'"

"'Question: Did he seem to be watching for someone?' Answer: 'Yes, sir. He was staring up at the Hotel Republic, and I thought he was watching a man who was on the fire escape. Then I decided it wasn't a man that I saw but just a shadow, and suddenly a young lady all dressed up in—'"

"That will do, thank you," interrupted Langdon. "Now, Mr. Gallagher, if that was a man whom Miss O'Neill saw on the fire-escape, would you have seen him come down?"

"No, sor. I wasn't lookin' at the hotel."

"But that is the one place he could have come from when he joined you, isn't it?"

"No, sor. There's a servants' entrance to the hotel, just under the fire escape. He might have been someone from the hotel."

"Did he look like a waiter? What sort of a suit did he have on?"

"A check one, sor, and a red tie."

"Did you see anyone else while you were standing there?"

"Yes, sor. Me and Katie saw some people put their heads out of a windy in the hotel, then presently a policeman starts down the fire escape and Katie says, says she, 'Let's get in the kitchen; I don't want to be mixed up in this.' And I says, 'Me neither. Besides, a sup of hot coffee will set me up after the excitement'; so we went in."

"That is all, thank you, Mr. Gallagher." But now the Prosecutor was on his feet.

"Mr. Gallagher," he said sharply, "having seen all this, didn't you realize that you should have testified to it before the police?"

"I didn't connect it with the murder of this man Pollock," said Gallagher in some indignation. "And I took it for granted the police had got all the evidence they wanted on Barker's place."

"And may one ask," said the prosecutor with honied sweetness, "just what influence was brought to bear to make you tell this story today?"

"Well, you see," said Gallagher, scenting no sarcasm or coercion, "it was like this. When the police come to the house Katie gits mad at their questions and she says she was abed and asleep. Then a few days ago along comes a young feller selling a thing to lift the covers off of bilin' pots. He came to the back gate and he talks to Kate, till she says she don't be wantin' one, because she's leavin' of a Saturday to git married. Then he kids her a bit about he bets she's marryin' a policeman, so she tells him who I am. Then he gits talkin' about this affair, and he has the night's doin's so mixed up Kate she corrects him. He bets her a hat she's wrong; she says she kin prove it all by me. And so she does; but then another young feller comes around and says as how we can help a young lady and clear up a lot of trouble if we tell it in court. And begorra, Kate got her hat at that!"

A shout of laughter rang through the court, and the Prosecutor sat down, far more discomfited than he would admit. It was such a simple subterfuge. The back gate peddler with his packet of gossip—and the police of course blundering in and bullying. His respect for Langdon not only as a man but as a lawyer was growing, and in the back of his mind there hovered a black phantom—the mysterious man in the checked suit who had been in the alley. Had Langdon this man up his sleeve? He frowned and shifted the papers on his desk uneasily, then looked up with a start of surprise as the door of the witness-room opened to admit the flamboyantly gowned woman, with the hard and tired eyes.

She gave her name as Agnes Keenan, but when the question came as to her occupation, she stared straight ahead of her with a sort of grim humor, then shrugged her thin shoulders.

"None," she said with the imitation of an English accent. "I live on my income."

The crowd grinned, but Langdon flushed, and his voice was a little hard as he said quietly:

"I am sorry, Miss Keenan, to have to ask you such a question, but were you not an occupant of a cell in the Fiftieth Street police station on the night of the raid of Barker's gambling rooms?"

"I was." Her tone was more quiet now. "I had failed to come across, and having had a drop too much I sassed the sergeant, and he locked me up to 'cool off'."

"Had you a cell to yourself?"

"Well, at first I thought it was a private room, but a little later they shoved a girl in."

"Was that girl the defendant—Mary Page?"

"It was. But she looked some different then. She was all dolled up in an evening gown, and hadn't even a cloak. I wondered what was up and tried to make her talk, but she seemed looney. I thought it was the d. t.'s at first, but when I found out she was plain batty, I got scared and called the guard. But he only cussed me out, so I got hold of her hands and tried to make her stop crying in that queer fashion. After a bit she began to talk. It was incoherent at first, about James, and the big house, and she wasn't Sadie or Maggie. Then she seemed to come to herself and asked who I was and where she was."

"And that girl was Mary Page?"

"Did she remain sane and conscious after that?"

"Not at first. She'd ramble, then she talked sanely. Finally she quieted down, and when I said that I was sure to get off first thing in the morning, she asked me if I would take a note to her lawyer. And I said I would."

"Did you ask her her name?"

"No." She smiled a little, half whimsically, half bitterly. "It ain't etiquette to ask names under the circumstances, but I said as it was the first time, the best thing to do was to say nothing till she had a lawyer to do the talking for her."

"Whom was the note she gave you addressed to?"

The question seemed to surprise her. "Why, you know—" she stammered, then laughed, "Gee, I forgot. I'm tellin' the court. The note was addressed to Mr. Philip Langdon and I took it straight to him. Then him and me beat it back to the police station and he had a conference with the Magistrate. Then he shook my hand and thanked me like a gentleman,—and—that's all."

"She was all dolled up."

"One moment, Miss Keenan. You say that Miss Page would become sane, and then would lapse into delirium again. Did she mention any particular incident—or ask you any strange questions?"

"Yes. Once she said, 'He acts funny for a man who has just put on a successful play.' Then suddenly she sat up and grabbed me and cried, 'Was it blood or—was it just a red necktie—I saw it—' And I said, 'You saw it where?' And she said—sane as she could be, 'It was the other man outside—I couldn't see his face—just the red—' Then she began to cry and went off again into delirium, or whatever you call it. Next time she opened her eyes, she asked if I knew whether James Pollock was dead or if she had dreamed it, and I said so far as I knew James was about the livest thing I'd ever bumped against in this old town. Then she sighed like a kid and went to sleep, but when she woke up she seemed to know he was dead."

"Did she make any other mention of the man with the red tie?"

"No. When I asked her, she said it was a blur, but it would come back to her—she was sure of that. Someone else would have seen it too."

"That is all—" began Langdon, and broke off in astonishment. There was a commotion in the back of the room and a man stood up, raising one hand as if about to speak. His face was ashy, his jaw dropped. Then as suddenly as he had arisen he dropped back out of sight into his chair.

It was Daniels.

The Skip In Dundreary's Gait.

My father each year copied out his own, prompt books, or had them copied, and then wrote in his most recent additions. I have many such prompt books with most minute notes and directions.

When I produced "Our American Cousin," nearly thirty years after his death, these manuscripts were so perfect that I had no difficulty in recalling every movement of all the characters. My father's genius was indeed the genius of infinite pains. I have heard him relate that the little skip he used in his gait in Dundreary originated simply from his habit of trying to keep in step with my mother as they walked up and down at the back of the stage arranging their lines. The skip and the stutter and other business grew and grew from performance to performance.

As Jefferson says in his "Life," the character of Dundreary gradually pushed all the other characters out of the play.—From "My Remembrances," by Edward H. Sothern, in Scribner's Magazine.

THREE WORK TRAINS BEGIN OPERATIONS

Usual Spring Track Repairing on Local Soo Winnipeg Division Results in More Activities.

Hundreds of Carloads of Sand Pass Through This City From Anita Enroute to Winger.

The usual May work of repairing the tracks of the Soo Winnipeg division has caused three work train crews to be put to work the latter part of last week. The demand for additional crews came as good news to railroad men in this city, many of whom have not worked, except at irregular intervals, since the winter months. Each crew is composed of an engineer and fireman in the cab, a conductor, two brakemen and a large number of workmen, giving employment to approximately seventy-five men.

Hundreds of carloads of sand taken from the sand pits at Anita are passing through Thief River Falls daily to Detroit and Winger, where washouts occurred during the spring flood. At the latter place a great deal of sand is being used at the bridge. Just how long the trains will be in service in this work is unknown, but it is safe to say it will take a good period of time to gravel the entire division.

The large steam shovel and unloading apparatus passed through the latter part of the week for Anita, where it is used in loading cars.

Houfek Resigns.—John Houfek, who has been employed at the Soo round house during the winter months has resigned and is now in the employ of the Northwestern garage.

Resigns Position.—Charles Anderson, who has held a position at the Soo round house as boiler maker, has resigned his position. He expects to engage in some other vocation during the summer months.

Goes to Convention.—I. G. Lane, Soo Line brakeman, left last Thursday evening for Detroit, Mich., to attend the first triennial convention of railroad trainmen. Mr. Lane represented the local Wheatline lodge No. 436, having been elected to make the trip at a recent meeting. Mrs. Lane left for Easton, Ill., the same evening to enjoy a visit at the home of her parents while Mr. Lane attended the convention. Mr. Lane will join his wife in Illinois later on and the two will return to Thief River Falls. They will be gone for about two months.

Thompson Quits.— A. Thompson, who has been employed at the Soo round house as machinist helper, has resigned his position.

Anderson Returns.—A. O. Anderson, car inspector at the Soo yards, has returned to work after an illness of a month's duration.

Myrom to Minneapolis.—Nels Myrom, section foreman for the Soo line, has left for Minneapolis, being transferred to that place to spend several months surfacing.

Sunday at Home.—Morris Robbecke, employed in the Soo freight depot at Adams, N. D., arrived in Thief River Falls last Saturday evening to spend Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. A. Robbecke, 237 Kendall avenue north. He returned Monday morning over the Wheatline passenger to resume his duties.

Broberg Arrives.—Al Broberg, who had charge of the night switching crew in the Soo yards during the rush last fall, arrived in Thief River Falls the latter part of last week from Superior, where he had been working. He is now employed with the day switching crew.

Plummer Agent Here.— G. A. Kreuger, Soo agent at Plummer, spent a few hours in Thief River Falls last Saturday evening on a business trip, coming up on the Duluth local and returning on the Winnipeg flyer. He was accompanied by his wife.

Helquist To St. Paul.— Soo Line Fireman C. E. Helquist left Sunday evening for St. Paul, where he spent the fore part of the week on a combined business and pleasure trip. Helquist has been firing on 109 and 110 of late.

"Joe" Returns.—"Joe" Zovoral, Soo Line brakeman, returned the first of the week from Superior, Wisconsin, to work at this division of the line.

Mishaels in City.—Superintendent J. R Michaels, who formerly had charge of the Winnipeg division of the Soo Line, residing in Thief River Falls, and who is now superintendent of the Superior division, had his private car attached to the Duluth local on Monday evening, after spending the day on the Duluth line on a tour of inspection. Mr. Michaels spent several hours circulating among his many railroad friends here and left Tuesday morning again for Superior.

SOO EMPLOYEE GOES TO SOUTH AMERICA

Amund Hoveland, Store Keeper, at Round House, Will Spend Next 3 Months on Extended trip.

Will Write Weekly Letter to Times To be Published in "Flying Switch" Department.

For the next three months or so Amund Hoveland, store room keeper at the Soo Line round house will probably be cruising along the coast of Central and South America, viewing the wonders of the Andes mountains, trudging the streets of Buenos Ayres, taking a trip up the Amazon and La Platte rivers, and sympathizing with his railroad friends at Thief River Falls, busy "up to the neck" with work. Tuesday evening Mr. Hoveland left on the flyer for his vacation going by way of Minneapolis to Chicago thence to Louisville, Memphis to New Orleans and Mobile, visiting all these places for a few days on the trip. From New Orleans he will board a steamer going to Collon, Panama, to view the wonders of the Panama canal, the largest and most wonderful piece of engineering work finished. From Colon he will cruise along the coast of South America, stopping off at Valpriso, Chile. From this point he will take the trans-Andcan railway to Buenos Ayres, Argentina, stopping off at Rio de Janero, Brazil for a time.

The Times made arrangements with Mr. Hoveland to have a weekly letter written and it will be published in the railroad section of this paper. He left Chicago yesterday for the south and a review of the trip so far will be published next.

During Mr. Hoveland's absence Ingvold Fossum, local store clerk, will have charge of the business at the store room and Eugene Hance will take Fossum's place.

Amory On Trip.—H. K. Amory, who was formerly employed at this division point as conductor on the north end freight run, and who is now holding a run for the Soo Line out of Whitetail, Montana, spent the latter part of last week in Thief River Falls circulating among his many railroad friends. He left Saturday morning for Holt to look over his farm near that place.

"Safety First" To Meet.—A regular meeting of the "Safety First" society will be held at the Soo depot next Monday evening. Trainmaster H. D. Keene presiding. All members are requested to be present.

O'Brien Back.—Timothy O'Brien carpenter at the Soo repair yards, returned to work the latter part of last week after an illness of six weeks duration.

Johnson On Visit.—Joe Johnson, clerk at the office of Assistant Master Mechanic J. W. Hendry, returned Tuesday morning from his home near Minneapolis, after a pleasant visit at the home of his parents. He left on Friday of last week.

Thief Steals Camera.—A valuable camera, the property of an elderly woman, was stolen from the ladies waiting room at the Soo depot last Friday evening about six o'clock by some unknown person. The woman, who was waiting for an evening train, left for a hotel at supper time, leaving the camera in the room. On her return it had completely vanished.

Scale Re-set.—The work of re-setting the railroad scale near the Soo depot was completed the latter part of last week by P. Swenson of St. Paul, who has been in the employ of the Soo for a number of years. The scale was condemned by the state inspector on a trip to Thief River Falls recently, and necessitated the installing of eight new rods, which had been worn out. Mr. Swenson, who had charge of the work is well known to railroaders in this city, having built the first depot here and has also superintended the construction of the round house.

Larson Back.—Ed Larson, Soo Line fireman, has returned from Roseau, after a visit with his parents for a short time. He is now firing on 109-110 between Glenwood and Mahnomen.

Booren To Minneapolis.— Wm. Booren, Soo Line engineer, took his departure last Sunday evening for Minneapolis, being sent there as a delegate from the district to the general committee to confer with officials as to ways and means of improving the working condition of railroad men.

Alnes On Vacation.—Arthur Alnes, express agent at the Soo depot, tokk his departure last Saturday evening for a thirty-day vacation from his duties. His first stop will be at the Twin Cities, where he will visit with friends for a short time, after which he will leave for Chicago, Ill., and Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich. From Michigan he will go to Minot, N. D., to spend a week with friends and thence back to this city. Floyd Carpenter, who has been acting as night ticket agent, has been transferred to the express position during Alnes' vacation, and Oscar Paulson, who has been employed at the freight depot is filling the position of night ticket agent.

Checking Up.—A. E. Benn, traveling auditor for the Great Northern, spent the fore part of the week in Thief River Falls checking up the local G. N. station. He hails from a Montana division of the Great Northern.

Baggageman Returns.—C. M. Johnson, night baggageman at the Soo depot, returned Sunday morning from his annual thirty day vacation. Mr. Johnson visited at Salt Lake City, Utah, and several other places in the west. He returned to resume his duties Monday evening.

Lodge Organizer Here.— H. C. Glick of Chicago, organizer of railroad lodges, spent the fore part of the week in Thief River Falls endeavoring to organize a Brotherhood of Railroad Employees. Unfortunately his plans did not materialize for the reason there were not a sufficient number of employees who wished to join at this time. Mr. Glick will return at a later date.

Rural School Notes

The schools of the county are rapidly coming to a close; only the class "A" schools, those having an eight months' term are now in session and excepting a few beginning late in the spring.

Teachers will remember that the summer school begins at the Northwestern Agricultural college at Crookston on June 12th. Credits are given for subjects required for First grade certificates. I would urge all teachers to attend.

The clerks of class "A" or "B" schools must be sure to have every requirement for state aid, including library books and report on school census. Are anyone or both of these reports wanted for your district? Investigate and see.

The result of the State High School Board examinations for March are sent out this week. The result is satisfactory as shown by the list of pupils who passed as given below.

The May examination will be held May 26, 29, 31 and June 1.

Many pupils have passed enough credits to graduate from the common school course. The following are the old group of subjects: Group I, arithmetic, geography, grammar, American history. Group II, civics, composition, physiology, hygiene and spelling.

At least four subjects must be mastered. These four may include (a) all subjects in group I, or (b) grammar and any other two subjects in group I and any one subject in group II, or (c) composition, and any three subjects in Group I. Grammar or composition, or both should be included in any group.

It should be the aim of every School Board to plan for the elementary education of the pupils in the respective schools until the fifteenth and sixteenth year of the individual pupil. Pupils should then be graduated at such ages. If, however, a pupil in the rural school does pass a number of the high school board examinations so as to graduate, recognition will be taken of the fact at this office and a diploma issued. Such pupil should not be less than fourteen years of age and it should be his ambition to enter some higher or advanced course of study afforded by the state high school course or the agricultural course at the high school or agricultural college. It should be in the plans of the parents to help their children in seeking such higher education and by mutual co-operation of the parents and superintendent of our high school or superintendent of the agricultural college at Crookston. Some plan, I am sure, can be developed whereby the young man or young woman can continue and put a finishing touch on his or her practical education.

Let me ask all rural school pupils having passed the state high school board examinations to send their certificates to this office for record. State your full name, age, number of school district and address. Your county superintendent wishes to come in touch with all the pupils who may want to graduate this year. Please do this at once.

The following are the names of pupils, with their teachers, who passed the March examinations:

Russell M. Lincoln, son of Secretary Fred T. Lincoln of the Commercial club, arrived on Tuesday evening and will visit here during his school vacation. The young man is attending Culver Millitary academy in Indiana, and this is his first trip into this section. He had been led to believe that the Indian was still very much in evidence in Northern Minnesota and came prepared to study the habits of the Red Man at close range. Mr. Lincoln states people in the central states would be surprised to find a city of such pretensions in this neighborhood, very few of them having even the remotest idea of the progress the Northwest has made during the past few years. Our schools compare very favorably with those of the states to the east and south, according to the visitor, and in some respects the people here are ahead of those in the older communities.

P. J. Michaels, freight conductor on the Soo, returned today from a ten days' visit into the Red Lake country. He was accompanied on the journey by his wife and daughter, making the trip by launch.

Landlord Julien Provencher of the Hotel Evelyn, announces that hereafter the midday meal on Sunday will be after the order of a luncheon and that a regular table de hote dinner will be served at six o'clock. This change has been made at the request of many patrons of the hotel who prefer the principal meal of the day at a later hour than is customary at present. These dinners will be a regular feature during the summer months. Morck's orchestra has been engaged to furnish music every Sunday during the season and all other appointments will be first-class in every respect. The regular dinner price will hereafter be 75 cents.—Adv.

Supt. Peterson Improving.

Leonard Peterson, superintendent of the city water and light department, who has been confined to his home at 411 LaBree avenue north with a serious attack of bronchitis for the past week, is on the road to recovery. Mr. Peterson contracted a cold the night part of the Kretschmar dam went out and it gradually developed into bronchitis. Mr. Peterson was considered to be in a dangerous condition the fore part of the week, but is to-day much improved. It will probably be several weeks before he will be able to resume his duties. The news is being received with much gratification.

Notice.

On June 1st a penalty of 10 per cent is added to all unpaid Real Estate Tax, but in case one-half the amount of the tax on any real estate shall be paid before June 1st of each year then no penalty is added, providing that the remaining half of said tax shall be paid before the 1st day of November of each year, if said remaining one-half of said tax is not paid before November 1st of each year, then a penalty of 10 per cent is added to the one-half of said tax remaining unpaid. Taxes become delinquent on the 1st day of January next, when an additional penalty of 5 per cent is added. Tax sales take place on the second Monday of May following and the amount of sale draws interest at the rate of one per cent a month until redeemed. If not redeemed within three years from the date of sale, all lands become the absolute property of the state or purchaser.

Respectfully,
THEO. H. LIDEN,
My-25. County Treasurer.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Thief River Falls people. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. Regulation of Prices

HALVOR STEENERSON
Congressman, Ninth Minnesota District, and candidate for re-nomination at primaries June 19, 1916.

Theo. Roosevelt has said that the only alternative of government ownership is regulation of prices.

Halvor Steenerson helped to frame the first law regulating railroad rates, when a state senator in 1884. Through his victory in the "Steenerson Grain Rate Case" a few years later, the right of the state to regulate rates was established, and all railroad rate legislation in the country is based on that decision. He believes the power of congress extends to regulation of prices of natural commodities, the supply of which has fallen into the control of monopolies, and at present is engaged in an attempt to have the rule applied to gasoline. If successful, it is likely to be extended to cover all necessities so situated that the supply has been "cornered" and the people oppressed by excessive prices.

He has always favored reasonable preparedness, and supported President Roosevelt's two battleships per year program, but is opposed to the "army of a million and biggest navy on earth" idea.

Halvor Steenerson is a firm believer in and able advocate of the principles of the Republican party. He is a man of independence. He is not a tool of any political ring or boss and does not seek to ride into office on the coat tails of someone else, but does his own thinking and stands on his own feet.

He desires to continue representing the Ninth District in congress and will appreciate your vote at the primary election on June19th.

Judicial Ditch Number 42, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota.

Clerk of Court's Notice of Hearing on Petition, Engineer's Report and Viewer's Report in The Matter of Judicial Ditch Number 42.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
SS.
Pennington County.

District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

In the matter of the petition of Soren C. Jensen and others for a public drainage ditch in the Counties of Pennington and Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42).

Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, praying for the construction of a public drainage ditch, designated and numbered by the Clerk of said District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, as Judicial Ditch forty two (42) and that the preliminary hearing provided by law before the Judge of the District Court has been had thereon and the said Judge appointed a Civil Engineer to make a survey of the route of said ditch and to perform such other duties in relation thereto as are provided by law, and that the said engineer duly made his report thereon and filed the same in the office of the Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, Minnesota, and that the said Judge of the District Court duly appointed viewers to assess damages and benefits in the matter of said ditch and to perform all other duties in relation thereto as provided by law, and that the said viewers have completed their work and have filed their report in the office of said Clerk; and that as appears by the report of the Engineer hereinbefore mentioned, the starting point, route and termini of said ditch designated as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42), including a description of the land over which the same passes is as follows, viz:

Said ditch is located within Township One Hundred Fifty-two (152), N., Range Forty One (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota, and is described as follows:

Commencing at a point Twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty two (22) and twenty three (23) and twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) said town, so as to provide an additional outlet for Judicial Ditch No. 1, Red Lake and Pennington Counties, thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the section line between sections twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty six (26), twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) and thirty five (35), thence west parallel with and twenty (20) feet north of the section line between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the quarter corner between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34), thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the quarter line a distance of nine hundred and five (905) feet, at which point said ditch terminates and has its outlet in the Clearwater river.

And the said engineer's report shows the dimensions of said ditch and the particular and exact location thereof, and the names of the owners of the lands and the names of the municipal corporations and other corporations that will be effected by the construction of said ditch as the same appears in the report of the viewers hereinbefore mentioned, are as follows, towit:

MICHELIN
have a world-wide reputation for durability for the following reasons:

1st: Michelin Red-Rubber Tubes are compounded of certain quality-giving ingredients which prevent them from becoming brittle or porous and which preserve their velvety softness indefinitely.

2nd: Michelin Tubes are not simply pieces of straight tubing with their ends cemented, but are formed on a ring mandrel to exactly the circular shape of the inside of the casing itself and consequently fit perfectly.

SOME farmers look at this Silo proposition in the wrong way.

Some look upon it as a tremendous, risky proposition. As an affair which should be discussed long and earnestly before investing.

The Silo is the most practical thing that ever happened. Its not a gold brick, its a gold mine which every farmer can have without paying a cent in advance.

The one thing to do is to get one—not to just talk about getting one.

There is one way you can lose money on Silos, and that is by being without one.

Order yours before June 15th. Prices on our two wall Silo will advance 20 per cent at that time.

MIDDLE RIVER

W. C. Skeels of Rollis was in town last Monday.

Miss Marie Phillipson, who has been teaching school near Foldahl, returned home last Friday to spend her vacation at the home of her parentsfi Mr. and Mrs. John Phillipson.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis and daughter, Mildred, left last Saturday for Kansas City where they will make their home in the future. A large crowd of their friends were at the depot to bid them goodbye.

A. C. Kvennes and family went to Thief River Falls Saturday by rail and returned late Sunday evening in their car which had been left there the week previous.

The Presbyterian church interior has been improved in looks by being re-papered.

Dr. Walter and family accompanied by Mrs. Notton Johnson, who is Mrs. Walter's sister, arrived here Saturday afternoon in the Doctor's new car. He started out from the cities Thursday at noon and considering the present condition of the roads, made good time. He said that he did not hurry any at that as he did not start out until late every morning.

Bills are out announcing a dance to be held in the Woodmen hall next Saturday evening. It has been a long time since there has been a public dance here and without doubt there will be a large crowd present.

John Sorlum of Holt, was a Middle River visitor between trains Monday.

John Olson's house is to be quite large. The dimensions are 24x40 and is to be built in cottage style.

The frame of Knut Nelson's house is being pushed up and work is progressing very rapidly. It is to be two stories high and apparently will be a very ample roomed house.

Elmer Swenson, who some time ago was bookkeeper at the St. Hilaire Lumber yard here, came over from Halock in his car to attend the dedication exercises held here last Friday. While here he informed his friends that he had accepted a position in Winnipeg, and that he would leave for that place next week.

Misses Bakke of Thief River Falls came to Middle River last Friday to take in the school doings and remained until Saturday afternoon as the guest of Mrs. Hjertos.

There will be no preaching service in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. There will be a special sermon to the graduating class of the Middle River schools in the evening.

Emil Peterson informs us that he has received sufficient encouragement in the project of installing an electric light plant in this place to insure the immediate installment of the same. Hans Olson of Warren is going to help him in getting the plant into running order. Hence Middle River will have another improvement.

Colonel Osbourn showed up here agin on Tuesday. He has been spending the winter in California and when he got off the train here he said he gussed he had come a month to early. He said that his health is better now than it has been for several years.

There has been quite a serious time over the bursting of the pressure tank at the school house as it has not been successfully welded as yet.

Dedication Exercises a Great Success.

The dedication exercises held here last Friday were a great success in spite of the disagreeable weather.

Prof. Hay of Thief River Falls was the first speaker on the program as he was forced to leave on the afternoon train. Mr. Hay entertained the audience in his usual delightful manner and brought out some interesting points on the development of the country around this place. A few minutes before three o'clock Prof. Hay had to leave, and on account of the threatening aspect of the weather the crowd adjourned to the high school auditorium and the speeches were resumed.

C. C. Swain addressed the audience next and also praised the people of the community for their splendid work in erecting such a fine building and maintaining such an excellent school. He gave some very interesting statistics and also showed the value of co-operation. The next address was delivered by Ex-governor Eberhart who also offered praises and told of the value of co-operation in educational affairs.

The exhibits of the school were eye-openers to some of the people who had not seen any of them before and without doubt were as good as any that could be exhibited from a larger school. The manual training exhibit was good although some of the pieces were not entirely completed. In fact all the exhibits showed the mark of good teaching and careful workmanship on the part of the pupils.

This was the second exhibit that has been held this season and was the last of the school year.

Prof. Johnson informs us that June the first the school will give a program, that day being the last day of school.

YOU CAN ALMOST TALK TO HER —THIS 3400 r. p. m. CHALMERS

They're buying motor cars today as they're hiring men—on ability.

Blue eyes, brown hair, a ragged jaw, mean something —but not so much as they used to.

They're seeking ability. And that is not always measured in stature, weight and reach.

Likewise in a car. They look her over, learn her wheelbase, note the tire sizes, ask the bore and stroke of the engine and then—

They make her perform.

They make her hit the trail, they roll her up the stiffest hill. They let her out on the straightaway, and they make her accelerate at slow speeds.

It's the only way to judge a car. And we're particularly glad, because we have in the 3400 r.p.m. Chalmers a car that answers every human wish.

You can almost talk to this animal. You can lead her anywhere. We know of no one who has ever called on her for too much, nor asked of her anything she couldn't deliver.

She's like a young ballplayer who keeps driving 'em over the right-field fence.

She's there. And the reason is her magnificent 3400 r. p. m. engine. When history in our business is written, 3400 r. p. m. will occupy a thick chapter.

Simply because at the lowest speeds she saves her energy, turns up only 500 r. p. m. at 10 miles an hour, and 1000 r. p. m. at 20 miles an hour.

Thus using only 18 per cent of her power at such speeds and saving 62 to 80 per cent for winding, hilly roads, bad turns, and on occasions when a little extra power gives you possession of the road.

One ride of five miles behind the wheel and you'll own it.

Ask your dealer about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Strengthened by Thief River Falls Experiences.

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Thief River Falls people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Thief River Falls people:

Mrs. George Williams, 412 Main Ave. N., Thief River Falls, says: "I think highly of Doan's kidney Pills and have all reason to, as the cure they made in my case has been permanent. It is a little over four years ago that I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I was bad off with my kidneys and back and wasn't able to work for a whole summer. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

NELSON INDORSEMENT FOR A. G. ANDERSON

By George F. Authier.

(From Minneapolis Tribune).

Washington, May 20—(Special).—Senator Knute Nelson yesterday commented on the personality of A. G. Anderson, candidate for Congress in the Ninth district. Senator Nelson unhesitatingly put his O. K. on Mr. Anderson. The phase in Mr. Anderson's character that appears to appeal to Senator Nelson most is his genuine Americanism.

"I have known Mr. Anderson," said Senator Nelson, "ever since he came from Iowa many years ago, and have always found him to be an honest, trustworthy, and reliable man, both in business and in politics. He is a thorough-going Republican and possessed of a genuine spirit of true Americanism, having the welfare of our common country uppermost and foremost in his heart. He always has taken a great interest in public affairs. I frequently, in times past have consulted him on important public questions and have found that his diagnosis and conclusions were fair, just and sound."

To the Voters of Pennington County.

I announce myself as a candidate for the office of Clerk of Court in Pennington County at the primary election to be held June 19th, and respectfully solicit your support.

Herman A. Ohm.

To the voters of Pennington County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Clerk of the District Court for Pennington county. I wish at this time to pledge to the voters of Pennington county that if I am nominated and elected, I will give the office my undivided attention, and I will serve the public to the best of my ability in a strictly impartial manner. In the accounting department as a member of the Board of Audit, in the Naturalization department, in fact in all of the different duties of the Clerk, I feel better prepared and able to give more efficient service than in the past.

Thanking the voters for past favors, and hoping for your continued support if you deem me worthy, I remain

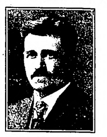
Respectfully yours,
Harry E. Ives.

Announcement.

John A. Duffy, candidate for Representative, 65th Legislative district. Your vote and support solicited.

Announcement.

I hereby wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for Clerk of Court at the Primaries June 19th. Your vote and support solicited.



Respectfully
Adolph Eklund.

POWER QUESTION IS VITAL TOPIC

Representative Citizens Meet at Call of Mayor to Devise Means Looking Toward Solution.

SHALL DAM BE ACQUIRED?

If This is Not Done, Provision Must be Made For Securing Greater Engine Power Before Short Days of Winter.

The power plant of the electric light station will prove inadequate to meet the demands made upon it when the shorter days of fall and winter arrive, and something will have to be done about it.

This was the opinion arrived at on Tuesday evening when a score of prominent citizens met at the council room in the Auditorium to discuss this important question and to take the first steps necessary to safeguard the people against the loss and inconvenience sure to follow a failure to secure sufficient illumination at a time when the demand upon the plant is at its greatest.

Mayor F. H. Gambell presided, and after stating the purpose for which those present had been called together, said he hoped that all would lay aside personal prejudices and work for the good of the city. He then asked for the opinions of those present on the matter in hand.

Engineer Charles Krause of the light plant, stated that the internal combustion engines now in use were sufficient to supply the needed power at present, but that when the heavier load of winter was attached they would fall far short. He was of the opinion that later in the season it would be necessary to cut off the street lights in order to supply the stores with the required illumination.

Offer to Sell Dam.

C. W. Ackerman, president of the council, stated that the owners of the Kretzschmar dam had made a proposition offering to sell that property to the city for $30.000 as it now stands. No conclusion had ever been reached in the matter and he was glad of an opportunity to hear what the business men of the city had to say about it.

The question was gone over at some length by those present, it developing during the discussion that the oil engines in use since the dam was put out of commission by the ice this spring are consuming in the neighborhood of 250 gallons of fuel per day. A tank car of the oil will thus last about 40 days and costs about $375. It was the opinion of those who were best acquainted with the situation that double this amount would be required along about the holidays.

A Saving of $5,000.

It was costing the people of the city $21,000 per year for the power secured from the dam. which is a privately owned enterprise, the saving being thus in the neighborhood of $5,000 per year when the water power is available. It was the opinion generally expressed that this cost would be greatly reduced if the city owned the dam.

This being only a meeting for the airing of opinions, nothing definite was decided upon. The mayor was directed to appoint a committee of five for the purpose of investigating just what condition the dam is in, its legal status, what the prospects are for regulating works being established at Red Lake, and the cost and value of similar dams located elsewhere. It was deemed advisable not to attempt anything definite until the people generally have had time to look into the matter thoroughly and understand fully the benefits finally accruing to the city through the ownership of all the power-supplying equipment.

As members of this committee the mayor appointed the following: T. L. Melgaard, H. S. Dahlen, T. P. Hamre, Robert McGinn and W. W. Prichard, Sr. These men have all long been residents of Thief River Falls, are property owners and can be depended on to give their best efforts toward discovering just what it is desired to know and making the recommendations that in their judgment will best solve the problem.

A Change of Feeling.

Although the proposition to purchase the dam property was voted down about two years ago, there has been a decided change in sentiment since that time, and it is now generally admitted that a mistake was made. There is no question but that the matter is receiving a great deal of thoughtful attention, and as everyone seems to be honestly trying to reach the solution best for the future of the city there is no doubt but that a satisfactory way out of the difficulty will be found.

If something is not done with the dam before the heavy loads of the winter months are saddled onto the equipment it will be necessary to purchase another engine. The cost of this alone would go quite a distance toward meeting the price asked for the dam property, and then in all likelihood it would only meet the requirements for a few years. It would seem that the acquirement of the dam is the first thing to be aimed at—at least that seemed to be the opinion of those present at the meeting on Tuesday evening.

Legislative Candidate Here.

Edward L. Rydeen, candidate for the nomination of representative from the Sixty-third district, was in the city today looking the situation over. Mr. Rydeen has a somewhat elaborate platform upon which he is making a bid for the support of his fellow-citizens, and strikes one as being a sincere, well-meaning man. Mr. Rydeen was formerly a soldier in the regular army of the United States and has certificates from his former superiors testifying to his high character. He has many friends in his home county of Clearwater and may prove the surprising factor in a four-cornered race.

STARTS SATURDAY FOR CONVENTION

Martin Widsten Will Leave Steenerson Campaign in Charge of S. M. Richter.

Martin Widsten, chairman of the committee having charge of the campaign of Conrgessman Halvor Steenerson, will leave on Saturday for Chicago, where he goes as a delegate to the Republican national convention. The delegation will leave St. Paul Sunday evening, and he is a foolish man who will predict when they may return.

Mr. Widsten has been making his headquarters in Thief River Falls since the campaign opened and will continue his office here until after the primaries. Because of the fact that Congressman Steenerson may find it impossible to get away from Washington, considerable more work than usual falls to the lot of the campaign manager, and Mr. Widsten has decided not to leave without someone here to represent him. S. M. Richter of Ottertail county, publisher of the Deer Creek Mirror, will have charge of the office during the absence of Mr. Widsten, and he is experienced in the work, everything will progress as before.

Mr. Widsten was elected as a Cummins delegate, but in common with most people does not expect the Iowa senator to be the final choice. Cummins will, however, have a total of about 125 votes on the first ballot, which is more than is assured to any other candidate. These delegates represent the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Montana. Besides these he will get the North Dakota vote on the second ballot. the first being pledged to Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin.

Mr. Widsten does not attempt to predict who the nominee will be. Personally he favors Hughes, but believes that Roosevelt is a strong possibility. He anticipates that there may be some lively times before the final adjournment.

AUTO RACES WILL BE A BIG FEATURE

Race Track at Fair Grounds Will be Converted Into Speedway For Monster Celebration.

There will be an unusual number of new features at the big Fourth of July celebration to be held in Thief River Falls this year, and one of the biggest and most interesting of these will be an auto race. Because of the track conditions it is probable that none but the lighter cars will be entered, but even these will furnish quite a lot of excitement. A purse of $100 will be hung up for the winner of the event. In addition to the above there will be a motor-cycle race which will be a free-for-all event and is expected to bring out all the fast machines and expert riders in the neighborhood.

Fireworks there will be in plenty. These will probably be set off on the river bank, although this has not yet been definitely decided upon. Manager C. A. Nason is using his best endeavors to find a baseball team worthy of the efforts of the Thief River Falls team for the afternoon of the big holiday, and he is certain to find something that will put up a good fight.

The speaker for the day has not yet been selected, but Secretary Lincoln of the Commercial club states that there are a number in contemplation and that this part of the program will by no means be slighted.

Make arrangements to be in this city on the Fourth.

CLASS OF 1916 PASSES TONIGHT

"He Conquers Who Conquers Himself," is Motto Chosen by the Class of 1916.

ADDRESS BY DR. J. PARSON

Seventy-one Eighth Graders Received Diplomas on Monday Evening. Excellent Program Rendered Before Large Audience.

Fifty young men and women, who compose the 1916 graduating class of the Thief River Falls high school will be awarded their diplomas this evening at the Auditorium, and will thereafter enter the ranks of the alumni—the ever increasing family of the local institution. Many of the young men and women who will receive their diplomas, marking the completion of twelve years of hard and conscientious work, will continue their studies in advanced colleges or other schools while again others will step out into the world and face life's battles.

The following is the program for this evening:

"Legend of Bells" from Chimes of Normandy—High School Chorus.

Invocation.

Salutatory—Mary Von Prichard.

Address—Dr. James Parsons.

Trio, "La Cinquintaine"—Myrtle Berg, Dorothy Bottleson, Nora Holmes.

Valedictory—Milton G. Weeks.

Song, "Alma Mater"—Class 1916.

Benediction.

On Sunday evening the Baccalaureate sermon was preached at the Auditorium by Rev. A. A. Larson, pastor of the Swedish Evangelical church. A full account of the sermon appears on page seven.

Last evening, Wednesday, May 31, at the Lincoln assembly room occurred the class day exercises of the class of '16. It was attended by the parents, relatives and friends of the graduates only, and admission was gained by a ticket. The assembly room was crowded, however, by the large number who had gathered to listen to the interesting program which had been prepared. All the musical numbers were especially well rendered and the class prophecy by Miss Anna Tanem and the class will by Misses Agnes Elg and Agnes Aubol were exceptionally well written. The 1916 class memorial was presented to the Board of Education at the close of the program, the presentation being made by 'Rhuben Aga, president of the class, Dr. O. F. Mellby making the acceptance. The memorial this year is a piece of bronze with Lincoln's Gettysburg speech inscribed upon it.

On Monday evening of this week seventy-one eighth graders were awarded their diplomas after eight years of work, and entitles them to attend any high school in the United States or Canada. Their program was interesting and pleasing and some of the numbers were big surprises to all those who attended. The class' history by Clarence Vevea was well written and rendered in an excellent manner. The recitations and musical numbers given are deserving of much commendation. A feature of the program was the discussion of several subjects, which would have done credit to a high school graduating class, and the manner in which they handled their parts was highly gratifying. "The Alaskan Government Railway" by Albert Erickson was handled well, as was "The Wireless" by John Melgaard. Both topics showed a large amount of study and both proved big surprises to the audience. The third of the series of orations was made by Leland Schuster, who discussed "Our Diplomatic and Consular Service." The program was closed when Supt. J. H. Hay presented next year's Freshman class with diplomas.

RAID MADE BY POLICE DISCLOSES MUCH LIQUOR

Armed with a search warrant Chief of Police O. E. Berge, assisted by Patrolman E. O. Erickson, raided the residence and cigar factory of Howard Gesell last Friday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 4 p. m., making a "killing" of 12 quarts of whiskey, 30 empty pint whiskey bottles, 2 empty quart bottles and 2 empty jugs, the latter articles being found outside the back door. Gesell was taken to Municipal court in hand cuffs, where he faced a charge of keeping an unlicensed drinking place and was bound over to await action by the grand jury the 26th of this month on $200 bonds, which he immediately furnished.

VISITING NURSE SUBMITS REPORT

Finds That Average Conditions Prevail in Homes and Schools of Thief River Falls.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE NOTED

Already the Result of the Good Work Done by Miss Grenager is Evidenced by the Greater Attention of Parents.

Miss Dagny Grenager, of Minneapolis, visiting nurse sent out by the Minnesota Public Health association, came to Pennington county as reward for the efforts of local ladies in the sale of Red Cross Seals, this county having stood near the head of the list in number of seals sold during the Christmas season of 1915.

Her first official visit was to the high school on April 27, when she addressed the students in the Lincoln assembly room. Later addresses of notable interest were given before the Federation of Women's clubs at its recent meeting, the Campfire Girls, and before the Farmers club three miles east of the city.

She has visited Goodridge and Silverton, and is this week completing a visit to St. Hilaire, which concludes her work in this county.

Many Have Minor Defects.

During her stay here she visited all the school rooms in the city, and examined 1,242 pupils. Of that number, 872 were found defective, the defects being divided as follows: Eyes, 178; Ears, 62; Adenoids, 84; Enlarged Tonsils, 324; Skin, 26; Teeth, 600; Enlarged Thyroids (Goitre), 24; of which 20 were in the high school.

She also visited many homes in this city where it was suspected tuberculosis existed, that being the main object of her visit here. She found the average conditions prevailing.

Conditions in the county were not of the best, although they were not below the northern Minnesota average. Southern Minnesota conditions are considerably better than in Northern Minnesota, due to the fact that the district is much older in point of settlement. Many improvements have already been noticed, especially in this city, where parents are making an effort to correct the defects in their children. Many of the defectives have commenced the use of glasses, and innumerable children have commenced treatment of their teeth. A supreme effort will be made by the ladies in charge of the local campaign, to continue the work started by Miss Grenager, and a meeting of the Woman's club will be held Friday to discuss these matters.

Plans for Next Year.

Miss Grenager will leave this week for Crookston where she will work for a time out of the recently dedicated tuberculosis sanitarium, constructed in that city jointly by Polk and Norman counties. Plans are being made for a health campaing here next year, and it is expected that with the proper co-operation on the part of the press of the county and the public in general, the health conditions will be greatly improved. Miss Grenager leaves many helpful hints among the many other benefits derived from her visit.

HARDWARE CONCERN IS BRANCHING OUT

The Spink Company Adds New Partner and Takes Over O. N. Olson Stock.

The Spink Hardware company has this week taken over the hardware stock of O. N. Olson and will dispose of this at its present location. It is the intention later to use the building now occupied by the Spink company as the regular retail store and to convert the old Olson quarters into a salesroom for farm implements and machinery, of which a full line will be carried.

At the same time the rival retail store was purchased a business partner was added by Mr. Spink in the person of A. L. Lawson. This gentleman has resided in Thief River Falls for a long time and has a business acquaintance which will be a great help in his new venture.

The retail store will be enlarged and improved in order to take care of the larger stock made necessary by the removal of Mr. Olson from the hardware field, while the devoting of the old store of the latter to machinery will give the new concern one of the largest and best warehouses in this section.

The Spink company has enjoyed an excellent business since coming to Thief River Falls and the new arrangement will greatly increase this.

Taken to Warren.

Leonard Peterson, superintendent of the city water and light department, was taken to Warren Monday morning to receive medical treatment. A report coming here this afternoon stated that Mr. Peterson was resting and felt much improved over his condition during the latter part of last week. Mrs. Peterson accompanied her husband on the trip to Warren on Monday, and her daughter, Miss Alice, who is spending the day at the bedside of her father, having gone over this morning.

Iverson in the City.

Samuel G. Iverson, formerly state auditor and an active candidate for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket, was in the city the first of the week. To state that he met many friends here would be useless, because there is not a spot in the state of Minnesota where he could go that he would not meet with a host of the best friends in the world. Mr. Iverson made a splendid auditor and would make a good governor. The fact that he will in all likelihood not be called upon this year does not in any way effect this proposition. He is optimistic, however, and says that his chances appear fully as good as those of his opponent.

HOSPITAL SITE IS ACCEPTED BY STATE

Located in Rocksbury Township, it is Regarded by Experts as One of Finest in State.

Dr. Longstreet Taylor, specialist connected with the state board of control, was in Thief River Falls last week to look over the site selected by the sanitorium commission of the three counties of Pennington, Marshall and Roseau. He expressed himself as much pleased with the location chosen, saying that it was one of the best situated spots for the purpose thus far selected by any of the counties of the state.

The plot, which is described as lot five of section four, is a short distance south of the city, and so situated that the Red Lake river makes a bend around its three sides. There are 20.65 acres in the piece, and the price paid was $5,000. Martin Bothun, from from whom the tract was purchased, has dedicated to the public the street leading to the sanitarium, and has named this thoroughfare Hopewell avenue. This connects with Oakland avenue south and makes a direct route from the city to the grounds.

Practically all the preliminary work has now been atended to and it is expected that building operations will commence in the near future.

STEENERSON MAY ATTEND MEETING OF TELELAGET

Congressman Will be at Thief River Falls on June 23-24 if Duties Permit.

Andrew Trovaton, chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the meeting of "Telelaget" in this city on June 23 and 24, has received word from Halvor Steenerson stating that the congressman will try and be present to make an address to the delegates. Mr. Steenerson states that he cannot at this time definitely promise, believeing that his duties at Washington has the first call upon him. There is no question but what the delegates would be higly pleased to have Mr. Steenerson here at that particular time, as he is one of the best examples of the men of Norwegian descent who have reached a high position in America.

In his letter to Mr. Trovaton the congressman also states that he is in hopes of getting the second homestead bill through at this session, but that the outlook is not particularly bright. He also adds that the rural credits bill was in conference at the time of writing and that he had great hopes of its passage.

Repairs to Roadbed

The Minnesota Northwestern Electric railway company has temporarily taken off the afternoon train on the run between Thief River Falls and Goodridge, and the business of this train will for the present be handled on the regular passenger schedule. This move was made necessary inorder to permit certain work being done to the road bed which is being gravelled and otherwise put in condition for the heavier traffic expected late in the season.

The business along this line has increased steadily since the close of winter, much of this being represented by the belongings of farmers moving into the section traversed by the road. Stock shipments are also steadily growing heavier and with the larger acreage put into general farm products this spring the late summer months will see the largest volume of business the line has ever experienced.

HOMAGE PAID HONORED DEAD

Fallen Heroes of the Blue and Gray Ranks Are Honored by Citizens and School Children.

ADDRESS BY E. M. STANTON

Auditorium Crowded to Its Capacity —Excellent Musical Numbers Rendered by Eighth Grade Chorus and Band.

> "I have one sentiment for the soldiers living and dead—cheers for the living and tears for the dead."
> Robert G. Ingersoll.

Appropriate and patriotic Memorial Day exercises were held at the Auditorium Tuesday morning and was attended by a large crowd of people, who wished to show that they realized the debt they owed to the men of 1861-1865. The city was ablaze with "Old Glory" displaying the wave of patriotism that is sweeping the nation from the rock-bound coasts of Maine to the Golden Gate in California. It was an occasion of more than ordinary importance.

The Memorial Day program, which was held in the Auditorium, opened with a selection by the band, entitled. "Meditation." It was rendered in a most pleasing manner and with a very marked amount of expression. Rev. G. O. Parish then pronounced the benediction. The next number on the morning's program was a vocal solo by Miss Dora Holmes, who sang Tosti's "Goodbye." The number was given in a most excellent style and received a hearty applause from the large audience.

Believes in Preparation.

Honorable E. M. Stanton, orator of the day, who has resided in this city for the past twenty-five years, needed little introduction before making the Memorial address, as he had made addresses on previous occasions of this kind. The speaker made a striking appearance and predicted that European nations would rise from the ashes into far greater and more beautiful nations. He reviewed several of the great conflicts telling the cause and lessons learned from each. Mr. Stanton also stated that he believed in adequate defense for the country to protect its rights. The address was, without a doubt, one of the best and finest of a number of addresses made by him at public gatherings.

The eighth grade chorus then favored the audience with a series of patriotic songs, and later "America" was sung by the audience standing. Rev. R. L. Barackman pronounced the benediction after the rendition of "America"

An Impressive Parade.

The parade then formed at the corner of Main avenue and second street, led by the Minnesota State Band of Thief River Falls. Approximately 500 children formed in line carrying flowers and flags and proceeded through the main business section of the city, after which the march was continued to the cemetery, where graves were decorated and two salutes were fired over the graves of the honored dead. The children, who in former years trudged the entire distance to the cemetery, were this year taken in automobiles from the corner of First street and LaBree avenue, to the cemetery and then home. Auto owners are to be highly commended for this move as it was without a doubt, appreciated by the little folks and also their parents.

These exercises will go down in history as among the most extensive Memorial day ceremonies ever held in this city; the successful observance of which is credited to the management of Mayor Gambell and the loyal co-operation of the Thief River Falls business men and citizens.

SALES COMPANY TAKES CHARGE OF BIG SALE

Joe Kramer, representing the Kelly Sales System of Minneapolis, will on Saturday take charge of the disposal of the stock at McGrail's Royal Blue Shoe Store. Mr. McGrail finds it necessary to convert this fine stock into money at once and has given the matter into the hands of this well-known sales concern for the purpose of getting quick results.

This stock of Selz Royal Blue shoes is one of the finest and most complete in Northern Minnesota, and at the prices quoted the stock will probably last long. Mr. Kramer is experienced in the work of moving merchandise lines speedily and as the goods here offered are of an exceptionally desirable character he does not expect to be but a short time in cleaning up the stock.

Has Treated Us Well

There should not be one single vote against Halvor Steenerson cast in the city of Thief River Falls. There will not be many such votes cast, but there should be none. The people of this city are under particular obligations for the manner in which the measures in which they are vitally interested have been handled by the present congressman. For instance, there is the bill providing for a survey of the Red Lake river. This will eventually lead to the straightening and deepening of that stream, thus making available for agriculture thousands of acres of the best land in the west. Occupants of this land will be within the territory served by the merchants and manufacturers of Thief River Falls, and their business will prove a large item.

Then there is the drainage project which Mr. Steenerson has in mind and which he will soon have in shape to introduce as a bill. This will be one of the most important development and reclamation undertakings in the history of the state,and will be of particular importance to the people of this city. Again there is the direct benefit which must accrue to the people of the entire section by reason of the bill just passed permitting the cutting of the timber on the Red Lake reservation. No one knows just yet what this will mean to Thief River Falls, but that it will prove a matter of vast importance no one doubts.

These are only a few of the enterprises in which Mr. Steenerson has interested himself, but each one of them concerns the people of this city directly. And none of them are of a pork barrel nature. Every item referred to will mean more farms, more wealth and prosperity in the years to come, and the money necessary to carry them out is but a bagetelle as compared with the amount which will eventually be returned.

Does anyone think that a new and untried man can go to Washington and improve on this? Has anything been left undone by Mr. Steenerson that can be possibly be done by an inexperienced man? Will a banker from the southern part of the district understand the needs of this section any better than does Mr. Steenerson, whose home is here? And what does Mr. Anderson offer to do in case of his election? His platform consists of a few generalities that are not even "glittering." He wants to go to Washington to "uphold American honor" and stand for "America first." All of which sounds well enough but does not mean much of anything. Northwestern interests would be liable to suffer while he was doing the upholding stunt and standing around for America.

The district needs an intensely practical man as its representative at the capitol, and now that it has such a man it is not at all likely the people will make a change just to satisfy the ambition of another—excellent citizen and worthy gentleman though he may be.

The Bemidji Herald, published by Paul F. Dehnel, has been absorbed by the other two papers of that city, the Sentinel and the Pioneer. The Herald was a Socialistic, anti-Catholic, pro-German publication of a kind that has no place in an enlightened and patriotic community, and its passing will be regretted by few. But even though the paper had been sane and sound it is doubtful if it could have survived. Two such excellent publications as the Sentinel and Pioneer are plenty for any town, and it is rather strange that a misguided propagandist with an immaginary mission should have been permitted to stay in a live community as long as Dehnel stayed in Bemidji.

Of course everyone expected that Frank B. Kellogg would receive a strong endorsement down where he had been a resident for many years, but what some folks did not expect was that he would meet with such enthusiastic reception in the northern part of the state. Everywhere he has appeared the people flocked to hear him, and the message he has to convey has struck a popular chord. His attitude is so moderate and sensible, his utterances so patriotic and the issues upon which he appeals for support so sound that it is not surprising that his candidacy is daily gaining in strength. Mr. Kellogg has not thus far said a harsh word concerning his opponents, and this fact has told strongly in his favor. There is no question but what the people regard him as more nearly representing their ideal of a United States Senator than any man seeking the office in the state at this time. It is admitted that he will be one of the two to survive the winnowing process of the primaries, and that his election in November is almost certain.

The Democrats of Minnesota can, if they so desire, elect the next United States senator from this state. The fact that he will not be a Democrat does not in the least effect this statement. And the probabilities are that they will do that very thing. You see, whoever is chosen for this high office will represent the Democrats of Minnesota as well as the Republicans, and there are indications that inasmuch as the members of the former party cannot hope to elect anyone harboring their own particular views on public questions they are going to insist that the best man available is selected by the opposition. And there is no question in the world concerning their right to do this. There is no law preventing a man from voting for whom he pleases, and the idea that a citizen must "vote 'er straight" and have nothing to say concerning who his representative shall be because none of the men available happen to agree with him on everything, seems to some of the more enlightened adherents of this particular political faith to be placing them too far on the outside. Their action may bust up some well laid plans, but this will be a good thing. All political parties in America as well as all politicans are liable to harbor certain "plans" which the people would be better off for "busting."

Some of the newspapers in this district are liable to get themselves into trouble unless they pay a little more attention to the provisions of the corrupt practices act. This act particularly specifies that all political advertisements shall be designated as such, shall state the amount to be paid for their insertion and the name, and address of the parties causing them to be published. In a display advertisement the omission of these provisions is not so bad, as everyone understands that any matter appearing in those columns is supposed to be paid for, but in the case of a reading notice it is different. Last week practically all the papers in the Ninth district contained what purported to be an interview with Senator Knute Nelson in which that gentleman commented in a complimentary manner on the qualifications of a certain candidate for congress in this district. The matter was sent out from campaign headquarters of A. C. Anderson at Fergus Falls, and was accompanied by a check to cover the cost of its publication as a publicity promoter. The Times received the notice and published it as "Political Advertising." A reading of the statute, however, discloses that even this designation does not entirely meet the requirements, but comes a whole lot nearer to doing so than does the treatment afforded the matter by any of its contemporaries. This paper might be willing to agree that the law is a cumbersome nuisance and serves no good purpose, but it is nevertheless the law of the state and should be either lived up to repealed.

Thief River Falls posts up another record in athletics. In the first ball game of the season on the home grounds, Mentzel the star twirler of the aggregation, had 23 strike-outs to his credit. This means that he came within four put-outs of retiring every man facing him during the nine innings without giving them an opportunity to leave the plate. There have been games in which no hits have been allowed, but if a contest is on record during which so few balls reached the fielders we have not heard of it. If this Mentzel party keeps on the way he started it is not likely he will finish the season with Thief River Falls. Collins, the other Thief River twirler, last Sunday defeated the strong Fosston bunch, allowing eight hits. In this game the rest of the team were allowed to play a little and the air tight support given the mound artist shows that it is not necessary for the pitcher to win all the games. You may as well chalk up another championship for this energetic city right now.

C. R. C. Baker has sold the Red Lake Falls Gazette to a trio of business men and will locate in another field. The purchasers of the good will and plant of the Gazette are J. A. Duffy, George F. Henning and J. D. Houston. These gentlemen will not conduct the paper themselves, but will place an experienced newspaper man in charge at once. Mr. Baker has given the people of Red Lake Falls an excellent paper and has in turn received a most generous patronage. It is understood that the stand taken by him during the option fight this spring arrayed some very influential interests against the paper and that this is the real reason for his sale of the property. He is a vigorous writer and a capable business man, and the brethern of the craft in this section will all hope for his success wherever he may decide to cast his lot.

No less authority than the "Country Gentleman," perhaps the most widely circulated advocate of advanced farming in the United Sates, has just called attention to Northwestern Minnesota as a potato region. A Viking lad, Oscar Larson, has become the world's champion potato grower through his having raised over 605 bushels of the vegetable on one acre of ground. This record was made in the contest inaugurated a year ago by the extension department of the agricultural college, University of Minnesota, and the young man has become a national character through his achievement. This region has long been famous for its wheat, is rapidily gaining a reputation as the foremost dairy section in the land, and now it has demonstrated that as a potato producer it has not an equal in the world.

H. E. Mussey, founder of the Thief River Falls Times and now publisher of the Grygla Eagle, has made a number of improvements in his plant and the excellent little Marshall county publication looks better than ever. A new press and a good assortment of type has been added and the outfit is now greatly superior to those generally found in the smaller towns. Mr. Mussey claims that the Eagle is published in the biggest town of its size in the world, the paper itself is easily the biggest little sheet in this region. Both paper and publisher are doing splendid work in boosting their section and that their efforts are appreciated is evidenced by the liberal support they are receiving.

They Favor Steenerson

Would Prove Detrimental.

Warren Sheaf.—A. G. Anderson, the Fergus Falls banker, finally did come out as a candidate for the republican nomination for congressman, in opposition to Congressman Steenerson. In his announcement published this week he states the platform upon which he makes the race. Looked at from any standpoint, said platform contains simply glittering generalities and platitudes that every candidate for congress in the United States, regardless of party, will willingly subscribe to. Congressman Steenerson has always stood for things that Mr. Anderson says he stands for, but we do not think he is entitled to any great credit on that score. Who would not insist on "a dolar's worth of service for every dollar spent?" Who, except a grafter interested in army and navy contracts, does not demand "a dolar's worth of preparedness for every dollar spent?" Who does not stand for "business methods, economy and efficiency in National Government?" Who, except the most rabid jingo, does not "stand first and foremost for geniune Americanism and strict honorable neutrality?" Another plank refers to preparedness and Mr. Anderson seems to tilt it both ways, when he says "I believe in preparedness which would protect, but not one which would inspire the spirit of invasion or impose the burdens of militarism." How Mr. Anderson will be able to increase the army and navy, which is the main thing in the preparedness program, without imposing some "burdens of militarism,' is a puzzle unless he intends to pay the cost out of his own bank account. If this country wants more war ships and a bigger army, the people must pay the price, and there is no way to get around that, no matter how many Anderson's may be sent to Congress. Really, in Mr. Anderson's whole platform there is not anything that appeals to or would advance the great agricultural interests of this district, not anything that would tend to promote drainage, or good roads, or that would encourage one single settler to locate among us. In Halvor Steenerson, on the other hand, me have a representative in Washington who has a wide grasp of the needs of this district and has carefully guarded our interests. On purely national questions he also measures up well among the leaders. He is, in fact, one of the most influential men in Congress. What benefit then would the district derive from making a change in its Congressman? None whatever. But there are many reasons why dropping a true and tried man at this time, when weighty questions that will effect us as a district, a state, a nation and a world power, are likely to come up for consideration, would be a detriment to us all and a political blunder.

Entitled to Another Term

Lancaster Herald.—Congressman Steenerson is setting forth some of the reasons why he should be reelected to Congress this year. Mr. Stenerson will have a fight for his honors against A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls, who filed on the last day. Mr. Anderson makes his opening plea that Congressman Steenersen was un-American in his vote on the McLemore Resolution.

We believe that Congressman Steenerson made a mistake when he voted as he did but in view of the able representation his has given and is giving in this district, we believe that he is entitled to another term. Mr. Anderson is an able bodied man but a newly elected member of Congress has very little influence during his first term and Steenerson has been in Congress long enough to know the ropes and acquire the influence necessary to promote the interest of his district.

Has Made Good.

Bagley Independent.—We are in receipt of a lithograph of Mr. A. G. Anderson, of Fergus Falls, candidate for Congressman from the Ninth district. The lithograph is a good one, no doubt the best money can buy and Mr. Anderson is a perfectly good looking man. But about the lithograph and about the bunch of advertising matter which he sends with it there is a noticeable lack of reasons why he should aspire to a position which is already admirably filled by a man who stands for everything which Mr. Anderson stands for and more, and who has made his promises good throughout his years of service. Halvor Steenerson is eminently fitted to the position he occupies. The benefits which his knowledge of the postal service has brought to the people of the rural districts, through the extension and the improvement of the rural free delivery have been of more good to the people as a whole than all the "needless expenditure propagande" which Mr. Anderson could rectify in a lifetime. It is what a man has done that foretells what he will do in the future. What has Mr. Anderson done?

Can't Afford a Change.

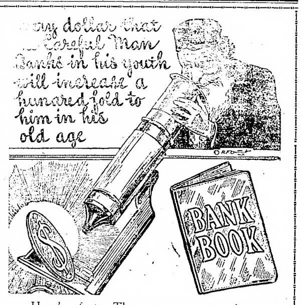
Sunbeam Sunbeam.—A. G. Anderson, cashier of the Scandia bank of Fergus Falls, has made enough surplus money, loaning bonus money to farmers, to gratify his ambition to become the member of congress from the Ninth congressional district of Minnesota. Mr. Anderson has a perfect right to seek this honor and gratify his ambition. But where do the people's interest appear on a deal of this kind, and especially the flood suffering farmers living on the banks of the Red Lake river? The people must understand that Congressman Steenerson has been working against adverse conditions in Congress for the past three years, with an adverse party in power, that are particularly averse to granting any public money for improvements in the northern states. But, notwithstanding these conditions, he has succeeded in getting an act through congress for a survey of Red Lake river, to have it dredged and straightened, which will redeem the thousands of acres of first class land lying along its banks, and make good farms of what is now covered with water. This is an improvement that is needed now, and we cannot afford to wait another ten years to get acquainted at Washington.

No Reason For a Change.

Greenbush Tribune.—Mr. Anderson and Mr. Steenerson, candidates for congress from this district, have something to say to the voters in this week's issue. Mr. Anderson is a comparative stranger in this end of the district but is well spoken of. He might make a good congressman after gaining experience, but Mr. Steenerson is already an able and influential congressman and we can see no reason for supplanting him at this time. We believe in keeping a good man in office when we have one.

A Friend Of The Pioneer.

Grygla Eagle.—Mr. Steenerson is known throughout the Districe as the pioneer's friend. Through his entire service he has always listened to the request of the most humble settler equally with the most prominent man in his district. By some unknown means he has surmised what would be for the best interest of the greatest number of settlers, and has left nothing undone to accomplish it. It cannot be expected that a man representing as many people as he does could please all, and if he did he would be a living curiosity. Mr. Steenerson came to northern Minnesota in an early day as a pioneer. Mr. is a lawyer of fame, and before his election to Congress was considered a sure winner in any case he took charge of. He is recognized by all the departments of Government as a power, and when he makes a demand for anything he is generally given an audience as soon as possible. The great good he has accomplished for the people in these parts in connection with the mail service will surely be remembered, and his defeat would be looked upon as a clamity. So remember this when you go to the polls at the primary, June 19th.



Here's a fact: The money you spend now is many times that money, because it is cheating yourself out of the profit that money would earn for you some day.

In other words, you are throwing away the "Foundation" on which you could build a fortune. You are casting away the seed which would become a tree if planted.

FINAL STEPS TO UNITE CHURCHES

Action of Norwegian Synod at Annual Convention Will Bring All Factions Together.

SCHISM OF LONG STANDING

Efforts to Reach Agreement Begun in 1905 Brought to Satisfactory Culmination and Complete Reconciliation is Now Assured.

That the action of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod at the annual session of its delegates in Minneapolis last week will result in the final uniting of all Norwegian churches in America under one head there can no longer be a doubt. All the steps looking toward union have been taken by the Synod, and similar action is expected by the conventions of the United church and Hauge's Synod later in the summer.

This will close a schism of many years standing and is a consummation which will be welcomed by those attending Norwegian churches in America generally. It is perhaps the most important event in the history of this denomination and one which will have a far-reaching effect. It will mean that where there are now two or three churches struggling along for a mere existence, one sound, energetic body will hold the allegiance of the factions, with the result that a better understanding and feeling will prevail throughout.

Some Historical Data.

There are churches and congregations representing each of the three factions in Thief River Falls, and while thew are extremely loyal in their views regarding this matter, the general impression is one of satisfaction and relief that the differences have been adjusted and that all will again be thus enable to get together in the work of the church. Among Norwegian Lutheran particularly the preliminaries to the final adjustment have been of much concern, and to many of other denominations and nationalities the subject has been one of great interest. Because of this The Times requested an interview on the subject with Rev. I. T. Aastad, pastor of the Synod church here, and a consistent worker in the cause of union. Rev. Aastad is highly pleased over the closing of a breach which has kept the denominations split for so long and predicts a great future for the church now that everyone will be working together.

Begun in 1905.

"In 1905," said Rev. Aastad, "a request was sent out by Hauge's Synod to the different Norwegian Lutheran church bodies to elect committees for the purpose of discussing the different doctrines that kept the church disrupted. This request was acceded to by the United Church and the Norwegian Synod. Committees were selected by the three bodies, theological professors and other men prominent in their respective churches being chosen. This joint committee met at different times, and in 1908, on the 8th of April, a full and perfect understanding and agreement was reached in the contraverted doctrines of lag preaching, the absolution, the call and the conversion. There was rejoicing among all. The report of this committee was unamously adopted by the different churches at the annual conventions in 1908.

First Efforts Vain.

"Now there was only one point of controversy left to agree upon—the doctrine of predestination. But it was generally considered that if the doctrine of conversion was agreed to there must necessarily be an agreement as to the doctrine of predestination. In this the church people were disappointed. In 1910 there was a distinct disagreement between the United church and the Norwegian Synod. Dr. Dahl, president of the United Church, in strong language, rejected the theses presented at the meeting of the joint committee by Dr. H. G. Stub of the Synod, these having been adopted at the annual distcict conventions of the Synod of the same year. There seemed at that time to be no prospect of peace and harmony.

Again Taken Up.

"When the delegates of the United Church met at their annual convention in 1911, they elected a new committee to discuss with the Norwegian Synod the basis for union. The Synod also elected a new committee, these two bodies meeting at St. Paul in September of the same year. The next council was held at Madison, Wisconsin, in 1912. At this gathering the agreement "opgjor" was formulated and agreed upon. "Opgjor" was then adopted by the three denominations in the year 1912—almost unanimously."

Final Agreement.

Rev. Aastad said that it would not be possible to discuss the doctrine of predestination as expressed in the agreement in an article such as The Times would find available, and stated that in "Opgor" the doctrine accepted is as taught in Romans VIII, and as explained in Article 11 of the Book of Concord. Now, finally, there was perfect understanding between the three branches of the church.

Continuing Rev. Aastad said: "In 1914 articles of agreement and union were adopted by the Synod and the United Church. In 1915 the United Church adopted the constitution for the new amalgamated church that is to bear the name of The Norwegian Lutheran Church of America.

"The Synod, in convention assembled in Minneapolis from May 18 to 25, this year, adopted the constitution for the proposed consolidated church and passed all other necessary resolutions to effect an organic union between the three branches. Should Hauge's Synod decide not to enter the union, then the Synod and United church will amalgamate. For this there were 522 affirmative votes cast, 203 voted against the proposition, 16 were absent and 29 did not vote.

On Four Hundredth Anniversary.

"Should the United Church, at its convention in Fargo on June 15, adopt the constitution as accepted by the Synod, and likewise Hauge's Synod at the annual convention of that body in Red Wing, then it is expected that the organine union will be affected next year at the four hundredth anniversary of the Lutheran reformation.

Selection Highly Satisfactory.

"In 1913 the Synod ordered a referendum vote on the question of union, and out of 1,000 congregations or more, 27 voted in the negative—some of these with the distinct understanding that they were not opposed to union, but preferred to postpone action until later. Thus a controversy of more than 30 years' standing has been settled,—and settled for good. It is to be hoped that even the minority in the Synod, or those opposed to union, will fall in line, inasmuch as there is every reason to believe that the United Church at the Fargo convention will adopt such resolutions as will satisfy the minority. But even if this should not be the case, the Synod, as such, has taken the final step and is now ready and willing to unite.

"The action taken by the Synod at the convention just held has awakened satisfaction and rejoicings all over the country. Telegrams poured into the convention from east and west, from congregations and individuals, expressing deep gratitude and happiness over the result."

Pennington Represented.

The Thief River Falls church was represented at the convention in Minneapolis by Rev. Aastad, H. S. Dahlen and A. G. Loftness. Other congregations in this neighborhood also had representatives at the gathering, as follows: St. Hilaire, K. O. Gigstad and A. A. Odegaard; Mavie, Rev. H. B. Bjornson and T. Hemmestvedt; Germantown, Louis Hamre. Besides these there were present Rev. E. O. Sabo and Simon Berseng of Grygla; John Haugan of Gatzke, and Rev. M. B. Urdahl of Holt.

NELSON INDORSEMENT FOR A. G. ANDERSON

By George F. Authier.
(From Minneapolis Tribune).

Washington, May 20—(Special).—Senator Knute Nelson yesterday commented on the personality of A. G. Anderson, candidate for Congress in the Ninth district. Senator Nelson unhesitatingly put his O. K. on Mr. Anderson. The phase in Mr. Anderson's character that appears to appeal to Senator Nelson most is his genuine Americanism.

"I have known Mr. Anderson," said Senator Nelson, "ever since he came from Iowa many years ago, and have always found him to be an honest, trustworthy, and reliable man, both in business and in politics. He is a thorough-going Republican and possessed of a genuine spirit of true Americanism, having the welfare of our common country uppermost and foremost in his heart. He always has taken a great interest in public affairs. I frequently, in times past have consulted him on important public questions and have found that his diagnosis and conclusions were fair, just and sound."

To the Voters of Pennington County.

I announce myself as a candidate for the office of Clerk of Court in Pennington County at the primary election to be held June 19th, and respectfully solicit your support.

Herman A. Ohm.

To the voters of Pennington County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Clerk of the District Court for Pennington county. I wish at this time to pledge to the voters of Pennington county that if I am nominated and elected, I will give the office my undivided attention, and I will serve the public to the best of my ability in a strictly impartial manner. In the accounting department as a member of the Board of Audit, in the Naturalization department, in fact in all of the different duties of the Clerk, I feel better prepared and able to give more efficient service than in the past.

Thanking the voters for past favors, and hoping for your continued support if you deem me worthy, I remain

Respectfully yours,
Harry E. Ives.

I hereby wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for Clerk of Court at the Primaries June 19th. Your vote and support solicited.

Respectfully
Adolph Eklund.

To The Voters Of Pennington County.

I herby announce my candidacy for the nomination for the office of Clerk of the District Court at the Non-Partisan Primary on June 19th, 1916.

I feel that if I should be nominated and elected to this office, I will be able to fill it in a satisfactory manner.

I solicit your vote and support,
Respectfully yours,
W. H. QUIST.

ON account of the great advances in price of all supplies used in the mo ern laundry of today, the laundries all over the North west have been forced to raise the list or run at a loss and shut down.

The advance in this price is not even enough to offset the additional cost of operation as in some instances supplies have four doubled and in each case more than doubled.

Owing to this fact the undersigned laundries of Thief River Falls find we are compelled to raise our lists, and trust the public will appreciate the existing condition and continue to co-operate with us in building up this industry of our city.

Senator Ole O. Sageng Endorses the Candidacy of A. G. Anderson for Congress in a Letter to Hon. Knute Nelson.

"Hon. Knute Nelson, Washington, D. C.—My Dear Senator: I want to express my sincere appreciation of your vote on the warning resolution. The Americanism of Minnesota was slandered by the vote of the other members of our delegation, a fact which adds greatly to my appreciation of your courage in standing alone for America and American rights in the present crisis.

"I am especially surprised at the action of the member from my district. It seems to me that there was not even a political reason, sordid as such a consideration is in such a matter, why Mr. Steenerson should not be for "America first." Sincerely yours. OLE O. SAGENG.

Announcement.

I have filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Ninth Minnesota District. Owing to my personal business interests I have been reluctant to take this action, but have been persuaded by the persistent demands of a large number of the Republicans in all part of the district.

I have prepared to accept the responsibility which I ask the voters of the Ninth District to confer upon me by placing myself in a position to devote all my time and energy to the duties of the office.

My platrom is brief; I stand first and foremost for genuine Americanism and strict and honorable neutrality.

I would insist on a "dollars worth of service for every dollar spent."

I know that the government records show that we are spending more to maintain our army and navy than did Germany, England or France before the present war, and I would demand a "dollar's worth of preparedness for every dollar so spent."

I believe in preparedness which would protect, but not one which would inspire the spirit of invasion or impose the burdens of militarism.

I stand for business methods, economy and efficiency in National government.

Yours truly,
A. G. ANDERSON.

Economy

"HOW can the United States become the world's commanding creditor nation?'

National Economy,—the goddess of sane living,—is the only answer to the question.

National Economy means Individual Economy. Individual Economy is materially developed by the use of a Check-Account of the financial affairs of both business and the home.

Your check account will eventually enable you to start an interest bearing account and pave the way for profitable investments.

Commercial Club Notes

June will be a busy month for the Commercial club, with plans for the Market days, auto tours, Telelaget convention, celebration of July Fourth and other matters to take up the attention of members. Members are urged to be present at the regular club meetings, as matters of importance to the interests of the city are to come up.

At the regular club meeting Thursday, June 8, a report on the situation in the flooded district will be made by members of the committee who have visited it recently. Plans for the auto runs will be discussed and Market days outlined. It is important that members take an active interest in the work this summer.

Meeting Dates.

Regular club meeting, Thursday, June 8 at 8 p. m.

Regular club meeting, Thursday, June 22, at 8 p. m.

Executive meeting Wednesday, June 7, 8 p. m.

Executive meeting Wednesday, June 21, 8 p. m.

The club bulletin will be issued on June 15 and on the 15th of each month hereafter.

Several members are back in their club dues; it is important that the club has dues promptly in order to meet the running expenses.

Red Lake Falls Commercial club advises us that they will celebrate in Thief River Falls. Good spirit, neighborly and the right kind.

The Juniors have disbanded for the summer and will not be reorganized until fall. Junior members who have not paid up will not be afforded club privileges. The hour of 10 p. m. has been set as the limit for members of the Junior organization to use the club rooms.

Deeds, Not Words.

Thief River Falls People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,

For Thief River Falls kidney sufferers,

Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Thief River Falls people.

Ole Rude, jeweler, State St., W., Thief River Falls, says: "I was troubled with weak kidneys for several months, caused, I believe, by sitting constantly at the bench. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions. My back became weak and I had dull, nagging pains across my loins. I felt sore over my kidneys, as if I had been pounded. When I attempted to straighten or get up from a chair, my back felt as if it was paralyzed. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and a short time after I used them, I felt better. I haven't had any kidney trouble in some time."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Rude had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—J1-8.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

Delivered For Class of 1916 of the Thief River Falls High School at Auditorium, on Sunday Evening May 28, by Rev. Albin A. Larson.

"Scripture lesson; Ephesians 6:7-18 Sermon text; 1 Tim. 6: 12. "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before witnesses."

Theme: Paul's admonition to "fight the good fight of faith." Its meaning, the the means of fighting, and the ultimate purpose for the fight.

"Not a popular warfare as in Europe today, where souls are being hurled into eternity in a horrifyingly rapid succession. Not a warfare that will cause suffering of humanity and the cry of revenge to penetrate the highest heavens, but a fight of faith as Paul himself fought it—not for man's destruction, but for the destruction of the devil and his power over humanity—overpowering his kingdom in the heart of ourselves.

"The validity of this fight: There are two powers manifested in this world. The one is good, the other is evil. Back of the good power is God, back of the evil power is the devil. God created the universe with all that is therein good. The devil destroyed the creation of God. Further God planned and revealed the salvation of man in the name of his Son. The devil continued to plan the further destruction, heading all his attacks at Christ, the Son. He brought Him to the cross as a malefactor. There, however, the final victory was gained over the devil. Still he lurks about deceiving man. He is a coward. He will not recognize defeat. Therefore we are justified, yea obliged, to take an adverse stand towards him. Commonly this is neglected by men. Therefore the apostle's admonition to the Christians was to fight the good fight of faith. Hence we admonish you, young friends, to take a stand. We cannot serve two masters of like mind. Much less can we serve God and the devil who are at enimity. Therefore. "Stand up, stand up for Jesus.

"The Means For Fighting the Good Fight of Faith.—Not carnal weapons. The enemies are spiritual, and, therefore they cannot be touched with impliments contrived for man's destruction. Paul tells the Ephesians that 'We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against the spiritual wickedness in high places.' We are in fact, encompassed by evil and stand helpless in our own strength. Should the conflict be carried through in our strength, we would be eternally lost. But, according to God's plan of salvation, we can choose to stand in the strength of Christ. Then we are safe from all danger. In order to come into this happy existence we must heed Christ's instruction, and use the spiritual weapons, which are watchfulness, prayer and a deligent use of the means of grace.

"What would we think of a soldier who neglects to guard? We know his doom—the fate of the intrusted goods we may infer. So also are you, young friends, sentinels. You are placed to guard something that God has given you. We refer to all that you may possess in the form of mental faculties. We refer to all that the future may mean to you, and at the same time all that you might mean to the future. You can, by guarding yourself, become a powerful factor for good. You may, by neglecting yourself, become a nuisance to society. How are you guarding? Are you dutiful? Do you allow sin a free sway? If so, then you are untrue to God, and to your parents, and not least to yourselves. Then the name of 'man' or 'woman' is a false and unbecoming appelation for you.

"Christ himself had need of prayer. When his enemies came to capture him they found him at prayer, in the place of prayer. 'He oft resorted thither.' So also, if we wish to remain strong, we must live close to the source of strength. The greater the distance, between Christ and us, the greater the danger. We fail because we neglect to seek strength from Him. 'Stand up, stand up for Jesus, stand in His strength alone.

"The means of grace are given unto us for our need . God revealed His will through the Bible, not for His need but for our need. The Bible is the word of God. It is powerful. It is sharper than a two-edged sword. Through the Word God gives us that which He sees we need—encouragement to the faint, warning to the haughty, advice to the ignorant, wisdom to the wise. The sacraments, too, are given for our good. In Baptism the spiritual life is kindled. In the Sacrament of the Altar the same life is nourished by His body and blood. Make therefore, deligent use of the means of Grace given by God.

"Fight the good fight of faith relying firmly on the means that are given thee for that purpose. With these you shall conquer. In your own strength you are already lost.

"The Ultimate Purpose of the Fight of Faith.—You have already spent some time thinking of your vocation in life. Every thinking individual should do that. Every normal being does it. It is hard to find the right bearing. In fact, it is impossible to do so unles you heed the apostle's admonition, 'Lay hold on the eternal life.'

"God has honored you with a calling, not for this life only, but for eternity. 'Lay thou hold on the eternal life whereunto thou art also called.' Most mortals seem to think that the preparation for the physical life is the main objective. That is a secondary interest, though. Christ says so: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you.' Matt., 6:33.

"Therefore, young friends, let it be your primary concern to find Chirst. or rather that you be found in Him. When that is done Christ will indicate to you your place in the physical universe. You may not always be satisfied or pleased. That does not matter. Paul's life was in harmony with his teaching. His death was inglorious from human viewpoint, but beautifully grand from devine viewpoint. So also may you fail, humanly speaking, but gain the eternal crown of Life from the Righteous Judge."

THE "FLYING SWITCH"

Newslets of the Division Point Combed Out With The Teeth of Interrogation.

Pays Respect.—A large piece of crepe adorned the waiting room door at the Great Northern station on Tuesday, being in respect to James J. Hill, who passed away at his home in St. Paul after an illness of eleven days.

Back at The Key.— Phil Bryant, telegraph operator at the Soo offices, resumed his duties Tuesday morning after a brief illness.

New Machinist.—William Mathis began work at the Soo round house Tuesday in the capacity of machinist.

Conklin Returns.—G. J. Conklin, car foreman at the Soo yards, returned last Saturday evening from Kansas City, where he had spent fifteen days visiting at the home of his parents. Mr. Conklin stated that the weather was exceptionally fine in that part of the country and that things were looking good along the entire line.

Lamb in Cab.—Percy Lamb, who has been acting as night engine dispatcher at the Soo round house, has been transferred to fireman on the road, change taking effect the fore part of the week. Roy Erickson is filling Lamb's former position.

Roll Improved.—Elmer Roll, employed with the day switching crew at the Soo yards, who was badly shaken up a few weeks ago when he fell from the top of a box car, has been discharged from the Physician's hospital. Mr. Roll is now able to get around with the aid of a walking cane and it will be but a short time before he can resume his duties.

Amundson Back.—Peter Amundson machinist helper at the Soo round house, returned the latter part of last week to report for duty after a short vacation.

Battelson Off.—Richard Battelson, employed at the Soo round house as machinist helper, is off from duty at present on a vacation.

New Call Boy.—Hjalmer Bugge took up the position of night call boy the fore part of the week, relieving George Erickson, who is on a vacation.

Sunday In Crookston.—Chase Mix, clerk at the Soo offices, passed Sunday in Crookston, where he was the guest of his parents. Me left on Saturday afternoon and returned on Monday morning.

Burgraff to Crookston.— Frank Burgraff, lineman for the Soo at this division point, left Monday afternoon for Crookston to attend the initiation exercises of the K. C. lodge, held in that city in the evening. He returned Tuesday morning.

Attends Initiation.—Tom Majers, ticket agent at the Great Northern station, spent Monday in Crookston being in attendance at the K. C. lodge initiation ceremonies. He left via the auto route.

Day on Wheatline.—Soo Line Conductor H. K. Amory, of Whitetail, Montana, who is spending his vacation in this city, spent last Saturday visiting at points along the Wheatline. He left on Monday morning again for Holt to look over his land holdings.

Conference Begins.—The national conference commission of railroad managers appointed by the fifty-two railroads affected by the wage demands of the four train service unions of the country begin a series of meetings with representatives of the unions at New York City today. The railroads, it is said, are prepared to resist advances in wages, but will agree to arbitration. Elisha Lee, assistant general manager of the Pennsylvania lines east, will head the national conference committee, having been elected at a recent meeting.

On Fishing Trip.—Frank McCrystal, boilermaker foreman at the Soo round house, returned Tuesday from Federal Dam, where he had spent Memorial Day on a fishing trip. He secured several good specimens.

Change in Hours.—Jim Wiley, train dispatcher, who has formerly been at the key from 4 p. m. to 12 o'clock mid-night, has been changed to the night position, 12 o'clock to 8 a. m.

Hendry on Trip.—Assistant Master Mechanic J. W. Hendry returned Monday evening from a trip over the Duluth line on business. While at Federal Dam he succeeded in catching a fine string of pike.

Booren to Minneapolis—W. Booren, Soo Line engineer, left Tuesday evening for Minneapolis on a business trip.

Memorial Day Trip.—A. Greenseth, foreman of the Soo round house, and a follower of Isak Walton, spent Memorial Day at Federal Dam on a fishing trip. He returned in the evening with a good-sized string.

MOVE TO MARK AUTO ROADS IN NEIGHBORHOOD

Enterprising auto owners are considering the advisability of forming a sort of volunteer organization for the purpose of marking auto trails leading to and from the city. This could be done at very little expense and would prove a great convenience. Other localities have tried out the system and find that it aids strangers in their tours about the country.

The scheme generally followed is to paint the telephine poles along a certain route all one color, using a different color for the differnt routes. For instance, the road leading to Warren might have the poles painted white a short distance from the ground, the highway to Red Lake Falls might be green, other routes being designated by other colors. Whenever a stranger then asked his way to any particular point he would simply have to be told what color to follow and there would be no possibility of losing the way. The idea is a simple one and has the further advantage of being decidedly cheap.

Stephen Victor.

The Thief River Falls high school base ball team went down to defeat last Saturday afternoon at the Fair grounds at the hands of the Stephen nine, by a 12 to 5 score. Each team succeeded in making eight hits. Timely hits on the part of the Stephenites won the game while costly errors for the locals put them in the rear. The work of Hobson Rogers for the locals is deserving of mention as he made three hits out of four times at bat.

EDWARD D. RYDEEN
Clearbrook, Minn.
Candidate for
REPRESENTATIVE
of the 65th Legislative District
Comprising Red Lake, Pennington and Clearwater Counties.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Having at the urgent request of my neighbors and friends, filed as a candidate for election as State Representative from the 65th Legislative District, I respectfully solicit the support of the voters of Red Lake, Pennington and Clearwater Counties at the Primary Election to be held June 19th, 1916.

In soliciting your vote and support, I deem it incumbent upon me as a non-partisan candidate to submit my platform for your candid consideration and approval.

I advocate and if nominated and elected will earnestly support the following legislation: Businesslike economy and efficiency in the administration of the State's business affairs, and the enactment of laws that will do away with what is called the "spoils system" in all departments of state government, but I do not deem it a wise policy to hamper or restrict the activities of our State University, especially the Extension Department by inadequate appropriations.

Legislation for state aid roads and bridges.

Legislation that will prevent discrimination in our tax levies.

The Recall, and also the Initiative and Referendum Amendment.

I am in favor of county option but prefer state wide prohibition.

Equal sufferage for women.

The election of the President of the United States, the Vice President and the United States senators by direct vote of the people.

I firmly believe in the rule of the people and if elected shall support every measure that will tend to increase the power of the people in the local and state government and all measures which will tend to benefit the conditions of our rural communities; and, while endeavoring to be just and fair to all classes, I believe that farmers and laborers should be given that consideration which ther welfare may demand.

Respectfully submitted,
EDWARD D. RYDEEN.

IRA C. RICHARDSON
for Probate Judge.

In the year 1910, I was appointed Probate Judge for Red Lake County; and found much work left undone by my predecessor during his long illness. I had a good law practice and gave it up and unselfishly devoted all my time to my office; and my work at that time is known to all who had anything to do with that office. At the general election that year, I was elected to succeed myself; and Pennington County was set off. The law required the Judge to reside at the County seat; and to hold office in diminished Red Lake County for about half the former salary, I would have had to abandon my home at Thief River Falls. That meant a great sacrifice for my wife and me to sell our homestead and sever ties that had grown strong during our active service for eighteen years of the best part of our lives, in this city.

The voters of the territory organized as Pennington County had honored me with a majority over both of my opponents; and those voters were entitled to the confirmation of that vote by my appointment as Judge of the new county; but their rights and mine were disregarded and Attorney Wilhelm Michelet, who held the lucrative office of United States Commissioner for life, was the lucky man and appointed Probate Judge.

In 1912, he and I were candidates for the same office; and he was again lucky, because I was taken dangerously ill and my life was despaired of before the election and he kept the two offices he had.

I consulted the famous Mayos and many other doctors in Minnesota; consulted two celebrated doctors in Chicago, and was at the Osteopathic hospital at Kirksville, Mo., for a month and spent hundreds of dollars to save my life, and had not earned a dollar for nearly a year.

For another year, I could not earn my board; but my health has constantly improved for the past three years and I have done a good deal of work in the past two years and have regained good health.

Two years ago, many people urged me to become a candidate for Probate Judge. I was weak, thought it might be necessary to go to a warmer climate or I might not be able to perform the duties of the office, if elected.

Judge Michelet was a candidate again and his opponent was not a lawyer; and the Judge was elected and has held all his paying offices; and now seeks perpetuation of the same, because they pay well and do not prevent him from practicing his chosen profession of law.

I have resided in Minnesota more than fifty years, was a farmer's boy, taught school; and have practiced law for the past thirty-two years and tried hundreds of lawsuits and settled more.

The last severe winter did not retard the improvement of my health; and it would be easy and a pleasure for me to perform the duties of Probate Court in this County; and I would cheerfully devote all my time to that Office; and I will appreciate your support and vote.

Respectfully yours,
IRA C. RICHARDSON,
502 LaBree Ave. N.,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

BALL TEAM ADDS 2 MORE SCALPS

Fosston Easily Defeated Sunday in Interesting Game by Nine to Three Score.

WHITE EARTH ON TUESDAY

Loudly Touted Brunette Aggregation Fails to Make a Dent in Flawless Record of Nason's Championship Contenders.

Charley Nason's aspirants for fame on the base ball grounds of the northwest celebrated the first real summer day of 1916 by administering severe defeat to an aggreation of young men, giving Fosston as their home, and who were chaperoned by O. A. Brager, a former resident of this city, on the local diamond last Sunday afternoon. The game was a much more interesting contest, from the spectator's point of view, than the Twin Valley game on the Sunday previous. There was more action, and action is what the fans pay their hard earned jitneys to see. They saw it last Sunday, and incidentally the local base ball exchequer was enriched approximately one hundred dollars as a result.

Manager Nason decided upon Collins as his slab artist, for the duel, and Georgie came through in fine shape, allowing but four hits and striking out eight men. A young man by the name of Smith, did like honors for the welcome visitors, and although his record was not as perfect as that of the local boy, he did well on the mound. Another young gentleman, appellated "Doc" by his companions, but more formally known as Tagland, relieved Mr. Smith in the seventh inning—and did better, because the locals were tired out as the result of previous exercise. Had Friend Tagland officiated as pitcher during the first part of the game, the contest might have been different. It might have been more one sided than it really was.

Master "Artie" Mentzel, he of the strike-out fame, played at third base, and started the excitement in the first inning when he leaned against one of Mr. Smith's straight ones for a three base wallop. He later tried to make home when the visiting left fielder froze onto a long fly, but was unable to get out of his own way and deposited himself in the dust just out of reaching distance of the plate at a most inopportune time. It is suggested that a faint flutter of white in the grandstand diverted his attention thus causing the catastrophe.

Thief River Falls scored twice in the second inning. Collins took first when he was hit by the pitcher, and was forced out at second, Lambert going to first on the play. Lambert was forced out at second, Christenson getting to first. Johnson hit for a single, Christy going to third, and scoring when Quale singled. Johson also scored on Quale's bingle.

Thief River added two more in the fourth, Collins and Lambert scoring on errors by Movold at second, and a wild pitch. Both had been given a life by singles. Another score was added in the fifth, Hoffmeister getting first on balls, second on a passed ball, third on a attempt to put Franklin out at first, and scoring on a hit by Collins.

"The lucky seventh" again proved disastrous for the visitors, four ney, who replaced Lambert in the cenney who replaced Lambert in the center garden, struck out. Hoffmeister singled, and went to third on a single by Mentzel. Hofmeister went out, pitcher to catcher. Mentzel got on with a hit, and went to third on Franklin's infield drive, the ball being returned to the catcher to effect the Hofmeister put-out. Franklin stole second. Collins hit for a single, scoring Mentzel and advancing Franklin to third. Collins stole second. Christenson hit for three bases, scoring Collins and Franklin. Christy scored on Johnson's hit. Following Mentzel's single, Smith was relieved on the slab by Tagland.

Fosston's first tally came in the second when Tagland, after gaining the third sack by a three bagger, scored on a single by C. Fogelberg. Their second score came in the sixth frame, after Nelson had gained first, when Franklin dropped a fly, had stolen second and third and scored on a passed ball. The final tally came in the eighth. Tagland went out, pitcher to first. C. Fogelberg out, short to first. Nelson hit for a single, and stole second. Movold hit for a single, scoring Nelson. B. Fogelberg flew out to left field.

Thief River 12—Indians 7.

Mr. Nason's proteges made it three straight when they celebrated Memorial Day by defeating the White Earth Indians by a score of twelve to seven in an interesting contest. There were those who remembered past performances in which the Braves and the locals participated, who were willing to concede the win to the visitors, but they climbed of the "anxious seat" early in the game. The Redskins came loaded for "bear"—and found bare "facts." The most prominent fact was that the locals were in the game to the finish this season with one of the fastest aggreations of ball-tossers that ever wore the Thief River uniform.

The day was ideal, although a hazy sky made the work of the fielders somewhat difficult, high balls losing themselves temporarily in the flickering ether. This might account for the fact that Berry, who started on the slab for the visitors, "went into the air" early in the game and was releived by Joe Belcourt. Belcourt also "ascended" in the eighth and gave way to friend Bobbie Hallett, that same pestiferous little cuss who formerly scooped 'em out of the sand and picked them out of the ozone for in the good old days of years ago.

Mentzel made his second appearance for the locals, and although he let his team mates do most of the work, pitched a steady game, striking out ten and allowing eleven hits. There were few features in the play, two worthy of mention being Berry's single handed grab of Franklin's foul in the seventh frame, and Murray's homer in the third inning. Colins starred at bat, getting three hits, one of which wasa three-bagger. All of the locals played a heady game, and showed that they are fast getting into form, and that there is every reason for the fans to expect "big league" ball during the season.

The following is the detail of the game.

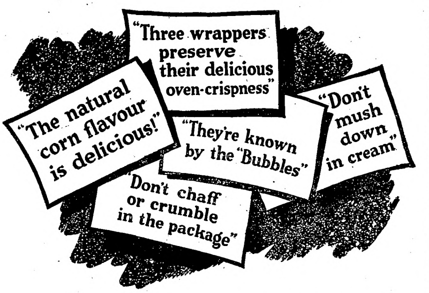
Public Opinion



"Three wrappers preserve their delicious oven-crispness"
"The natural corn flavour is delicious!"
"They're known by the "Bubbles""
"Don't mush down in cream"
"Don't chaff or crumble in the package"

The first taste of New Post Toasties reveals the fact that something different—something better— has arrived for the breakfast table.

The secret is in the flavor—a self-developed flavor of pearly white Indian corn--not the flavor of cream and sugar upon which other flakes have to depend.

And notice, too, the appearance of New Post Toasties, particularly the tiny bubbles on the surface of each flake. These bubbles are a distinquishing feature---produced by the quick, intense heat of a new patented process of manufacture.

New Post Toasties do not "chaff" or crumble in the package, and they don't mush down in cream like other flakes. They're more substantial and are altogether more satisfactory than any flakes that have preceded them.

The proof is in the eating---have your grocer send you a package.

The Strange Case of
MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses describe Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress and Pollock's pursuit of her. There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky. Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill the latter. Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

MAGGIE HALE

"WHAT is your name?"

"Maggie Hale."

"And your occupation?"

For a fraction of a minute she hesitated and then answered lightly. "I am out of employment just at present. I was private secretary to Theodore Barker."

A flicker of mutual amusement shot from Langdon's eyes to those of the Prosecutor, and the spectators with a whispering rustle of interest leaned forward to stare, for "Texas" Barker was a striking figure in the city.

His millions amassed by the masculine love of "taking a chance" would have made him notable anywhere, but "Texas" the gambler enlarged that notability to the spectacular, though his constant clashes with the police had recently robbed him of some of his more exclusive patronage.

A Flicker of Amusement Shot From Langdon's Eyes to Those of the Prosecutor.

To Mary Page alone the name Barker meant nothing, and the sudden eagerness in her manner was due not to the expectation of a bit of sensational testimony, but because this was the woman she had been supposed to be on the night when the police dragged her to jail.

This new witness was, however, not a woman to bring from Mary anything but an uncontrollable shudder of aversion. For she was of the hard-mouthed, bold-eyed type whose profession it is to make herself attractive to men.

She was the decoy of the great gambling hell back of the Hotel Republic, and Mary wondered vaguely what on earth she could possibly know of the tragedy, that after so many weeks seemed no nearer a solution.

The Prosecutor wondered much the same thing, and the Judge made a mental note to warn Langdon that witnesses whose characters were not beyond reproach detracted from rather than added to a case.

"Somebody tipped me off that the air was fresher at a cabaret."

And he made that resolution in the face of the twinkle of amused recognition that Maggie Hale had shot him when she took the stand. For all kinds and all classes met at Barker's, and it was with this famous place that Langdon's first question dealt.

"As secretary to Mr. Barker you must have been frequently at his establishment back of the Hotel Republic, were you not?"

"I was," the witness answered readily. "But mostly in the daytime. I had my evenings free."

"There were evenings when you were there, though, were there not?"

"Oh, lots!" Her tone was freighted with easy amusement. "Sometimes I met up with a party for dinner or a show, and then we'd drift about to try and bank at The House."

She smiled, and several men in the courtroom smiled too.

"Miss Hale, were you a friend of James Pollock?"

"I knew him; knew him pretty well. He was at Barker's a good bit."

"Were you at Barker's on the night that he was shot?"

"Yes, but early. Somebody tipped me off that the air was fresher at a cabaret."

A snigger of repressed mirth filtered through the room at this hint of the big raid, but Langdon frowned.

"Had you seen Mr. Pollock that day?"

"No. Not since the night before."

"Miss Hale, isn't it true that you were to have joined the supper party for the company that Mr. Pollock and Mr. Daniels were giving?"

"No. I wanted to, but he said it was purely theatrical. Then I bet him I would come anyway."

"Why were you particularly anxious to attend that party—on Mr. Pollock's account?"

"Not on your life! I knew that there was going to be some crooked work pulled off, but I couldn't prove it. I—I had a grudge against someone who was in on it, and I wanted to queer the deal."

"Will you tell us please what that deal was?"

The woman twisted her hands together nervously, and her eyes darted among the spectators as if searching for a menacing face, then she said slowly:

"The—the deal wasn't pulled off, and I'd rather—tell it without any names, if I've got to tell it. I'm not keen about snitching on people."

"I think you may tell it as you please. Should it become necessary to reveal the name I will ask for it."

"That's the ticket. Well, you see it was this way."

Miss Hale settled back in her chair, as though she really enjoyed the interest she was creating.

"Barker knew a fat lot of crooks of all kinds, and he had one pal called Budge Dudley who—wasn't all he might have been, but Texas stuck to him because he'd helped him once a long time ago. It was the same with Larry the Josh. Larry had a soft job at The House, and Texas kept him for old time's sake.

"Well, that's got nothing to do with it, except that these fellers cooked up a plant by which they were to get a girl into Jim's party. This girl is about the cleverest dip in New York, and she was to lift the jewels and the watches and the money and everything she could get those swift hands of hers on, when the party got warmed up.

"It was a part of the game for her not to be seen going in or coming out of the hotel, so it was fixed to get the fire-escape down and let her go up it. When she came down again she was to be swung up into Barker's in a swing that is used sometimes to get important people out of the way if unexpected visitors arrive."

She smiled grimly.

"And then she was to walk boldly out the front door. Now this girl—"

"Sadie!" breathed Mary Page suddenly, and at the name the witness paled and, swinging about stared at Mary.

"How do you know—" she began, but Langdon interrupted quickly:

"You say that the girl failed to carry out her part of the plot. Will you tell us why, please?"

"Why? Why, because Jim wasn't at the banquet and she couldn't get in. There wasn't anybody else there who recognized her, and she was counting on Jim. It was fixed with him, but I guess he forgot, so she was left out in the cold. She stuck around till pretty late, hoping to have a chance to get in on the game anyway, and then when she tried to go down the fire-escape she found it about as quiet as Broadway around eight o'clock. It was full of bulls and people and lights, so she had to go downstairs and out the regular way with nothing to pay for a wasted evening."

"Were you in the hotel that night?"

"I was. But not at the banquet."

"Where were you?"

"In the ladies' writing-room on the second floor," the witness answered without the slightest hesitation. "That's around the corner from the banquet room."

"You say that the girl failed to carry out her part of the plot."

"How near is that to what is known as the 'gray suite,' do you know?"

"Of course I do. It's at the end of that corridor."

"Can you reach the fire-escape from it?"

"No. There's a fire tower at the other side of the building that you are supposed to use. But I didn't know that when I was seized with a desire to write letters in that room."

"What time did you go in there?"

"Oh, I don't know—round about eleven o'clock or so."

"Did you look out the window?"

"Sure I did, lots of times. I had to do something to prevent death from boredom with my own company."

"It was then that you found you could not reach the fire-escape, was it?"

"Yes. But I could see it and that was just about as important for me. All I wanted was to have the goods on a woman that had been blabbing too much about me."

"Miss Hale, did you at any time when you looked out at the fire-escape hear any conversation?"

"Yes."

"When?"

"Well, I wasn't wearing my wrist watch that night so I can't tell you the exact time. It was pretty late, after midnight. I had about decided that the game was due to come off pretty quick or not at all, and had leaned out of the window to take a last look when I saw the lights flash up in the next suite."

"Were the windows open?"

"Yes."

"And you could hear talking?"

"Yes."

"Was it a man and a woman?"

"No; two men. One was shouting pretty loudly and the other seemed to be promising him something or reassuring him. One voice seemed kind of familiar, but I didn't place it then because it was thick, like a man with an edge on. The other voice I didn't recognize. At any rate, I heard the lush say,

"'Now beat it, and don't you let anybody butt in this time. Stay where I told you to, and for the Lord's sake don't get run in as a sneak. Do you get me?'

"'I got you the first time,' growled the other fellow. 'What the dickens has got into you tonight, Jim? I believe you've got something up your sleeve you're not tellin'.'

"'Well,' says the drunken voice, 'you've been keepin' a few things up your sleeve for a long time. I haven't had an accounting for that money yet.'

Mary Page.

"At that the other growls something and they both came to the window."

"Could you see them?" Langdon's voice shook a little in his excitement.

"No. I couldn't see anything but their shadows. A tall one kind of wavering, and a shorter one."

"Did you hear any more?"

"No. Because just then I heard someone laugh in the corridor, and I know the banquet must be arriving, and I wanted to keep tabs on the guests."

"Did you see the defendant, Mary Page, pass?"

"Yes."

"Was she alone?"

"No; Daniels, the theatrical feller, was with her."

There was a slight pause.

"Now, Miss Hale," Langdon's voice was serious, but deep with an emotion that stirred the bewildered spectators with the sense of something big and important even though they could not grasp it, "did Mr. Daniels show any emotion when he passed the door of the gray suite?"

"I don't know as you would call it emotion exactly. He acted like a man that hears a familiar voice. To come down to facts, he stopped short and listened, and it wasn't till he noticed that Miss Page had stopped too that he laughed loudly as if to cover up something and hurried her along to the banquet room."

"Did you see Mr. Daniels again?"

"Yes; a little later. I went across to the window to get an eyeful of what was going on out there, but couldn't see a thing, and after waiting a bit I went back to the door."

"Was anyone in the corridor?"

"Yes. A kid was walking along towards the stairs and Daniels was standing by the door of the gray suite with one hand on the knob and with his ear flat against the panel."

"How long did he stand there?"

"Oh, a minute or so. At first I thought he was going to open the door. Then he shrugged his shoulders and walked a step away. Just then I thought I heard the sound of a window being closed and I ran towards my window. Before I got there, though, there was a scream and a shot and I ran out into the hall instead. Old Daniels was beating it down the corridor and Mr. Langdon here was standing at the door of the gray room."

"Did you join the crowd about the door?"

"Of course I did. I was one of the first to get into the room."

"Was the window still open?"

"No." The witness was very emphatic. Her mouth shut in a tight line.

"Now—be careful, Miss Hale—are you sure of that?"

"Sure? Of course I'm sure. One window was open, yes. The one to the left hand side of the room, but the other one, the one through which I had heard the talk, was closed. I'm dead sure of it—dead sure."

"Miss Hale, you say you were one of the first to enter the room. Will you describe exactly what you saw?" Langdon moved nearer to her, and himself listened attentively.

"Mr. Langdon was lifting her up in his arms."

"I saw the body of Jim Pollock lying face down on the floor with a dribble of blood coming from under him, and a little ways off Mary Page lying in a dead faint, with her face all twisted up, like a person with a stroke. Mr. Langdon was lifting her up in his arms. Daniels was there, and the pretty boy that played the lead in the Page company. There was one of the hotel officials, too."

The memory of the ghastly scene did not disturb her at all. She was as calm as though she had been entertaining visitors at home.

"But you did NOT see, did you, the short man whom Pollock had been haranguing a few moments before?" The question was sharp and direct.

"No. Unless it was either you, Mr. Langdon, or Mr. Daniels. There was no other man there whom it could have been."

"Was the voice you heard mine? Speak frankly."

"No. Unless you've changed your elocution teacher." There was a slight titter. "It was kind of thick and nasal."

"Would you recognize it again if you heard it?"

"Yes. But I haven't heard it since."

"What did you do during the excitement?"

"I was too horrified to do anything for a minute. Then people kept pushing in, and so I went across and took another slant at the fire-escape."

"Did you see anyone?"

"Not on the fire-escape itself, but two men were in the alley staring up at the hotel. I could see their faces."

"Two men—are you sure there were two?"

"Yes. Of course I am. I could see them plain. One was almost under the arc light."

"Miss Hale," said Langdon, clear and calmly, weighing every word, though he knew the sensation his question would create, "was that man who stood under the arc light dressed in a light suit with a red tie?"

"He was!"

[To be continued.]

Avoid Catching Cold.

Colds are catching mostly from others. Therefore avoid people who have colds. Avoid people who have recently had pneumonia (within two years). Avoid crowds. Avoid hot places. Avoid badly ventilated places.

Colds can't be caught from oneself. Therefore keep the mouth, nose and tonsils clean. Avoid gorging with food or drink. Avoid alcoholics.

The germ is a factor, but the human body is also. Therefore avoid getting overwarm or overcold in the entire body or any part thereof.

Colds cannot be caught when resistance is high. Therefore build up heat making powers by sleeping out, taking cold baths and eating moderately. Exercise daily in the open air.

If you have contracted a cold do not spit carelessly. Do not sneeze or cough carelessly. Destroy all nose and mouth secretions.

If the attack is accompanied by aches and fever avoid pneumonia by going to bed, decreasing eating and by taking a purge. Take medical counsel.

Care of the Hands.

To keep the hands smooth, soft and white wipe them until they are perfectly dry after washing them. The neglect to dry the hands is the commonest cause of the redness and chapping of the skin. If the hands have got into a condition where treatment is needed rub them thoroughly at bedtime with a mixture composed of tincture of benzoin, one teaspoonful glycerin, four ounces, and rosewater, three ounces. A similar treatment is to rub a small portion of cold cream well into the skin. This may be done during the day several times, and it is protective treatment against chapping when about to go out into the cold. Wear loose kid gloves on the hands during the night after applying the lotion, as it aids in the softening and bleaching work. A teaspoonful of lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of glycerin and six teaspoonfuls of water, all mixed together, make a serviceable daytime application for the hands after dishwashing, sweeping or scrubbing. Wear rubber gloves when doing this work.

Nebraska In Ancient Days.

In late tertiary times what is now Nebraska was a low lying and swampy region, covered with vegetation similar to that now growing in most climates much farther south. Camels and llamas were abundant, and during the pliocene epoch great ground sloths and glyptodonts, whose relatives now live in South America, inhabited western Nebraska. Mastodons with tusks on both the upper and lower jaws, much like those of the miocene epoch, still persisted. Short legged rhinoceroses remained abundant, and there was a great variety of wolflike carnivora. Saber toothed tigers and true cats, some of them considerably larger than the modern tigers, were also abundant. Three toed horses were still numerous, but the modern genus equus was not among them. One of the most curious animals of the time in Kansas and Nebraska was a gopher-like rodent that had two large horns on his nose. Its enormous claws indicate good burrowing powers, and its horns also may have been used in digging.—Argonaut.

Professional Secret.

Tramp—Thankee, mum. That is the best meal I've had for two days. But I knew I'd get a good feed here.

Housekeeper—You did? Is there any mark on my fence?

"No'm. Marks don't go any more. People rubs 'em out or paints 'em over."

"Then how do you know?"

"I hate to give awway the secrets of the perfesh, mum."

"Then I'll make you an offer. Tell me how you know you'd get a good meal here and I'll give you another every time you pass through the town."

"That's fair, mum. I knew by the appearance of the yard."

"The yard?"

"Yes, mum. It has a mussed up, slipshod look, as if the folks was the shiftless sort that's too lazy to keep themselves from bein' fooled by any vagabond that comes along. Good day, mum."—Pittsburgh Press.

"Hello, sweetheart," said a voice as she took down the phone.

"Is that you, honey?" she answered.

"You bet it is. How are you?"

"Just fine."

"Well, you were looking mighty fine when I saw you last."

MAXWELL PERFORMS AEROPLANE STUNT

Used To Make 33 Feet Jump In Production of Movie Film, "The Secret of The Submarine."

What would you say of a motor car that is able to assume for a special occasion qualifications that properly belong to the aeroplane? Undoubtedly you would say that it couldn't be done. And yet a 1916 Maxwell touring car recently accomplished the seemingly impossible feat of leaping a chasm 33 feet wide and 21 feet deep, and it did it with 14 feet to spare.

The Maxwell added to its many remarkable accomplishments by becoming a bird automobile, when the directors of the American Film Co. began a quest for a car that could successfully make the jump across Las Posas creek, on the Camarillo ranch, near Camarillo, Cal. The bridge over the creek was washed out last January and the spot is an ideal one for the filming of scenes in connection with a serial photoplay, "The Secret Submarine," which is being produced by the American company.

Motion picture directors stop at nothing these days. The scenario writers in their wildest flights of fancy can't imagine stunts too difficult for the directors to encompass. So when the scenario of the "Secret of the Submarine" called for an automobile load of picture actors to leap a chasm, P. G. Lynch, studio director for the American Film company, at Santa Barbara, Cal., straightway started in to fill the contract.

First he found the locale, a deserted spot in the Camarillo ranch. Then he had built a board runway, 1000 feet long, to the approach side of the chasm. The next and greatest difficuity consisted in finding an automobile speedy enough to gather the necessary momentum for the leap and strong enough to withstand the terrific shock the long jump entailed.

Mr. Lynch looked far and wide for a car that would answer his purposes. He finally selected a Maxwell. His reason for making this selection is given best in his own words. In writing to Elmer J. Boeske, Maxwell representative at Santa Barbra, Mr. Lynch says:

"In order to safely accomplish this daring feat, the car must be able to carry three persons in a thirty-three feet leap over a precipitous gag in a washed-out bridge. Not only must it be able to attain a speed of fifty miles an hour before the gap is reached, but it must also have the strength to withstand the shock it will receive after making the flight through the air. We are keenly aware of the grave responsibility we assume in our endeavor to accomplish a feat of this kind. After earnest and conscientious investigation, however, we feel assured that the Maxwell car will meet all requirements for speed, strength and dependability so essential to the safety of the passengers and the success of the picture."

A large crowd gathered at the Camarillo ranch the day the perilous flight was filmed. In the Maxwell car were three passengers, all moving pictures performers for the American Film company. At the wheel was Thomas Chatterton and with him were Juanita Hansen, a plucky film actress, and George Clancy.

Mr. Chatterton drove the car at top speed the distance of the board incline and when it left the approach it was going fifty miles an hour. The spectators held their breath in suspenses as the car shot out in the air. But the fears of the onlookers were proven false by the remarkable performance of the Maxwell. It leaped upward and onward, describing a graceful curve in the air, and landed solidly on the opposite bank, with fourteen feet to spare. The total distance of the flight was forty-seven feet.

The impact seemed sufficient to completely destroy the car and its daring passengers, and an eloquent tribute to the compactness with which the Maxwell car is built is contained in the fact that not even a spring clip was broken. The car, after landing securely "on all fours." continued on its course and was brought to a stop later by its driver.

The crowd cheered wildly when realization came that the exploit had been performed successfully and without injury to the passengers or the automobile. To show how well the automobile withstood the tremendous strain, Mr. Chatterton and his fellow passengers drove back to town in it.

STEARNS AND TODD ASK FOR JEFFERSON ROAD

Members of the state highway commission have been deluged with petitions from residents of Stearns and Tood counties to route the Jefferson highway through their borders and through Wadena, Hubbard and Beltrami counties as well, by way of St. Cloud and Sauk Center.

The latest petition signed by 2,433 persons, is sent in by the Sauk Center Commercial club, accompanied by a letter signed by J. F. Cooper, president; V. F. Conklin, secretary, and a committee.

The Todd and Stearns county petitioners advance as arguments for their route the following claims: The road would pass through Itasca state park, over easy grades ona soil best adapted for solid roadbed, with materials accessible; it would pass through the central portions of the counties; it would pass through a populous section, and more aid could be expected; the highly cultivated condition of the land would give the traveler a good impression of the state.

The route asked for in the Todd county petition follows:

From St. Cloud west and north through Stearns, Todd, Wadena, Hubbard and Beltrami counties through St. Joseph, Collegeville, Avon, Albany, Freeport, Melrose, Sauk Center, Little Sauk, Round Prarie, Long Prairie, Browerville, Clariss, Eagle Bend, Bertha, Hewitt, Wadena, Leaf River, Sebeka, Menagha, Hubbard, Park Rapids, Arago, Itasca State park, Yola, to Bemidji.

It also has been suggested that two routes be designated, the road to proceed from the Twin Cities through Anoka to Elk River, and there branch off, one going by way of Princeton, Mille Lacs, Walker, Bemidji, Thief River Falls to St. Vincent, and the other through Clear Lake, St. Cloud Sauk Center, Alexandria, Detroit, Hawley, Crookston to St. Vincent.

GOOD ROADS DAY TUESDAY, JUNE 20

Governor Calls Upon People to Make Special Efforts to Improve Highways at That Time

Governor Burnquist has designated Tuesday, June 20, as good roads day, and in a proclamation asks all the people to join in improving the highways in their neighborhood at that time.

Last year the work thus done voluntarily on good roads day proved of great value in many communities. Men of every station left their busines and went out with road-making tools and put in perhaps the hardest day's work they had done for some time. The result was that many a stretch of bad highway which otherwise would have remained untouched was put in good condition. So successful did the innovation prove that it is likely to be continued every year. The general plan followed was for a crew of the volunteers to go out together and work on some particularly bad piece. This prevented the scattering of forces and put all the labor where it was most needed. Thief River Falls has a number of bad road spots in its neighborhood, and this would be a good time to have them fixed. The governor's proclamation is as foolows:

"The legislature of the State has wisely requested the designation by public proclamation of the third Tuesday of June in each year as "Good Roads Day."

"More and more is the public awakening to the necessity of road improvement and the great value and importance of permanent road construction which will lessen the cost of the marketing of products and continually increase the volume of traffic. It is a well known fact that the farmers of our state on account of bad roads are losing millions of dollars annually in the moving of their crops, aside from the loss occasioned through the lower value of their lands by reason of their inaccessibility to market.

"Good roads, however, influence not only the economic but the social conditions of a community by eliminating the loneliness and isolation of rural districts and by creating better opportunities for school attendance and social intercourses.

"Therefore, the people of the State are hereby requested to make special effort on Tuesday, the 20th day of June, to secure contributions of labor, material and money toward the improvement of public highways in their respective communities."

GAME WARDEN LECTURES BEFORE 18 LOCAL BOYS

Youngsters Promise to Shoot No More Singing Birds—Sling Shots Destroyed by Mothers.

Eighteen Thief River Falls boys were haled into Municipal court last week by Game Warden William Munch, of Crookston, to have a heart-to-heart talk regarding the unlawful killing of harmless singing birds. Several complaints had been made and the Woman's club took the matter up about six weeks ago. It was for the purpose of supressing the youngsters that Warden Munch called the boys on the carpet. "The killing of these birds is a violation of both the state and federal laws," said Judge Tarrant, "and if any more boys are caught shooting birds after today, they will be dealt with to the extent of the law. The fine is $25 or thirty days in jail, so boys, it will behoove you to lay off from this practice.

Warden Munch opened his lecture by telling the boys of the numerous complaints made against them and also told them of the valuable work done by these birds. The boys listened attentively. He then went on to question each one by asking, "Do you own a sling shot?" The lads forgetting that they were in the court room answered invariably "Yes, s'um." "Did you ever kill a robin?" asked the warden. "No mam" each one replied. At the close of the lecture Mr. Munch presented each boy with a circular from the government investigations, of a song bird's crop so they might be well posted on the good they do. The talk did the boys a great deal of good and they will without a doubt co-operate with the game warden in protecting these birds instead of exterminating them.

Why You Should Own a Maxwell

Comfort First, because it is a comfortable riding car. Plenty of room for five people; deep, soft cushions; springs made of the best spring steel, scientifically heat-treated, accurately suspended and balanced. You will always be comfortable in a Maxwell.

Appearance Second, because the Maxwell is a trim, smart, good-looking car.

Many makers of heavy, high priced cars, as you know, have copied the general lines, the shape of the body and hood of the Maxwell. This is more of a compliment than an infringement.

Service Third, because the Maxwell, being a product of thirteen years evolution, is so designed and manufactured that it gives unfailing, consistent and and satisfying service to thousands of owners.

Maxwell cars are made of the best materials that money and brains can buy—and they are made right. You can get out of any car only what is put into it.

Low First-Cost Fourth, because you get everything in a Maxwell that you can get in any car and you get it for less money.

The answer to this is that the Maxwell is a light car and it is built in enormous quantities. The Maxwell Co. is one of the three largest producers of high grade motor cars in the world.

Low After-Cost Fifth, because the Maxwell will give you more miles per dollar than any car built.

We say this without hesitation or doubt. It is our honest belief and we are willing to prove it by Maxwell owners, by comparison with any other car or by any other way you suggest or prefer.

The Maxwell will please you. We know it will. Let us arrange for a demonstration and we'll take the responsibility of satisfying you completely.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. What Oen Merc. Co.

of Thief River Falls

have to say about cream separators this week

Ninety-eight per cent of the world's creameries use De Lavals exclusively.

CREAMERYMEN have better opportunities than other separator users to see which separators are most efficient and durable. That is why they select De Lavals.

More De Lavals are in use on farms than all other makes combined. Time and experience have proved to a vast majority of farmers that no other separator gives as good service as the De Laval.

Each year, in the United States and Canada alone, some 40,000 farmers discard inferior separators and replace them with De Lavals. They learn from experience that the so-called cheap separators are wasteful and costly at any price. They would have saved money if they had bought a De Laval in the first place.

If you will bear these facts in mind in selecting a separator, you will realize that the wisest course is to buy a De Laval.

We will be glad to bring a De Laval out to your farm and let you try it out and see for yourself that it does offer you the greatest value for your money. We are willing to prove every claim we make for the De Laval. Just phone us or send a post card and we will see that you get an opportunity to try a De Laval.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

CITY IS PROUD OF PROWLER EDITION

Editors Receiving Deserved Praise For Excellent Work Done on High School Annual.

"The Prowler," the first publication of its kind ever gotten out by a graduating class of the Thief River Falls high school, has been received with more favor than is ordinarily bestowed upon works of a similar nature. The book is one which of which any school might well be proud and every citizen should own a copy. It will be a handy volume to refer to in the years to come, and as it is beautifully printed and substantially bound it will stand any amount of handling.

The labor connected with getting all the data required to make such a book of this kind of any value is far greater than most people realize, and the young men and women who undertook the job are entitled to much praise for the manner in which the work was carried out. While errors may have crept into the publication, this was to be expected, and the experience gained will aid in safeguarding aginst mistakes in the future issues.

The cost of getting out this book has been considerable. The cuts appearing in its pages alone foot up over $100, and when to this is added the cost of printing and binding it will be seen that the sale will have to be general if expenses are to be met. It would be a sorry commentary upon the enterprise of citizens if the editors were left to foot any part of the bills necessarily incurred, as they merely intended to cover expenses in any event.

A large number of the books have already been sold, and now that graduation is over a general canvass will be made with the object of disposing of the balance. The Times hopes that anyone approached will see their way clear to part with $1.50 for a copy of this annual. Not only is the book itself worth more than this, but being able to square away all accounts without any trouble will give those in charge more confidence in themselves and convince them that any worthy work undertaken by them will be appreciated by the people of the city.

VIKING LAD NEW SPUD CHAMPION

Oscar Larson Demonstrates That Northwestern Minnesota is World Beater as Potato Grower.

OVER 605 BUSHELS TO ACRE

"The Country Gentleman," Foremost Among Agricultural Journals, Devotes Much Space to Young Man's Achievement.

Oscar Larson, sixteen years of age, residing at Viking, a few miles to the north of Thief River Falls, in Marshall county, is the champion potato grower in America. His achievement, has broken all previous records anywhere in the country, and is 163 bushels ahead of any record made in a boys' and girls' contest.

The Country Gentleman, published by the same concern as the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies Home Journal, and perhaps the foremost magazine dealing with agricultural subjects printed in America, devotes considerable space to young Mr. Larson and his potato experiment, and as the journal referred to reaches every part of the country, the young farmer is something of a celebrity.

The Country Gentleman also calls attention to the fact that the second prize was won by Minnesota. Elizebeth Tofte, 11 years of age, living in the extreme northeastern part of the state. Her record was 504 bushels per acre, the largest yield ever secured by a girl contestant.

Below is reproduced that part of the Country Gentleman's article dealing with the work of these two Minnesota children:

"Two new American potato champions have been produced by children's contest work in Minnesota. Oscar Larson, sixteen years old, living near Viking, Minnesota, is the new national boy champion, with an attested yield of 605½ bushels per acre.

"The new American girl champion is Elizabeth Tofte, thirteen years old, at Tofte, Minnesota, in the extreme northeastern part of the state, with a return of 504 bushels an acre. The largest yield obtained previously in the United States in children's contests has been 442 bushels an acre.

"The contest was limited to the northern part of Minnesota and was conducted by the extension department of the Minnesota Agricultural School. Of the 857 children who entered, over 300 finished. To assist in the standardization of varieties only two classes were arranged; the Green Mountain and Rural New Yorker classes. Cash prizes aggregating $150 were given by the Northern Minnesota Development association to winners in each class. Twenty-four counties participated, Beltrami alone having 350 entrants.

"Oscar Larson planted his potatoes in hills a foot apart and rows two and a half feet from each other. The land was rich and sandy and the seed was covered four inches deep.

"The little field was well stirred before and after planting. It was cultivated once with a two-horse cultivator and twice with a one-horse cultivator. The plants were hilled up and the weeds pulled out. Paris green was used several times to kill the potato bugs. When the potatoes were dug just before the frost they yielded at the rate of 605½ bushels an acre.

"Elixebeth Tofte prepared her seed bed and planted the potatoes in hills from twelve to eighteen inches apart in rows three feet from each other. The ground was harrowed twice before the potatoes were planted and several times after the plants appeared. A hoe and a cultivator were used in stirring up the soil during the summer. The plants were sprayed several times with arsenate of lead and Bordeaux mixture to kill the insects and prevent disease.

"In her report Miss Tofte says: 'If I were to do the work again I should treat my seed potatoes with formalin to prevent scab and let the potatoes sprout slightly before they were planted.'

"In addition to the cash prizes the two champions will receive a free trip in 1916 to the Minnesota State Fair as members of the Farm Boys' and Farm Girls' camps.

JOINT SUMMER MEETINGS AT DETROIT JUNE 16-17

Red River Valley Development Association and Live Stock Breeders Will Hold Session.

Detroit will be the scene of the most important mid-summer development meeting of the 1916 season when the Red River Valley Development association, the State Live Stock Breeders' association and the Red River Valley Live Stock Breeders' association meet there on June 16 and 17. The people of the Becker county city have made elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the delegates and every city and town in this district will be represented by the largest crowd of boosters ever gathered in the history of these organizations.

Among the speakers who will deliver addresses are: Governor Burnquist, Carlos Avery of the game and fish commission; Dean A. F. Woods of the department of agriculture, University of Minnesota; C. F. Curtis of the Iowa college of agriculture, and C. G. Selvig of Crookston. Besides these each county will have representatives present who will join in the discussions. Pennington will be represented by Supt. J. H. Hay of the Thief River Falls schools, who is the president of the breeders' association of this county, and C. A. Pitkin, who will be one of the speakers on "Red River Valley Problems."

An attempt will be made to secure a large delegation from this city to attend this meeting. The subjects are those in which the people of the entire Red River Valley are most vitally interested, and they will be handled by practical men of wide reputation and experience.

Mr. Went-And-Cut-It —Here's Mr. 'Gets-It'

The New Plan Corn Cure That's as Sure as the Rising Sun.

"Glad to meet you!" says the razor to the corn. "I'll bleed for you!" says the corn to the razor. Razors and corns love each other. Corns love to be cut, picked, gouged, salved, plastered and jerked out,—they grow faster. Mr. and Mrs. Went-and-Cut-It realize it now,—they use "Gets-It" instead—it's the wonderful, simple corn-cure that never fails. Stops pain. You apply it in 2 seconds, it dries at once, the corn is doomed. Nothing to stick to the stocking or press on the corn. It means good-night to plasters, salves, diggers, razors and toe-bundling. You can wear smaller shoes. Your corns will come right off, "clean as a whistle." Never inflames healthy flesh. The world's biggest selling corn cure.

"Why, O Why, Did I Do It? 'Gets-It' for Me After This—If I Live!"

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.

CONTROL WORKS NEEDED AT LAKE

Water in Red Lakes Highest For Many Years and Indian Farms Are Inundated.

CITIZENS MAKE INSPECTION

All Ditches Along River Above Highlanding Full to Overflowing and Many Fields Are Still Under Water.

A party of citizens composed of Senator D. P. ONeil, Gay Halvorson and M. C. Cutter of Thief River Falls, O. D. Dent and J. J. Opshal of Bemidji, returned Sunday night from a trip to the Red Lakes, where they had been for the purpose of making an inspection of flood conditions. They were accompanied on the return trip by W. T. Dickens, superintendent at the agency. It had been hoped that a representative of the Indian department at Washington would he here to make the journey with the others, but word was received that it would be impossible to send a man at this time. The members of the party were instructed, however, to make bench marks while at the lake, these to be used later by the government engineers in making the survey of the river. A bill for this survey, introduced by Congressman Steenerson, recently passed congress, and the data gathered by the volunteer committee will be forwarded to the department.

In speaking of the conditions along the river and at the lake Senator O'Neil said that thewater had madeit impossible for the farmers in many places to do anything in their fields. "Above Highlanding," said Mr. O'neil, "the ditches are full and much of the land is under water. This condition is to a large extent caused by the ditching operations on government and state lands in eastern Beltrami and Koochiching counties. These ditches drain an enoromous area into Red Lake, and no provision has been made at the outlet for taking care of the surplus." Senator O'Neil stated that he did not believe the lakes would reach their highest level this year until in July, as there is an enormous amount of water yet remaining to be drained into the basin.

The lake is now at the highest point in many years, being considerably over the stage observed when the government made its survey. The water is crowding out over the banks in many places and inundating the flat country on which the Indian farms are located.

Senator O'Neil cays that there is no hope of relief from this condition unless the river is dredged and the water in the lake kept at a safe level by controlling works at the outlet. The lands in the neighborhood will never be worth anything for agricultural purposes until the danger from these spring floods has been averted, and this can only be done by controlling the outflow and straightening Red Lake river so as to enable that stream to freely carry the tremendous surplus emptied into the lakes by the drainage ditches.

The party left the agency at 11:30 on Sunday morning, being in charge of Captain John Mostrum of the launch Neptune, arrived at the outlet at one o'clock and had lunch. Highlanding was reached at 7:30 in the evening and Thief River Falls at 1:30 in the morning. They had a very enjoyable trip.

The Thief River Falls members of the expedition speak in the highest terms of the work being done by Government Agent Dickens at the agency. He is an instructor as well as administrator and is surely bringing his charges away from the old Indian communistic idea and teaching them to think and act for themselves. Many of the Indians onw have god farms with flocks of sheep, blooded cattle and fine horses. Mr. Dickens is very anxious that something be done in order to prevent a reccurance of this year's conditions, and states that if he can get a small paprorpiation he will put the government dredge to work widening and deepening the outlet. This would greatly relieve the situation, but he agrees that the only way in which the lands about the lakesand along the river will be proof against inundation is to construct regulating works and straighten out the channel of the stream.

FARMER ROUND-UP WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14

To be Held at The Fred Beerbomer Farm—Band and Notable Speakers to be Present.

On Wednesday, June 14, the Pennington county round-up of farmers and business men, a feature of community relationship inagurated by the agricultural department of the local high school, will be held at the Fred Beerbower farm, 4 miles east of Thief River Falls. Plans are rapidly being made by Professor Hay and H. W. Werner of the high school for one of the largest gatherings of its kind in the history of the county.

The Beerbower farm is an excellent spot for such an occassion, there being a fine grove of trees which will make it convenient for the picnickers. Everyone is requested to forget their cares and worries and join in the big jollification. It is estimated that approximately 2,000 people will be present.

Among some of the speakers who have been secured are: Dean F. Woods, Prof. M. Donovan, state farm demonstrator, Prof. F. E. Baldwin, C. G. Selvig, of the state experimental station at Crookston, C. A. Carlson, stock farmer at Erskine, and N. P. Hanson, of Detroit. There will also be several local speakers on the program. The Thief River Falls band will be secured for the event to furnish the music, besides there will be a program of races, games, tugs of war between rival farming districts.

SENIORS FROLIC DURING LAST DAY OF SCHOOL

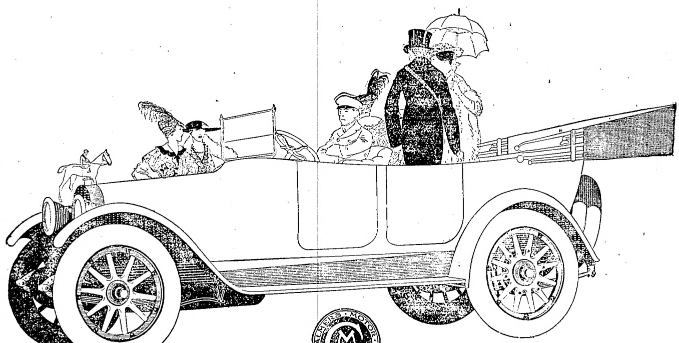
Serious Work Incident to Finishing of School Course Relieved by Clever Fun.

Last Thursday was the final day of real school for the Seniors, who make up the class of 1916. Examinations began Friday and have been continued throughout the week. The Seniors took it into their heads to make the final day a memorable one, after having reached the goal throughout four years of hard study. That these young people are in the habit of doing things when once they tackle a proposition, was again evidenced. On entering the assembly room one would think he was in the court of some king, and judging from the lavish decoration of the room, the originators of the idea must have labored long into the night on Wednesday to complete their work. From the center of the ceiling the class colors were strung to the corners of the room, besides plum blossoms were used profusely, and gave the room a fragrant odor. The stage was decorated with palms and each Senior's seat was decorated in the class colors and plum blossoms. The statute of "Minerva" was removed to the stage and wreathed in the colors of the class. Several pranks were also played, such as converting the piano into a snare drum by placing papers on the strings, attaching auto horns to the buzzers in class rooms, hanging a pail in "Minerva's" hand with a sign attached, "Help the Blind."

At the close of the exercises the Senior chorus were granted their request to sing a final song and rendered, "How Can I Leave Thee?" The Junior chorus responded by singing, "Auld Lang Syne." Miss Symneva Grindeland, principal, made a few complimentary remarks to the Seniors, who had been under her guidance during the past four years. There was no response in person on the part of the Seniors, but instead came the clear tinkling of chimes from the clock case operated by some mechanical device—announcing the close of the final meeting of these present as a class.

All day the '16 banner wafted in the breezes from the flagpole, this being in compliment to those who were instrumental in issuing the class annual—"The Prowler." Over four hundred books have been printed and it is evident that it will fall far short of the demand.

This Six-40 Seven-Passenger Chalmers—$1450 Detroit



Chalmers Motor Co. Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.
Quality First

THE ANSWER

Selling this Six-40 is the easiest thing I do.

I sell her on looks or performance, and at a saving of $550.

The past master, the man who knows cars from A to Z, is quickest to buy. I put him in. He drives twice around the block, through a stretch of sand or mud, up a bad grade, and usually says "She's mine."

Her performance—that's the answer.

Selling the inexperienced man is easy, but not quite so easy. I first sell his eyes. I let him look her over; note her lines and color. He couldn't avoid her color. For she gives a pleasant shock to the optic nerve, finished in any one of three refreshing shades—Oriford maroon or Valentine green, with hoods to match; or Meteor blue with black hood.

Then I get him in the car and demonstrate. Five or ten miles suffices. He then begins indicating his willingness to put his signature on the order.

After all, I don't rely on sales conversation to sell the Six-40. I leave it largely to a man's instincts.

Because I know performance is something you must recognize. She's there with the punch; she's got the everlasting spunk and go. And there's no need explaining why you ought to buy. You know why, full well. Her performance furnishes the answer.

No, you can't dodge performance. And therefore you can't get away from this Six-40. once you've driven her.

She's like a young cavalry horse. Throw away your crop and spurs and just watch 'er go.

On hills or wherever power is paramount she has more of the faithful old Norman blood in her veins. She's never beaten back by opposition. She knows no such thing as a back-breaking load.

She combines the agility of a Mercury with the strength of a Samson whose power can bend, break or crush.

You've a new and rich sensation to enjoy if you never have set foot to her accelerator.

You'll say "She's there" and you'll know why $9,000,000 worth of Six-40 Chalmers have been bought in the last five months by persons who intended paying not less than $2,000 for a car.

You'll know why they gave one look and bought and saved $550 in the transaction.

I'll make this challenge—throw my hat in the center of the ring: A man possessed of all his senses and faculties, I will sell in half an hour.

I am ready to match a half hour of my time against a half hour of yours today. Come on with your big guns.

Performance—that's the answer.

Ask me about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

Judicial Ditch Number 42, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota.

Clerk of Court's Notice of Hearing on Petition. Engineer's Report and Viewer's Report in The Matter of Judicial Ditch Number 42.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
SS.
Pennington County,

District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

In the matter of the petition of Soren C. Jensen and others for a public drainage ditch in the Counties of Pennington and Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42).

Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, praying for the construction of a public drainage ditch, designated and numbered by the Clerk of said District Court of Pennington County, Minnesota, as Judicial Ditch forty two (42) and that the preliminary hearing provided by law before the Judge of the District Court has been had thereon and the said Judge appointed a Civil Engineer to make a survey of the route of said ditch and to perform such other duties in relation thereto as are provided by law, and that the said engineer duly made his report thereon and filed the same in the office of the Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, Minnesota, and that the said Judge of the District Court duly appointed viewers to assess damages and benefits in the matter of said ditch and to perform all other duties in relation thereto as provided by law, and that the said viewers have completed their work and have filed their report in the office of said Clerk; and that as appears by the report of the Engineer hereinbefore mentioned, the starting point, route and termini of said ditch designated as Judicial Ditch number forty two (42), including a description of the land over which the same passes is as follows, viz:

Said ditch is located within Township One Hundred Fifty-two (152), N., Range Forty One (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Pennington and Red Lake Counties, Minnesota, and is described as follows:

Commencing at a point Twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty two (22) and twenty three (23) and twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) said town, so as to provide an additional outlet for Judicial Ditch No. 1, Red Lake and Pennington Counties, thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the section line between sections twenty six (26) and twenty seven (27) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty(20) feet north of the section corner between sections twenty six (26), twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) and thirty five (35), thence west parallel with and twenty (20) feet north of the section line between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34) to a point twenty (20) feet east and twenty (20) feet north of the quarter corner between sections twenty seven (27) and thirty four (34), thence south, parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the quarter line a distance of nine hundred and five (905) feet, at which point said ditch terminates and has its outlet in the Clearwater river.

And the said engineer's report shows the dimensions of said ditch and the particular and exact location thereof, and the names of the owners of the lands and the names of the municipal corporations and other corporations that will be effected by the construction of said ditch as the same appears in the report of the viewers hereinbefore mentioned, are as follows, towit:

SOME farmers look at this Silo proposition in the wrong way.

Some look upon it as a tremendous, risky proposition. As an affair which should be discussed long and earnestly before investing.

The Silo is the most practical thing that ever happened. Its not a gold brick, its a gold mine which every farmer can have without paying a cent in advance.

The one thing to do is to get one—not to just talk about getting one.

There is one way you can lose money on Silos, and that is by being without one.

Order yours before June 15th. Prices on our two wall Silo will advance 20 per cent at that time.

THE COMMUNITY PICNIC IS NEXT

Monster Gathering to be Held at The Fred Beerbower Place on Wednesday, June 14.

CITY AND COUNTRY FOLKS

All Will Join in Making This First Get-Together Meeting of Pennington County People a Great Success.

The first genuine town and country community fair in Pennington county will be held at the Fred Beerbower place, southeast of Thief River Falls, on Wednesday, June 14. The affair will be under the auspices of the Pennington County Live stock Breeders association, and arrangements have been made for one of the biggest events of its kind ever taking place in the state.

The Beerbower farm is ideally located for an outing and picnic of this kind. It is about four and one-half miles southeast of the city, on the bank of the river. Besides being one of the best farms in the neighborhood, where stock and crops are shown to their best advantage, the natural surroundings are such as to make a day spent there one long to be remembered.

Many Well Known Speakers.

Some of the best known speakers on agricultural subjects in the Northwest will be present at the gathering to deliver addresses. Among these are T. A. Hoverstad, agricultural specialist for the Soo railroad; Prof. F. E. Balmer of Duluth, federal supervisor of county agents in Minnesota; C. G. Selvig, superintendent of the Crookston experimental farm; L. A. Hanson, of Westberry, one of the foremost dairymen in the state; C. A. Carlson, the famous stock raiser of Erskine, and others. Besides these there will be a number of local speakers on the program, who will give five minute addresses along lines of general farming. There will also be a dairy demonstration by Prof. Donovan and a fat stock demonstration by Prof. Werner.

Bring Your Baskets.

The Thief River Falls band will go along to furnish the music for the occasion. There will also be a program of sports in which anyone may participate. There will be two tugs of war, the first contest being between the farmers of the north side and those on the south side of the river, and the other between a Thief River Falls team and one from the country. There will also be four foot races for men and boys, suitable prizes being awarded to the winners.

Will Establish Custom.

While this is the first one of these community picnics to be held here, an attempt will be made to establish the event as a yearly custom. These gatherings have been found of great value to the people of both town and country in other localities where they have been tried out, and the indications are that they will be just as popular here. Take next Wednesday off and spend the day in the country. You will find health, instruction and amusement.

Jitneys Wanted.

Every business man who can possibly leave his business on that day is urged to meet at the Commercial club rooms at 10:30 a. m. sharp, and all who have autos to meet there, ready to convey parties to the grounds. Jitney drivers are invited to have their autos at the club early as many plan to go who have no auto of their own or have made plans to ride with someone who has. It is expected that the jitneys will charge only a nominal fee for the round trip.

STENVICK CALLS ON CONSTITUENTS HERE

Member of Legislature From This District Seeking Re-election on His Record.

Oscar T. Stenvick of Bagley, representing the counties of Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater in the state legislature, was in the city last week calling on his many friends and looking over the situation prior to the primary election. Mr. Stenvick wants to succeed himself, and it is doubtful if a candidate for the house in Minnesota is more entitled to receive such endorsement.

His services to the smaller counties through his stand on the proposition to reduce the one mill road tax was alone sufficient to entitle him to a reelection at the hands of the people. This measure was an attempt on the part of the larger counties to so alter the system of apportionment that the bulk of the money derived from this tax would be returned to them. This was bitterly contested, and Representative Stenvick was one of the strong men in the fight for the retention of the present law.

The increase in the state aid for schools was another matter which Mr. Stenvick was largely influential in getting passed. This makes possible the maintenance of normal and other advanced departments in the smaller cities of the state and was a most important piece of legislation. His record on temperance is too well known to need recounting here. In fact, he is one of the most active and dependable men in the legislature and is deserving of the endorsement he seeks.

LOCAL CLOTHING FIRM DISSOLVES PARTNERSHIP

E. O. Mogenson Acquires Interest of Hans Jerdee and Will Continue the Business.

A business deal was consumated yesterday, whereby E. O. Mogenson takes over the interest of his partner, Hans Jerdee, in the clothing business conducted during the past two months under the name of Jerdee & Mogenson. The last named gentleman a short time ago purchased the interest of T. L. Reedy, the firm having been known as Jerdee & Reedy since starting in business here a little over a year ago. After trying out the prospects he has become so well satisfied with the outlook that he has now purchased the interest of the other partner and will become the sole owner of one of the finest clothing stores in northern Minnesota.

Mr. Jerdee has not yet decided just where he will locate, but it is probable that he will return to the cities. His experience up to the time of coming here had been entirely with the trade in large centers of population, and because of this fact he believes that a more satisfactory field for his activities lies in that direction. He is a business man of the highest order and while here enjoyed a good patronage. The stock carried has been of the best procurable and the store has always catered to trade of the higher class. The retiring partner has a host of friends who will wish him success wherever he may decied to locate.

Mr. Mogenson has only been here a short time, but his observations have lead him to believe that any properly conducted business enterprise will be successful here. He is a clothing man with years of experience, is an expert on qualities and intends to keep up the high standard maintained by the store under the former proprietors.

B. P. O. ELKS LODGE TO CELEBRATE FLAG DAY

Committee Named and Work On Program Has Begun—First Celebration of Its Kind in City.

Flag day, Wednesday, June 14, will be observed in Thief River Falls this year under the auspices of the B. P. O. Elks lodge. At a meeting held last week this move was decided upon and a committee, consisting of N. W. Tarrant, M. C. Cutter and Emil Zeh, was named to make the proper arrangements for the celebration. The committee is now at work outlining the program for the occasion. This will be the first time Flag day has ever been observed in the city and the Elks are to be commended in their endeavor to instill the spirit of patriotism into the young folks of the community and revive it among the old. A monster parade will be held in the evening, headed by the band, and will be a feature of the day.

Racing Mules—Whow.

Racing mules. Yes, that's it, besides a fine string of crack racing horses, will be brought to Thief River Falls for the Pennington county fair in August from Fox Lake, Wisconsin. Secretary W. J. LaBree was instructed Wednesday evening at a special meeting of the board of directors to close a contract with the Wisconsin owner for the appearance of these steeds at the big 1916 exposition. The meeting was held at the Commercial club rooms in connection with the club and at this time the fair association turned the key to the fair grounds over to the committees in charge of the big 4th of July celebration, to make use of the grounds during that day.

To Attend Convention.

Fire Chief Paul Medderigh, Dennis LeSage, Phil Zeh and Sheriff W. J. LaBree will leave Monday for Chisholm, Minn., to attend the annual convention of the Minnesota fire fighters.

51 "SIXTEENERS" JOIN ALUMNI

Large Student Body Bade Farewell to Their Alma Mater Last Thursday Evening.

BANQUET GIVEN MONDAY

Dr. James A. Parsons of Minneapolis, Delivered Inspiring Address At Final Exercises of Passing Class.

The alumni of the Thief River Falls high school was augmented by 51 new members last Thursday evening when the 1916 graduating class was presented with their diplomas, denoting that the four short years of study in high school had come to a close.

The final commencement exercises were attended by a large crowd of Thief River Falls parents, pupils and distant residents who came to listen to the various numbers on the program on the eve of the young men and women's passing. The first number was a musical selection by the high school chorus, under the direction of Miss Evelyn Grindeland. The invocation was then pronounced and was followed by a salutatory address by Miss Mary Von Prichard, who extended a hearty welcome to all.

Excellent Address.

Dr. James Parsons, of Minneapolis, who had been secured to deliver the commencement address was the third number on the program and delivered an inspiring address on "Factors That Contribute Toward Success." Dr. Parsons brought out many good points for the young people who were about to depart into the world and face life's battles. The address was both educational and profitable besides having entertaining features.

A musical selection followed by Misses Myrtle Berg, Dorothy Bottleson and Nora Holmes, after which Milton Weeks delivered the valedictory address. Mr. Weeks handled it in a most capable manner and showed much hard work and study in its preparation. The presentation of diplomas followed by Dr. O. F. Mellby, president of the board of education. "Alma Mater" was then rendered by the class of 1916 and the benediction followed.

Alumni Banquet.

On Monday evening the annual reunion and banquet of the Thief River Falls high school alumni was held at the Brumund hotel, there being thirty-seven in attendance. Prof. J. H. Hay spoke in the absence of the president and extended a hearty welcome to all. Miss Lena Lonson, vice president, called upon Reuben Aga, president of the class of 1916, for a toast and he responded in a pleasing manner. A delicious five-course banquet was served and musical numbers and toasts were given between courses. The following program was given:

Instrumental Solo—Misses Emma Bakke and Gena Granum.

Vocal Solo—Miss Elsie Watson; Miss Grace Wilson, piano accompanist.

Toasts by Harry Prichard and John Brumund.

Officers Elected.

Following the banquet the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. Those elected were:

President—Harry Prichard.
Vice President—Francis Burns.
Treasurer—John Brumund.
Secretary—Miss Avis Akre.

Immediately after the banquet the party adjourned to the I. O. O. F. hall, where dancing was indulged in.

Kicked by a Horse.

Oliver Severson was injured the first of the week when he was kicked by a horse above the ankle. Mr. Severson was returning to the Douglass farm after completing his work in the field when the accident happened. He has been compelled to use crutches part of the time but is now able to get around fairly well with the use of a walking stick.

BOAT WILL CONVEY FARMERS

Arrangements have been made to convey the farmers and others living on the north side of the river across in boats on the day of the big farmers' round-up at the Beerbower grove, south of the city. Teams may be left on the north side. The boat to be available for passengers during the picnic. A large attendance from the north side of the river is expected, as this will do away with residents making a round-about trip to the Beerbower farm.

DAM COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING

Free and Friendly Discussion as to Best Means of Meeting Situation Now Confronting City.

WORKING FOR SOLUTION

Ownership of Dam by City Would Mean Big Outlay at Present But Would Probably Prove Wisest Course.

The first meeting of the citizens' committee appointed last week by Mayor F. H. Gambell for the purpose of securing data relative to the electric power situation in the city of Thief River Falls, met in the council room on Monday night. The members are divided in their opinion as to the best manner in which to proceed, but are agreed that something will have to be done in order to meet the requirements of the people of the city in this particular matter. The discussions were of the friendliest character, every member of the committee seeming only desirous of arriving at a satisfactory solution and each one willing to subscribe to whatever course it seemed wisest to pursue. The committee is composed of the following representative citizens: W. W. Prichard, Sr., chairman; T. L. Melgaard, H. S. Dahlen, T. P. Hamre and Robert McGinn. City Clerk A. H. Fasel was requested to act as clerk of the committee, his presence being deemed necessary in any event, as many of the books and records in his charge will have to be examined.

Change to Alternating Current.

The committee members were unanimously of the opinion that the first thing to be done was to change the electric system from a direct to an alternating current. Certain of the committemen had looked into this matter and believed that a saving of nearly 30 per cent in the amount of power required could be made by making the alteration. The cost of this work can be definitely ascertained and it is likely that the change will be recommended regardless of what argreement is reached on the dam proposition.

Price Paid is Low.

Coming to the question of what the power generated by the dam is worth, it was practically agreed that its value to the city was about $3,000 per year more than is now being paid for it. In addition to this there is the lease held by the Hanson-Barzen Milling company, by the terms of which that concern is paying $150 per month, having the right to use the first hundred horse-power generated. The city's contract has still nine years to run, while that of Hanson & Barzen expires in eight years. Should the city buy the dam property, the milling concern's lease would automatically be taken over and the service continued at the price now fixed. This would mean that, admitting the claim made that the service is worth $3,000 per year in excess of what is now paid for it, the yearly revenue would be $6,900.

As an added argument for the purchase of the property it is held that during the nine years still remaining of the city's lease-term, a total of $18,900 will have been paid over, and the city will be no nearer owning its own power plant than it is at present. In addition to this the Hanson & Barzen company will have paid $14,400 for the eight years their lease has still to run. This is a total to be paid for the service during the life of these leases of $33,300.

The Other Side.

Against this view of the matter is placed the argument that even though the city bought and improved the dam it would still be compelled to maintain an auxiliary plant. It is claimed that in any event engine power will be found necessary, and while the cost of this would in all probability be less than at present, still it would constitute a fixed charge against the plant.

As it Now Looks.

Competent engineers have stated that it would cost about $115,000 to construct a dam of the kind necessary to meet the requirements of the city. At six per cent this would represent a yearly interest charge of $6,900 on the full amount. If we add the $2,100 now paid by the city, the $1,800 paid by Hanson & Barzen and, the $3,000 in excess of this sum which competent authorities claim the power generated is worth, we have exactly the same amount—$6,900. In this $115,000 calculation the $38,000 which must be paid for the present property is included.

It will probably be claimed that money can be borrowed by the city at a lower rate than six per cent, but by the time all expenses connected with securing it have been figured up, it will be found that the larger amount is not so far off.

After Nine Years, What?

One thing that no one should lose sight of is the fact that after the present lease expires it will not be renewed at any such figure as is now being paid. The owners of the dam will at that time be in a position to demand the full value of the service rendered and the city will be helpless. The property itself will have increased enormously in value because of its greater earning power and, because of the relation in which it stands to the city, will be a particularly desirable holding. The dam owners can then submit a figure just below the cost of furnishing electricity by means of other kinds of power, and the city will accept the terms because it cannot help itself.

BIG SHIPMENTS FROM COUNTRY CREAMERIES

Goodridge, Grygla and Highlanding Send Out Over 17,000 Pounds of Butter in May.

Each succeeding report from the creameries in the county prove that more interest is steadily being taken in the dairy cow as a wealth producer. The hen, also, is coming into a place of honor in this section of the country, and these are among the best indications for continued prosperity.

During the month of May there were 17,249 pounds of butter shipped over the Minnesota Northwestern road from Goodridge alone. This is the product of the creameries at Grygla and Highlanding, and proves that the farmers in that section are fast cutting away from the single grain crop idea and devoting more attention to diversified farming.

During this period there was also shipped from the same station a total of 402 cases of eggs. This represents 12,060 dozens or 144,720 eggs. The reader may figure out for himself just how many breakfasts this would mean for the average family.

The railway company is working gravel crews night and day in order to get the roadbed in first-class shape for the heavy traffic of the late summer and fall months. The business from this district will this year be the heaviest in the history of the road.

EXPECT 2,000 AT "TELELAG" MEET

One of the Biggest Conventions in City's History Will Be Here on June 23-24.

The general committee in charge of the arrangements for the "Telelag" meeting here on June 23 and 24, are making plans for the entertainment of 2,000 delegates. These will come from all parts of Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa and Wisconsin, and a particular effort is being made to see that they are properly taken care of while in the city.

The local committee is composed of Gay Halvorson, Andrew Trovaton, E. J. Overland and H. K. Strand. These gentlemen report that their part of the work is progressing nicely and that by the time the first delegates arrive everything will be in readiness. One feature of the entertainment to be furnished by the people of the city will be an auto ride to nearby points of interest on the second day of the convention. Owners of autos are requested to notify John Bratrud, president of the Auto club, placing their machines at the disposal of the committee.

The Commercial club has sent invitations to every member of the "lag" and delegate's tags will be issued as soon as these arrive and are registered at the club.

The Auditorium and Commercial club rooms have been placed at the service of the visitors. Both places will be appropriately decorated and everything will be done to make the stay of the delegates pleasant. Chairman Halvorson has for some time been in communication with President A. A. Trovaton of the "lag," who is a resident of Barnesville, and is assured by that gentleman that the meeting will be one of the largest ever held by a similar organization in America.

$10,000 Paid in One Day.

County Treasurer Theodore Liden says that the last day during which taxes might be paid without incurring the penalty provided by law proved to be one of the biggest days in the history of the county, from a financial standpoint. Wednesday, May 31, was the last day of grace and on that date $10,000 passed over the counter for personal property taxes. Mr. Liden says that this leaves about the same amount outstanding as a year ago.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT CLUB SHOOT

C. A. Nason Demonstrates That He is in a Class by Himself in Amateur Division.

TIES HIGH PROFESSIONAL

E. S. Ashley of Bemidji, Gets Second Money With 138, and J. D. Anthony of Grand Rapids is Third With 135.

C. A. Nason of Thief River Falls, again carried off the high honors at the spring shoot of the Thief River Gun club held here on Tuesday. Nearly all the crack shots of Northern Minnesota were present and entered in the competition, which was one of the most successful thus far this season.

There were six professionals present, the following being the scores hung up in the competitive events in which they participated, shooting at 150 birds:

J. H. Stair, Crookston	140
J. E. Dickey, Minneapolis	139
H. C. Rinkel, Minneapolis	135
R. R. Barber, Minneapolis	137
E. E. Simmons, Minneapolis	115
G. E. Trent, Brainerd	132

The scores in which money or other prizes were put up were as follows:

Von B. Boyd, Crookston	122
J. D. Anthoney, Grand Rapids	135
J. H. McKinney, T. R. Falls	123
C. A. Nason, T. R. Falls	140
D. Farrell, Warren	131
A. C. White, Brainerd	129
Frank Holland, Devils Lake	131
Geo. G. Johnson, T. R. Falls	102
E. L. Ashley, Bemidji	138
Charles Olson, Roseau	133
Carl Von Roler, Roseau	122
R. A. Gilbertson, Roseau	127
J. W. Jewett, Roseau	132
A. O. Hogan, Roseau	107
P. G. Gaass, Red Lake Falls	104
Walter Buchanan, Milton, N. D.	135-91
C. E. Grinder, Warren	135-102
V. M. Healey, Red Lake Falls	135-99
W. A. Barnard, T. R. Falls	94
M. McFarland, T. R. Falls	111
Arthur Genzel, T. R. Falls	121
W. W. Prichard, Jr., T. R. Falls	113
W. A. Devenny, T. R. Falls	106

Nason, McKinney, Brumund, N. D. Anderson, Johnson and Prichard attended the shoot at Warren yesterday. Nason tied with White of Brainerd for second place, Chapin, of Sorbie, Mont., winning the first prize.

A Valuable Load.

Lewis Nelson, former sheriff of Lake County, who is now residing on a farm in the township of Smiley, was a business caller in Thief River Falls last Saturday. Mr. Nelson brought a load of wool to the city for which he received $321. The former sheriff has a "flock" of 150 sheep and the load brought in Saturday was the result of the first clipping.

Johnson Re-engaged.

Albert Johnson, instructor in science at the Lincoln high school and athletic coach, left last Friday evening for his home at Daizey, N. D., to spend the summer with his parents. He will return next year to spend another nine months. During his stay here this year Mr. Johnson developed athletic teams of championship calibre, these being the football and basketball teams, while the latter organization was regarded as one of the fastest teams at the state meet at Northfield. Coach Johnson was also the first to ever stage a field meet in this city. A full account of the meet Decoration day appears on another page.

Buys Restaurant.

By a transaction consumated yesterday afternoon Edward Kittleson became owner of the Stockholm restaurant formerly owned by Bennie Vigen. Mr. Kittleson has heretofore resided on a farm near Grygla and gave his land in trade for the restaurant business, which he will conduct in the future. Mr. Kittleson has had previous experience in this business, however, and will continue the same high standard of service set by Mr. Vigen. The former owner expects to take up his residence on the farm near Grygla.

Insurance Expert a Visitor.

E. A. Shennan, ex-secretary of the Insurance Federation of Minnesota, met at the Commercial club rooms with 12 local insurance men the first of the week. Forty cities now hold franchises under this federation and it was for the purposes of explaining the advantages of membership in the organization that Mr. Shennan made this visit.

THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES

OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY.
R. H. ROSS, Editor and Publisher.

An Independent Legal Weekly Newspaper Published Every Thursday at Corner of Main Avenue and First Street, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Foreign Subscription Rate .... $2.50 per year.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

It is high time Duluth went dry. When a crowd of representative business men start out on a boosting trip and pass Thief River Falls by on one side or the other it is a sure sign that something is wrong. Here we are, connected with the head of the lakes by two of the greatest railway systems in the west; our merchants carry on their shelves the goods of Duluth's wholesalers and manufacturers; many of the things we need can be secured more conveniently in that perpendicular burg than at any other point—and yet its business boosters hang up over night at a little has-been town like Crookston and never come near us. But we will try and pull through. The Twin Cities still find our business worth while.

Those endorsements of A. G. Anderson for congress are becoming something of a joke. The friends of that gentleman have arrived at a pass where they claim anything said by a public man in Minnesota during the past two years as an endorsement of the Fergus Falls banker. The latest thing of this kind is the publication of a letter sent by State Senator Sageng of Ottertail county to United States Senator Nelson. This communication is dated March 20, and does not even mention Mr. Anderson—in fact, at that time it was not known that he would be a candidate. The aim seems to be to couple the name of Anderson with that of any prominent man in the state, at the same time claiming his endorsement. The proceeding is not original with the Anderson boosters, but it will be as futile in their case as it has been in most others. Halvor Steenerson is already endorsed by the farmers and the laborers and the merchants of the Ninth district, and this will prove sufficient to keep him in the position which he fills so well—for the next two years, at least.

There are two county commissioners to be elected in this county this fall, but the balloting resolves itself simply into an endorsement in the case of one of these. Robert McGinn will be elected from the Second or Thief River Falls district without opposition, and for once a good man will be allowed to stay in an office which he fills with conspicous ability without having to make an unseemly scramble for it. Mr. McGinn is a strong, level-headed citizen who believes that the affairs of the county should be conducted the same as those of any other business enterprise and whose knowledge of the needs of the community makes him an authority on everything pertaining to its progress and welfare. Ed. A. Aubol, commissioner from the Fourth district, refuses to again become a candidate, although urged to do so. He has been a competent and painstaking official and would doubtless have been accorded an election unopposed had he again permitted his name to go before the voters. The people of that important district, however, have the opportunity of selecting as his successor a man in every way thoroughly qualified. J. S. Roy, for many years a resident of River Falls township, seeks the office and will make an excellent commissioner. He is a progressive, public spirited farmer who through his long residence in the county has become thoroughly acquainted with its needs, particularly as these effect the farmer. He would be the only new man on the board during the next two years, and if the other members had the choice to make there is no question but that they would select Mr. Roy as a colleague. The present board of commissioners of Pennington county is composed of citizens of the very highest calibre, and the addition of Mr. Roy to the membership will aid much in maintaining this standard.

It will be noticed that the Democratic newspapers of the district are unanimous in their opinion that the Republicans should not renominate Congressman Steenerson. They will have a candidate of their own in the field and think they might stand some show against a weaker and less able man than the present representative. Some of the arguments advanced by them as reasons for the defeat of Steenerson are positively silly. For instance, Wheelock's Weekly of Fergus Falls, says that lack of experience is an asset to a man in Washington, as he can view all things from an unprejudiced point of view. That is certainly a new one. The Stephen Messenger, another Democratic paper, says that after a man has been congressman for 14 years it should not be necessary for him to make a campaign for re-election. This is true. It should not be necessary for Mr. Steenerson to make a campaign in the Ninth district—his record entitles him to the honor of being chosen unanimously. However, this kind of objection on the part of the party opposed politically to Mr. Steenerson was to be expected and is perfectly natural. What is more hard to understand is that a few newspapers and individuals claiming to be Republican should allign themselves against him, even going so far as to employ methods of the most questionable character in order to encompass his defeat. These will prove futile in the end, as Mr. Steenerson will be re-elected to congress by the largest majority he has ever received.

Frank B. Kellogg should have the support of the farmers of the northwest for his stand against Canadian riciprocity when that measure was before congress two years ago. He was one of the influential men in this section of the country who devoted time and energy to combating that proposition, even though it was sponsored by a Republican president. The Duluth News-Tribune of Sunday contained an article describing the life and work of Mr. Kellogg, written by a man who has known him for years. The writer says the reason for his acts may be traced to his early farm experience. "His opposition to the Payne-Aldrick law," says this writer, "may be accounted for on the same ground. He came from the farm, he had the farm experience burned into him, and he shares the farmers' point of view, notwithstanding all his years and labors in the law." Mr. Kellogg has not put in the greater part of his time parading himself as a "farmers' friend" or "laborers' advocate," but every time that the welfare of farmers or laboring men have been at stake Frank Kellogg has been found on the side of their interests.

There is a suggestion in the following which every business and professional man would do well to heed. It goes to show that common business courtesy toward the representative of a newspaper is not only wise but that it may prove a good investment. Speaking before the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, Warren B. Bullock of Milwaukee, said on this subject: "American merchants and manufacturers have lost great opportunities to advance American business because of their failure to appreciate the pride of American newspaper reporters in their profession. As an average newspaper man I want to tell you that the poorest newspaper reporter feels that when he goes to interview a business man he is the official representative of the great American public, which is entitled to know the news of the world. By turning away, often with discourtesy, the newspaper reporter who seeks news of the business world, the business men of the country have lost great opportunities and, instead of making friends, they have often made enemies."

STEENERSON IS ENDORSED

Farmers Will See To It.

The Sunbeam.—We received a letter from former Representative Opsahl, of Bemidji, this week, who had just returned from a visit to the Tamarack river above Red Lake, and he says that the flood conditions there, are worse than down this way, and if the outlet to Red Lake is not dredged so as to lower the lake level, that large portions of that country is comparatively worthless. He is of the opinion that it is the duty of the federal government and the state legislature to have this river dredged out, and that action should be taken at the present session of Congress, for the relief of these settlers both above and below Red Lake from the flood conditions of last summer and this present summer. Congressman Steenerson has already got a bill passed to have a government survey made of the river, and as soon as their report is made, we may expect the money to be appropriated to do the dredging. But in the meantime it is up to the voters of this locality to see to it on the 19th of June, that a banker from Fergus Falls who only knows there is such a river as the Red Lake River by looking at it on the map of Minnesota, is not nominated to fill the chair of Congressman Steenerson.

People Will Demand Him.

Gully Advance.—Congressman Halvor Steenerson has an announcement issued by his campaign committee, in the Advance which will pay you well to read. Mr. Steenerson is a gentleman and a statesman whose past record and deeds speaks for themselves and a man whom the people will demand at the primaries.

Is One of the Leaders.

Roseau Region.—Wheelock's Weekly, the leading democratic newspaper in the district, of which Postmaster Wheelock of Fergus Falls, is the editor, makes the argument that it is a point in favor of Mr. Anderson as republican nominee for Congress that he has had no legislative experience because an inexperienced man, from the viewpoint of a democrat, would be an improvement over a man of the skill and ability of Mr. Steenerson. We doubt whether this reflects the opinion of good citizens of any party. This is a government of parties, and one of the main pillars of good government is an active and vigilant minority in Congress. It is the function of the minority party to watch the majority and see that they do not abuse their power. Mr. Steenerson is one of the leaders on the minority side in Congress, and frequently takes the democrats to task for extravagance and unwise acts. This is a republican district, and we are entitled to a republican representative. Most democrats acknowledge this and prefer to have a man of ability and experience represent them in Congress. This is the view recently expressed by Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, who is certainly a good democrat. He said: "No man should be elected to the House simply to gratify his ambition. All members should be elected for the good of the country. It is an unwise performance for any district to change representatives at short intervals. A new congressman must begin at the foot of the class and spell up. Of course, the more brains, tact, energy, courage, and industry he has the quicker he will get up. If he possesses these qualities, and if his constituents will keep him in the House, he is as certain to rise as the sparks are to fly upward. No human power can keep him down. It is only fair and rational to assume that every representative's constituents desire to see him among the top-notchers."

Respected as a Statesman.

Clearbrook Journal.—The friends of A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls, are trying to make political capital out of a statement made by Senator Nelson, that he has endorsed Anderson as an honest and patriotic citizen. This is not more than Mr. Nelson will say about any other true American citizen, but does not mean that he endorses him for congressman in this district against Halvor Steenerson. As the ranking member in the House and in the crisis which is pending in this country, the people in this district are not going to dispense with a man who has always stood up for the rights of the common man, yes, years before he broke into congress. If there ever was a time when this district and the nation at large needed men in congress with experience and nerve to carry forth the conviction that rest within their breast, it is now when nearly the whole world is at war, and any day may see a spark land in our midst which may fan into flames in a moment's notice. That is the time that men with experience, brains and power amounts to something, and a man of national prominence like Steenerson will be worth his weight many times over to his nation, not to mention the honor which will reflect upon his home district. When Steenerson gets up to talk in congress he is respected as a statesman, and his word carries the effect which we demand and expect from a man in that capacity, and hence the people in his district are proud of the work he has and is doing for his district and nation, and his retirement at this time would show poor judgment by the people in this district. It would be a national loss which is something we cannot afford at present. When we know that our nation needs his services as never before it would be almost a criminal action to trade him off for a man without legislative experience of any kind. Can you afford to do it?

Doing a Valuable Service.
(Duluth News Tribune)

Frank B. Kellogg may or may not be elected to the United States senate. But whether he is or not, he is doing a real service to this state in the character of his campaign. It is such as befits the dignity of the office he seeks. It is inspiring and educative.

It is aimed to bind the people of Minnesota together as one people; to arouse a spirit of nationalism, of a single loyalty. He does not play on prejudice. He makes no appeal to purely personal interest. He has nothing to censure, but speaks with no incertitude of the supreme duty of Americanism.

It is this country and this country alone with which its people are concerned. All have come here to have the advantage of its free institutions. They are ours and our one obligation is to preserve them, no matter what the cost. Mr. Kellogg's plea also is to the avoidance of the supreme cost.

It is patently true, as he says, that those who suffer most by war are not the rich. To them it frequently, from the money side, means more riches, though there has never been a war when the rich did not suffer proportionately in the sacrifice of their sons.

Today it is the colleges rather than in the factories that are found the young men of this country preparing to defend in its army the liberties which distinguish it. Yet the want, the misery of the other classes of the population from war outreach, as he says, any losses to the rich.

How true it is, too, that "the mildest flights of imagination can hardly picture this country acquiring an army and navy sufficient to invade any of the European countries, but a few hundred thousand men, thoroughly drilled, a navy properly prepared, and a reserve of young men trained in their youth and inspired with a spirit of patriotism, will make this country impregnable and will not furnish an army and navy which can possibly be used to bring us into war."

Mr. Kellogg may not be elected. But if not, he will have the supreme satisfaction of service. Never in the history of this state has a political campaign had in it less of what is popularly known as politics. Never has one been so limited to a wholly nonpartisan issue with all the taint of bitterness replaced by an appeal from the heart to the highest impulses of citizenship.

A BIG MAN FOR A BIG JOB

A home grown product. A farmer boy who educated himself. Ability and hard work made him a national leader in the legal profession. As the people's lawyer in trust prosecutions, he won decisions from the U. S. Supreme Court which, if enforced by the government at the present time, would greatly help small business men and farmers and insure equality of opportunity for all. He is guaranteed to the voters by Minnesota's leading country newspapers.

He stands for PROTECTION of Uncle Sam, of agriculture, of labor, and of business. He is on the square and has the welfare of the people at heart.

Let's send a real statesman to Washington.

NASON TIES FOR HIGHEST HONORS

Breaks 140 Out of Possible 150 in Trap Shooting Contest Held at Detroit.

In the first competitive gun club trap shoot held in northern Minnesota this season, and which was held at Detroit last Thursday, C. A. Nason of this city tied with Kahler of Perham, for high score, breaking 140 out of a possible 150 "clays." Not only did Mr. Nason tie for first place, but the two gentlemen made higher scores than the professionals participating in the contest, as well as "topping" last year's amatuer state championship by six birds.

Last season Mr. Nason, representing the local gun club at numerous trap shoots in the northwest, carried off high honors in three contests, and he starts out this season with every indication of continuing the "winning streak" and of bringing to Thief River Falls more championship honors to add to those already acquired.

In addition to getting high money at Detroit, Mr. Nason was awarded the trophy offered by the "Dead Shot" Powder company, that concern's product being used by Mr. Nason. Participating in the contest were seven professionals, none of whom were able to break more than 138 out of 150. Thirty-six entrants served to make the shoot one of the most successful ever held at Detroit. Of the professionals shooting, the following is the score: Stair, 134; Barber, 138; Higgins, 123; Simmons, 119; Dickey, 138; Rinkle, 138; Trent, 134. State Champion Novotny broke 134. Harker, shooting in three events only, broke 33 out of 45, and withdrew from the contest.

At The Lyceum.

The Bluebird feature, "Hop, the Devil's Brew," will be the big offering of the week at the Lyceum, and will be shown on Tuesday evening, June 13, only. The story is by Rufus Steele and deals with the smuggling and smoking of opium. It is one of the really big, strong photo dramas of the year, and is produced under the supervision of United States government officials. Not only is the action and the scenes strictly out of the ordinary, but the entire production is different in both theme and conception. Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber, among the best known film artists in America, are the leads in an exceptionally good cast.

Physicians' Hospital Notes.

Mrs. Andrew Hagen, of Greenbush, underwent an operation for gall bladder trouble last Friday. The operation was most successful and Mr. Hagen is very much improved in health.

Mrs. Martin Strom, of Thief River Falls, was discharged from the hospital Wednesday after having undergone an abdominal operation.

Mrs. Max Gehrts entered the hospital Monday to receive medical treatment. Mrs. Gehrts resides at Kratka.

John Hadin, of Brooks, entered the hospital on Tuesday for medical treatment.

John Tolefson is at the hospital receiving treatment. Mr. Tolefson, who resides on a farm near Kratka, had his leg broken in a runaway. He is getting along nicely.

Elert Snare was discharged from the hospital today, after having undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is now feeling fine and is very much improved in health. He hails from Greenbush.

C. J. Hoffman, rural mail carrier, was operated upon Saturday for ruptured appendicitis. His condition is satisfactory, and will be discharged shortly.

Misses Mary Wyman and Agnes Carlson arrived Wednesday afternoon from Baudette and entered the hospital to take up nurse training.

Dr. H. G. Hieber, of the Physicians' Hospital staff, was called to Los Angeles, California, the first of the week by the illness of his father.

C. J. Mattson was discharged from the hospital today after having recovered from a successful operation.

Mavie gospel services on Sunday June 11, at 3 p. m., at the hall. Rev. R. L. Barackman will conduct the service. Special music. The singing is great. The preaching is plain gospel. The neighborhool is cordially invited to come and spend a pleasant helpful hour. The offering goes to pay actual expense of speaker.

OBITUARY

JOHN GIEFORT.

Last Saturday morning at 6:30 occurred the death of John Giefort, age 82, at the home of his son, William Giefort. Death was caused by pnuemonia, from which the deceased had been suffering for about a week. Mr. Giefort was born in Morgan county, Ohio, July 31, 1834, and was employed at Estherville, Iowa, for over twenty-five years as lineman for the Rock Island railway. He came to Thief River Falls about a year ago and has resided with his son since that time. The remains were shipped Sunday evening to Estherville for burial. He is survived by the son mentioned above.

Mrs. George Thompson.

Mrs. George Thompson, a resident near Ilag post office, died last week after a lingering illness. Funeral services were held on Sunday near that place. Mrs. Thompson leaves a husband and ten children to mourn her loss. Charles Thompson of Thief River Falls, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Pauline Thompson, attended the funeral and returned Monday.

Mrs. Ingeborg H. Brekke.

On the second day of June, 1916, in the town of Kratka, occurred the death of Mrs. Ingeborg H. Brekke, at the age of 78 years. The deceased was born in Telemarken, Norway, February 28, 1838, and migrated to United States sixteen years ago and has resided with her son, Rev. H. Bjornson since that time. Her husband passed away twenty-four years ago. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, June 5, at Mavie and interment took place in the Telemarken cemetery in Kratka township. The funeral was attended by a large number of the true and staunch friends of this grand old woman, who paid a final tribute to her memory. Rev. I. T. Aastad, of the Norwegian Lutheran church of this city, and Rev. E. O. Sabo conducted the funeral services.

Mrs. Andrew Lundberg.

Mrs. Andrew Lundberg, 319 LaBree avenue north, a resident of Thief River Falls for the past three and one-half years, dropped dead Saturday at about 10:30 a. m., from heart failure. Funeral services were held from the Swedish Evangelical church in this city Monday afternoon, June 5th, Rev. A. A. Larson officiating, and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery. Mrs. Lundberg was born January 25,1870, in Buffalo, N. Y., making her age at time of death forty-six years, four months and nine days. She came to this city in October, 1912, and has ably assisted her husband in conducting a restaurant at the above named address.

Mrs. Lundberg was married on the 30th day of August, 1886 to Andrew Lundberg and to this union were born ten children, all of whom survive as follows: Philip Lundberg of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Frank Schmidt of North Dakota, Mrs. Leon Johnson of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Ole Johnson of Thief River Falls, Marie, Christine, Bessie, Edward, Kenneth and Georgine, all of Thief River Falls. The only other survivor of the deceased is Andre Lundberg, husband.

The Times extends its sincer sympathy to the bereaved members of the family.

MORE MEN THAN WOMEN HAVE APPENDICITIS.

Surgeons state men are slightly more subject to appendicitis than women. Thief River Falls people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is surprising.—F. J. Stebbins, druggist.

Thief River Falls People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,

For Thief River Falls kidney sufferers,

Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Thief River Falls people.

Ole Rude, jeweler, State St., W., Thief River Falls, says: "I was troubled with weak kidneys for several months, caused, I believe, by sitting constantly at the bench. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions. My back became weak and I had dull, nagging pains across my loins. I felt sore over my kidneys, as if I had been pounded. When I attempted to straighten or get up from a chair, my back felt as if it was paralyzed. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and a short time after I used them, I felt better. I haven't had any kidney trouble in some time."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Rude had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—J1-8.

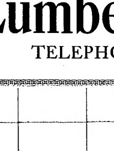
have to say about cream separators this week

BUYING a cream separator is good deal like hiring a man to work on your farm. A hired man that does poor work and is lazy is an expensive proposition, no matter how little you pay him. A cream separator that is hard to turn, hard to keep clean and doesn't skim close, would be expensive even if you got it as a gift.

Creamerymen and dairymen all over the world recognize the superiority of the De Laval.

About the only reason why any one ever buys any other cream separator is because they can get it a little cheaper.

Then they soon find out they have lost ten times as much from separainconvenience, poor skimming and a machine that quickly wears out, as they saved in the beginning.



Remember that a De Laval will soon pay for itself, and if you have no separator now, or an inferior machine, we can sell you a De Laval on such terms that it will pay for itself while you are using it.

The best cream separator is the cheapest. Let us prove it for you on your own farm.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

WILL MAKE TRIP OF INSPECTION

J. D. Clarkson of Jefferson Highway Association, Will Look Up Different Route Claims.

PEMBINA RIDGE INSPECTED

Daniel Shaw and I. M. Myrbo Find That Detour Will Be Necessary in Order to Utilize Present Bridges.

Daniel Shaw of Thief River Falls, president of the Northern Minnesota Jefferson Highway association, last week made a tour of inspection along the Pembina ridge with a view to gaining information which may be of value to J. D. Clarkson, general manager of the association, when that gentleman comes to make his investigations on June 24. Mr. Shaw was accompanied from Viking to Carlstad by I. M. Myrbo of the first-named village, and they followed the route which will in all probability be chosen for the highway, passing along the famous ridge as far as Karlstad.

Three Bridges Needed.

According to these gentlemen, this route will provide one of the finest all-year highways in America. The ridge itself is in excellent condition, the only drawback being that the bridges over the Snake, Middle River and Tamarack rivers are not on the line of the highway as proposed and new structures would have to be built across these streams if long detours are to be avoided.

Is Now Judicial Highway.

From Dorothy in Red Lake county, to Karlstad in Kittson county, the Pembina ridge has been designated as a judicial highway by an order issued by Judge Grindeland. This stretch provides one of the best natural highways in the United States, and will prove one of the strong arguments to be placed before the commission for establishing the route through this section.

When Mr. Clarkson arrives strong representations will be made to induce him to extend his inspection tour so as to include the magnificent highway already extending from Karlstad to Warroad. This would make a side line to the Lake of the Woods, and would provide an additional thoroughfare of exceptional beauty and interest.

Three Routes Under Consideration.

Three routes are under consideration by the commission, two of which include Thief River Falls. Route No. 1 is the western route embracing the Red River Valley cities and reaching the boundary by way of Warren, Stephen and Hallock.

Another route embraces the following towns, and is called the Central route: St. Paul, Minneapolis, Elk River, St. Cloud, Little Falls, Staples, Wadena, Park Rapids, Itasca Park, Bemidji, Bagley, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, thence to the boundary line at St. Vincent.

A third route, embraces the following towns, and is known as Eastern route: St. Paul, Minneapolis, Anoka, Elk River, Princeton, Mille Lacs Lake, skirting the westerly shore of Mille Lacs Lake to Garrison, thence westerly to Brainerd, Pine River, Walker, Cass Lake, Bemidji, thence the same as the Central route northwesterly to the boundary line.

It will be noted that Thief River Falls is included in both the Central and Eastern routes, and as there is a strong likelihood of one or the other of these being chosen, the people of this city are very much interested in Mr. Clarkson's visit. All the cities whose organizations are embraced in the Northern Minnesota Jefferson Highway association are concerned exactly in the same degree as Thief River Falls, and it is likely that they will have their representatives accompany Mr. Clarkson upon his tour oif investigation. This city should have a strong delegation present as in case either the Central or Eastern route is selected Thief River Falls will be the largest and most important city on the line between Bemidji and the boundary.

FIRST TRACK MEET WAS BIG SUCCESS

High School Athletic Association Hangs Up Good Marks in Several Events.

The first track meet of the Thief River Falls High School Athletic association held last week was a success from every point of view. The time made in several of the events was good, the races being particuarly fast when the condition of the track is taken into consideration. The running races showed that the boys were in need of practice, but were satisfactory for the first time and proved that with experience they will be able to foot with the best of them.

The first prize was won by the Junior class, this division garnering 53 points. The seniors were second with 43; the sophomores third, nine points, and freshmen fourth, three points.

The record of 11 seconds flat in the hundred yard dash is considered an exceptional performance. Sundahl made the distance in that time, being followed by Stebbins and Mc Crystal. Sundahl also won the 220 yard dash in 34 and 2-5 seconds, which proves that over the longer course he is able to hold his speed.

In the mile event Hovie was the winner, his time being 2:35 1-5. He was followed by Miller, second, and Bingham, third. The mile was made in 54 4-5, this also being won by Hovie, followed by Rogers and Hilson.

In the high jump event Tessum, Miller and Linde were winners in the order named, the score of the first-named being 4.8. The broad jump record also went to Tessum, 15 1-2 feet being the distance. He was followed by Holzknecht and Hilson. Miller was the winner of the standing jump, 8.6 1-2. Sundahl and Linde were next best in this event.

The pole vault was won by Hovie, 7.2 being his score, Kiland second and Zeh third. Tesslow and Hilson tied in the hammer throw with a score of 67.9 feet. Sandum was third man in this event. Hovie won the discus throw, 78 feet, with Linde and Tharaldson next. Hovie was also the champion in the shot-put class, firing the pill 35 feet, going two points over Teslow and four over Hilson.

The junior relay team composed of Kiland, Stebbins, Holm and Sundahl, were the winners. The seniors were represented by Hovie, Tessum Miller and Robinson and were second, while the sophomore team, Hilson Krohn, Zeh and Tharaldson, was third.

The high point winners were as follows:

Hovie, 21; Sundall, 15. The latter won the safety razor presented by the Laing Hardware company to the winner of the 220 yard dash.

REV. A. B.· KEELER

SPECIAL MEETINGS HELD DURING JUNE

Rev. A. B. Keeler of Minneapolis Will Conduct Services Every Evening at Presbyterian Church.

Special meetings will be held at the Presbyterian church in this city during the month of June. Rev. A. B. Keeler, state worker for the church in Minnesota, will be the speaker. This gentleman is trained in the pastorate and is in no manner to be regarded in the same light as the ordinary travelling evangelist. He is a man of scholarly attainments, a speaker of rare power and impresses his message upon his hearers without any appeal to theatricals.

Rev. Dr. Barackman, pastor of the church in Thief River Falls, extends a cordial invitation to the people of all denominations to be present at these meetings if their obligations do not take them elsewhere, and he feels assured that the time will be most profitably spent. These meetings began Sunday morning and will continue throughout the evening of every work day and on Sundays during the month.

FIRST AUTO TRIP TO WARREN, FRIDAY JULY 5

Will Attend Marshall County Fair Held in That City on the 3rd, 4th and 5th.

The executive committee of the commercial club has decided that the first auto trip of the season will take place on July 5th, with Warren as the objective point. The Marshall county fair will be held at that city on the third, fourth and fifth, and the committee considered it a good idea to make the trip the day after the big celebration here.

Many Warren people have signified their intention of coming to Thief River Falls for the Fourth and as the people of Marshall county have always been liberal in their patronage of our county fair, it was thought that a regular excursion to the county show there would be the proper thing in the way of reciprocating. Make arrangements now for this big event.

Warroad Run Postponed.

The auto run to Warroad and the Lake of the Woods, originally planned for June 17, has been indefinitely postponed. The big ball games of the season take place on the 16th and 17th, at which time the Warren team crosses bats with the undefeated nine representing this city, and as a game between these two neighbors is always an event of considerable interets, it was thought inadvisable to attempt to crowd in a rival attraction. The trip cannot be made on the 24th, because on that day the final meetings of the "Telelaget" society will be held here. Many of the delegates to this event will remain here over Sunday, when another big ball game will likely be staged.

The Warroad run will be made later, but it is impossible at this time to set a date for the event. Secretary Lincoln states that it may have to be postponed until the latter part of July.

Mrs. Saddler Re-buried.

Mrs. Ida Saddler, age 65 years, who died in the county poor house on April, 13, 1916, and who was buried two days afterward, was removed from Greenwood cemetery May 25 and the remains were sent to Neponset, Illinois, for final burial. At the time Mrs. Saddler passed away no relatives could be found and the funeral conducted by the city. Later however, word was received from a relative in Illinois.

OVER HALF MILLION POUNDS OF BUTTER

This is Record of Pennington County's Four Creameries During the Year 1915.

There were 530,534 pounds of butter manufactured by the four creameries in Pennington county during the past year, according to the report of J. J. Farrell, state dairy and food commissioner. Of this amount nearly half was manufactured by the Thief River Falls creamery, the balance being divided between Highlanding, Kratka and St. Hilaire. For the butter fat required to make this amount of the finished product the patrons of the creameries were paid a total of $134,142.38, or an average of nearly 25 cents per pound.

INSURANCE BRANCH ORGANIZED HERE

Purpose is to Disseminate Information Which Will Aid in Reducing Fire Losses.

A branch of the Insurance Federation of Minnesota was organized at a meeting of the insurance men of the city at the Commercial club rooms on Saturday afternoon. Lars Bakke was elected president, and Daniel Shaw, secretary.

The purpose of the organization is to keep such information before the people as will aid in keeping down the fire loss. It is everywhere recognized that an enormous sum is yearly lost through preventable conflagrations, and it is for the purpose of advising people how preventative measures may best be applied that these organizations are formed.

It is the intention to send out from time to time such advice and information as will aid in keeping the danger from fire at a minimum, and the work already accomplished where these branches have been organized have proved them a most valuable aid in this direction.

The insurance business is now the second largest in America, being only exceeded in volume by manufacturers, and a more general knowledge of its scope and value should be something sought by every citizen.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS

MARY PAGE, an actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock, and is defended by her lover Philip Langdon. Pollock has been pursuing Mary for many months endeavoring to win her love and her hand in marriage, but his attentions have been very unwelcome to her.

Knowing her stage aspirations, he has, unknown to her, financed her starring tour under the management of Daniels.

On the night of the murder, Mary leaves the banquet hall in the Hotel Republic and enters the Gray Room alone expecting to meet Langdon. She has been lured there by Pollock, who has been drinking.

A few moments later a shot is heard and Langdon and others, upon entering the Gray Room find James Pollock shot through the heart and Mary Page lying in a faint beside him with Pollock's revolver not six inches from the ends of her fingers.

At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Pollock had invaded her dressing room at the theatre. Langdon had come to her rescue, the revolver had been knocked from Pollock's hand and Mary had seized and retained it. She had put it in her hand bag the night of the murder intending giving it to Langdon.

Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide.

Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane.

There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky.

Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill Langdon.

Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

Maggie Hale, inmate of a gambling den, testifies that she was at the hotel and heard two men quarreling in the Gray Room a short time before the murder. Her evidence seems to increase suspicion against Daniels.

DANIELS' PROMISE

LANGDON surveyed the huge pile of mail on his desk with a half rueful, half whimsical smile. Despite the fact that he had worked half the night, his cold plunge and a cup of strong coffee had sent him down town early, filled with energy, and he had planned to "clean up" his letters at the office before proceeding to Court.

He had not, however, counted upon the sympathy and the antipathy that the now famous trial of Mary Page was arousing.

Nor had he counted upon the propensity of the American public to write letters, and in consequence it was not a few hours' work, but the labor of days that lay before him in that multitudinous array of envelopes.

This Man Omitted the Usual Formality of Signing His Name.

There were letters denouncing him because the writers thought he was aiding in the miscarriage of justice because of his efforts on behalf of Mary Page; there were others praising him extravagantly for his efforts in her behalf; there were still others threatening him with death if he persisted in his efforts to clear Mary of the charge of murder, efforts which would expose certain members of the under world in the great city. There were letters from sane people and insane people, letters from sentimental girls and equally sentimental young men who had been impressed with Mary's beauty and innocence; there was even one letter from a man who declared that he himself had committed the murder and would go on the stand and confess all for five dollars. This man omitted the usual formality of signing his name.

Beside the letters lay the morning papers, all of them, with the accounts of the trial marked heavily with blue pencil, ready to be clipped and pasted in the office scrap book. As Langdon drew out his chair and sat down the headlines of the topmost paper caught his eye.

DANIELS TO DEFY HOODOO TO REOPEN THE COVINGTON

Defying the Theatrical Hoodoo Which the Superstitious Declare Hangs Over the Famous Old Covington Theatre, Mr. Daniels Announces That Plans Are Now Under Way to Reopen the Playhouse Early Next Month With a Musical Comedy.

WILL ANNOUNCE NAME OF PLAY LATER.

With a little whistle of surprise Langdon dropped into his seat and scanned the article, which was an interview with Daniels. Its details were non-essential, dealing mostly with the question of the superstition clinging about theatres connected in any way with tragedy, but the main fact stood out boldly. Daniels had secured fresh backing and was to start again.

With the paper crumpled in his hand Langdon stared out of the window, trying to fit this new fact into the intricate puzzle that had grown out of the death of James Pollock.

Everyone knew now that Daniels himself had lost all he possessed and had also lost the money Pollock had promised him through the death of the latter.

Who, then, was the new angel, whose name did not appear in the carefully worded announcement from Daniels?

Was it not possible, after all, that Daniels had secured more money from Pollock than anyone knew of, and chose this method of using it to avoid clashing with the lawyers of Pollock's estate?

Was it not possible, too, that Daniels knew far more about the tragedy than anyone suspected? That he had turned this information to very good account financially and that there were influential people identified with the under world of the city who for personal or political reasons were willing to put up a large amount of money provided they could thereby silence the theatrical manager and keep him from revealing any more on the witness stand?

Daniels, Langdon knew, was ruled by a very lax code of morals and was not above profiting from the suppression of evidence that had a great financial value.

He had got no further than this point in his soliloquy, when the office boy appeared at the door, a little flushed and apologetic.

"I know you don't want to be disturbed, Mr. Langdon," he said uneasily, "but there's a man out here insists on seeing you. Says he'll wait till it's convenient for you to talk to him."

"Tell him I'm very busy now, and must go into court soon. Ask him to talk to Mr. Barrett or Mr. Rogers."

The boy went out, but in a moment or so returned.

"He says they won't do, sir. He must see you. He says to tell you his name is Daniels and he has come about the trial."

Langdon lifted his head quickly.

"A short fat man?" he queried, and the boy nodded. "Tell him to come in," said the young attorney, and smoothing out the crumpled morning paper he laid it back with the others and smiled, a trifle grimly.

Prosperity had already laid its hand upon Daniels—at least his clothes made that evident. He was sprucely dressed, and recently shaved and carried a cane. There was indeed an assumption of jauntiness about him that would have deceived almost anyone, but Langdon's keen eyes saw the harsh lines at the corners of the mouth, and the sombre anxiety in the restless eyes.

"You didn't expect to see me, did you, Langdon?" he said as the lawyer rose to greet him. Philip smiled.

"No," he answered. "I didn't hope for anything so opportune. I was just wondering where I could get you on the phone. I've just seen this morning's paper," he added significantly; and Daniels shifted uneasily in his chair.

"You mean about the theatre?" he said. "Well, it's kind of good news for me. I lost about all I had on the Page venture and I was beginning to feel the rocks when this new syndicate offered to give me a chance to put over a musical comedy."

"Who is in the syndicate?"

"They don't want the names known. They are men pretty high up in politics and I don't mind telling you, in the liquor interests. That sort of fellow loves to take a flyer in the show business, and for once I was Johnnie on the spot." He laughed, and pulled out a cigar. "You don't mind if I smoke, do you? Have one?"

Langdon declined, but produced a box of matches for his visitor.

"I'm very glad, for your sake, that you were," said Langdon drily; then,

"For once I was Johnnie on the spot."

with a sudden change of tone he leaned across the desk crying harshly, "Has that anything to do with your testimony in court? Was that the real reason you came back to the city?"

Daniels winced. "That's what I came to see you about," he said huskily. "I admit I didn't tell everything that I might have on the stand. What I held back may have nothing to do with this case. I held it back," he added significantly, "for several reasons, some of which you may know."

"What I know or don't know has nothing to do with the matter," retorted Langdon, but with a change of tone. "You haven't answered my question yet."

"I'm not going to answer it," said Daniels after a long pause. "Maybe I'll have to later on, but not now. Only, see here, Langdon, I've got to know one thing; has Mary got the ghost of a chance to—get off? Do you think that what's-its-name psychosis will get her out of prison? I ain't got weak nerves or anything; but I don't mind saying that this thing has got my goat. For a while I didn't read the papers, but yesterday I did and I found that—that things didn't look as bright for the little girl as I had imagined. It looks, in fact, as if she was up against it hard. As if—unless something is done she'll go to the chair." And he calmly puffed his cigar.

"No! No!" cried Langdon with a shudder. "Never that. It won't come to that, I can promise you. They can't prove her guilty, but there are lots of different degrees of murder, and escaping the chair doesn't mean setting her free."

The two men sat silent for a long time, facing each other across the desk, antagonistic, yet linked by some thought that neither would put into words. At last Daniels spoke.

"I'm no snitcher," he said hoarsely. "I don't believe in telling all you know and stirrin' up a lot of mud when you ain't sure it will do any good. But I'd do a lot for Mary Page. She's on the level. She didn't shoot James Pollock —I'm dead sure of that. And I won't see her harmed if I can stop it, no matter what the price is."

She Knew That the Agony of Her Suffering Was Doubled by That of Langdon.

"Thank you," said Langdon, but Daniels frowned.

"You've got no cause to thank me," he said. "I just wanted you to know. I want to be kept posted. I don't want to tell anything that ain't necessary, but if worse comes to the worst I'll tell it all."

"Is that your promise?"

"Yes." Abruptly Daniels put on his hat, and without a word of parting marched out of the door leaving Langdon staring through narrowed lids after his retreating form, as he reached for the telephone.

He was late getting into court, but whatever conflicting emotions the promise made by Daniels had roused in him were hidden by the smiling mask of confidence and ease with which he reassured not only Mary but the spectators.

To Mary, that smile and the deep abiding tenderness in his eyes were the two things that made it possible to bear with patience the weary strain of the passing days. The first shuddering horror of the tragedy had passed, it is true, and in spite of its occasional return in the quiet of sleepless nights, it had given place to a less poignant though bitter enough suffering.

With the passing of the acute agony, however, the little things at first submerged came to the surface and became a source of daily martyrdom. The hard bed; the coarse food; the lack of privacy; the limited conveniences; the roughness of the police and the suffocating sense of being a prisoner; of being denied the fresh air and the sunshine and the right to go where she pleased, seemed almost unbearable.

Yet she knew that the agony of her suffering was doubled by that of Langdon; that he went through vicariously all she endured as well as bearing his own burden, and so for his sake she bore up, drinking in courage from the love that enveloped her whenever his eyes met hers.

For just as the trial and what had gone before it had stripped her of her woman's subterfuges and coquetries, so had it stripped Langdon's love of the masculine dread of publicity, and he cared nothing even if all those in the courtroom read the secrets of his heart.

On this particular morning, however, Mary fancied that there was a new meaning in his smile, and a light of hope in his eyes, and there was keen interest in her own gaze when the first witness was called.

"John McGlone!"

He was a burly man in a loud waistcoat, with hair that grew low on his forehead and was parted in the middle into two careful curls in a fashion popular with a certain type of barkeeper and barber.

He showed no signs of nervousness. On the contrary, he seemed somewhat pleased with his importance and answered Langdon's first questions with a glibness that held a touch of the pompous.

"John McGlone!"

He was, he said, owner and proprietor of a large "retail liquor house" and had formerly been "on the force."

"Did you ever know James Pollock?" asked Langdon.

"Sure! I knew Jim well. I bought most of my fancy wines through him, and he used to drop in occasionally when he was passin', just to say howdy."

"Did he ever bring friends with him?"

"Oh, sometimes. Not often." There was a conversational tone in the witness's voice.

"Did you ever hear him quarrel with anyone while in your saloon?"

"No. Jim was sharp with his tongue when he'd been drinkin', but everybody knew he didn't mean it. He was a generous feller, too, always made up for his madness in a free-handed way. Besides, I wouldn't stand fer no fightin' in my house. It was a respectable place, I'll have you know!"

"And yet," broke in Langdon sharply, "isn't it true that you twice warned James Pollock that he had better look out or somebody would 'get him'?"

McGlone shifted uneasily, and his pompous air faded.

"Yes," he said. "That's true, but it wasn't particularly Jim's quarreling that made me say it."

"Did you ever hear anyone make any threats against Mr. Pollock?"

"Yes. You see, Jim was mixed up in some dirty work—"

"I object!" interrupted the District Attorney, leaping to his feet. "Not only to the question of Mr. Langdon, but to the endeavor on the part of the witness to traduce a man who is dead. Your Honor, Mr. Langdon has declared the defence to be 'repressed psychosis', and under those circumstances I declare the present testimony to be irrelevant, and request that it be stricken out."

"Jim was sharp with his tongue when he'd been drinkin'."

"My defence is still 'repressed psychosis', your Honor, retorted Langdon quickly, "but I call the attention of the court to the statement made by Dr. Foster, that if Miss Page was suffering from that when James Pollock was shot she would not have known whether her own or another hand fired the fatal shot. Your Honor, I am endeavoring by this witness to bring to light some obscure facts in this case, and crave the leniency of the court to continue the present testimony." His tone was earnest and the justice of what he asked was evident to all.

"I think you may continue, Mr. Langdon," said the Judge after a moment's thought. "I cannot sustain the objection of Mr. Dallas."

With a shrug of resignation the Prosecutor dropped back into his seat, and Langdon, turning again to McGlone, who looked bewildered by the battle of the attorneys, said quietly:

"I will repeat my question, Mr. McGlone. Did you ever hear anyone make any threats against Mr. Pollock?"

"Well, as I said—"

But this time it was his Honor who interrupted.

"You must remember, Mr. McGlone, that in answering questions you must use only the direct yes or no. Do not digress or say why such threats were made. That question has not been asked you."

"Then—yes," grumbled McGlone, "I heard fellers make threats against him twice."

"Where?"

"In front of the bar. He was mixed up with some men that didn't like the way he run things. He treated 'em all like dogs, and I thought that sometime when one of 'em was full of whiskey he'd probably carry out the threat."

"Did you warn Mr. Pollock?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"Oh, Jim just laughed and said he knew of four people who would like to see him get his, and he wasn't excluding the fair sex."

"I object!" interrupted the District Attorney, leaping to his feet.

A whisper of excitement ran through the room and Mary shuddered. Had he meant her? Surely not. But the words brought a frown to Langdon's face and a grim smile to that of the prosecutor.

"Did he," the question rapped sharply, "say that he took any precautions against attack?"

"Yes. He told me he packed a couple of guns that would make any fool who got after him, bark up the wrong tree."

"He carried two revolvers?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see them?"

"Not as I remember. He said they were beauts, and that they couldn't be duplicated on this side of the Atlantic."

Suddenly the prosecutor leaned forward alertly. He saw in an instant where this testimony was leading, and waited, breathless, for the inevitable question that would follow.

"Mr. McGlone, were those revolvers mates? Was it, in fact, a pair of pistols that James Pollock owned?"

"I couldn't say for certain. He used to call 'em the twins, but I never saw them meself."

"That is all, thank you, Mr. McGlone," said Langdon, and sat down triumphantly, while the jury, leaning forward, stared down at the revolver from which that fatal shot had been fired. If James Pollock had owned a pair of them, who could say whether the one found on the floor was or was not the one that Mary Page had put into her bag at the theatre!

Benzol Production.

Connected with the coke industry was the completion during the last summer of a number of large plants for the recovery of benzol from by-product coke oven gas. This gives the United States its first output of this material, so important as a raw material in the manufacture of high explosives and chemical dyes.

To Kenmare.—"Christy" Christianson, Soo Line conductor on the Winnipeg division, has been transferred to a run between Overly, and Kenmare, N. D., to relieve T. Popejoy, who is on a vacation.

Back To Work.—After an illness of six weeks, V. Robarge, Soo Line engineer, of the Winnipeg division, has left for the fifth district to take up a run between Kenmare and Overly, N. D.

Engineer Ill.—Albert Engen, Soo Line engineer at this division point, has been unable to attend to his duties at the throttle owing to illness.

Huseby Returns.—Gilmore Huseby, clerk in the office of G. J. Conklin, foreman of the car department in the Soo yards, returned the latter part of last week from Minneapolis, where he had enjoyed a short visit at the home of his parents. Oscar Eggerud filled Huseby's position during his absence. Mr. Huseby expects to take a more extended vacation during the month of July.

Hankins Returns.—W. E. Hankins, Soo switch foreman at the Winnipeg division yards, returned the latter part of last week from his annual vacation. He visited at various points in the east also spent sometime in Kansas visiting relatives.

Richardson Promoted.— Glenn Richardson, who has been officiating as third trick operator at Plummer, arrived in Thief River Falls last week to fill a position in the dispatcher's office. Glenn is a graduate of the local high school with the class of 1914, and is among the many graduates who have "made good." He has the best wishes of his many friends here for success in his new position.

Sunday at Home.—Mortz Brink, telegraph operator at the Soo offices, spent Sunday at the home of his parents in St. Hilaire. He returned Sunday evening via the auto route in order to resume his duties Monday morning.

Johnson Back.—Carl Johnson, Soo Line fireman, who has been residing on his farm near Thorhult for the past few months, has returned to Thief River Falls to again resume his duties on the road. Mr. Johnson intends to make final proof on his land June 15.

Made Short Call.—John Blomquist, who has been acting as switch foreman at the Soo yards during the absence of W. E. Hankins, spent Saturday at Plummer, where he was the guest of relatives.

Wrecker Called.—A call for the wrecker, stationed at this division point, was sent in Monday morning from a station west on the Wheatline to clear the track of some bridge pilings. The work of restoring the material in its right place was executed quickly and the wrecker returned to headquarters in the afternoon.

Flower Shipment.—A shipment of flowers for the Soo Line flower beds at the round house arrived the latter part of last week and were immediately placed in the sod. "Jack" Bird gave the "animals" their first watering Monday.

On Auto Trip.—Ole Eggerud, employee in the car repairing department at the Soo yards, left Sunday evening for an extended automobile trip through North Dakota. He was accompanied by his family.

Hoveland In Florida.— Amund Hoveland, store room clerk at the Soo round house, who is on his annual vacation, sent his railroad friends in Thief River Falls his best wishes on Monday from Pensacola, Florida, where he is spending a week. FLAG SPEECH DISPLEASES

Roosevelt Not at All Satisfied With Associate Justice's Address to Washington Scholars and Supporters Expect Typical Broadside Shortly.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 8.—While Colonel Roosevelt refrains from making any public statement officially disclosing his real attitude toward the political situation at Chicago it is well known to his intimates here that he is opposed to the nomination of Justice Hughes and it is their confident belief that if Justice Hughes is nominated Colonel Roosevelt will himself become a candidate.

Colonel Roosevelt, it is well understood, is not at all satisfied with Justice Hughes' so called "flag speech," which he is said to regard as merely a Fourth of July address, having no value as disclosing the justice's attitude toward the real issues of the day.

In the words of his followers here the colonel regards the speech as further "evidence of pussyfooting," to which attitude he is opposed in the present crisis in the country's affairs.

Colonel Roosevelt, it is known, feels better today in regard to his own chances toward being nominated than at any other time.

His followers look for a broadside from him within a day or two, which they say will be calculated to eliminate Justice Hughes and any other candidate whom the colonel regards as representing the "pussyfoot idea."

The colonel feels, they say, that if the Republicans have made up their minds to nominate a man representing this idea the one thing left for him to do is to run himself in order to bring before the people the issue of "straightforward Americanism."

SUFFRAGE LOSES IN IOWA

Constitutional Amendment Defeated at Primary Election.

Des Moines, June 8.—Defeat of the state constitutional amendment providing for woman suffrage was indicated by virtually complete returns from all but five counties in the state, giving a majority of nearly 6,000 against the proposition.

According to figures compiled here more than 300,000 votes were cast in the election, the heaviest primary vote in years.

In the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination W. L. Harding of Sioux City is expected to poll between 40 and 50 per cent of the total vote.

Hurley Named Chairman.

Washington, June 8.—Members of the federal trade commission have voted to make Commissioner Edward N. Hurley chairman, to succeed Joseph E. Davies, effective July 1, and to adopt the rotation system in the chairmanship employed by the interstate commerce commission.

TO VOTE ON NEW CHARTER JULY 18

People on That Day Will Decide Whether or Not City Manager Plan is to be Adopted.

LONGER TIME IS ALLOWED

Provision Extending Length of Time During Which Payments For Improvements May be Made is Particulary Popular.

A special election at which the people of Thief River Falls will decide whether or not the proposed new city charter shall be adopted will be held on July 18. The new document has been printed and circulated in phamphlet form and the citizens are generally acquainted with its provisions. A number of these have heretofore been explained in the columns of the Times, and this paper will continue to take up the different sections of the work until the important ones have been called attention to.

Extending Time For Payment

One of the most widely discussed features of the new charter is the section providing that assessments for public improvements may be extended a long period of years, the exact number to be determined by the city council. Under the old charter all street improvements and similar work must be paid inside of five years. This has been found a hardship in many cases, and the provision of the new charter extending this time to twenty years and longer will cil to extend the time of payment to meet with very general approval. It is only a question of a short time until the city will have to give serious attention to the question of paving, and as this is a costly improvement the paying for it inside of five years would prove a hardship to many and an inconvenience to as many more. Scattering the necesary payments over a period of twenty or more years, however, with an interest rate of six per cent on the deferred amount, makes the annual burden so light that the outlay will no longer be dreaded.

May Extend Longer.

It is within the power of the council to extend the time of payment to more than twenty years, but as under the charter all certificates of indebtedness are made payable at the end of that period it is likely that this will be made the limit of the time extension.

This provision will prove a good thing all round. With the city on a cash basis the deferred payments will be yearly drawing an attractive interest rate, while at the same time this rate will be lower than any for which money could be borrowed if the property owners were he forced to resort to this expedient in order to meet the larger assessments payable within a shorter time.

Section Much Discussed.

No portion of the new charter is being more generally discussed than this deferred payment proposition. The general expression is that it will prove a decidedly good thing, while a few say they do not see where the benefit will be evident, inasmuch as they would probably pay the assessments at once anyway. There is nothing to prevent those so fortunately situated as to prefer this mode of paying from doing so. They may pay the entire sum immediately upon the completion of the work if they so choose. But for the wage earner who must make these improvements at the same time his neighbors make them, the provision permitting of a series of easy payments will be a decided boon.

Read The Charter Over.

By this time everyone will have been supplied with a copy of the new charter, and all tax payers owe it to themselves as well as to their city to carefully peruse every section of the proposed measure. Its adoption will mean the simplifying and modernizing of the code under which the city's business is to be conducted in the future and will place Thief River Falls among the really progressive communities in the United States.

A B I L I T Y

That's the one word that fully describes the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers

A man came in to my place the other day and said:

"What! a 3400 r.p.m. Chalmers at $1090. I never knew Chalmers built a car under $2,000."

So many ask the same question. We never feature price in big type. We don't sell price. We sell a car first; then tell how much it costs afterwards.

I suppose we lose some sales that way. But, of course, we have a car of such decided quality, of such extraordinary ability, of such terrific power from an engine that you wonder where it all comes from—well, we just don't know how to talk price when so many other things bob up in our minds.

Now take power. Here it is rated at 25.3 H. P. when you buy your license. You get her out in mud, or sand, or on a hill—and bing, you can just double that figure.

You have got just about 100 per cent more power than we give her credit for.

Of course, lots of cars have great big power. But with most of them you've got to pay the piper every time you use it. Those big power cars have great big engines mostly, and great big engines have a terrific appetite for gas. You know, I don't need to tell you.

This 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers has an engine in her that's got the kick.

You step on the accelerator button, and zip! You never saw such spunk.

And not only power, but she gets away like a scared horse. I have to watch my foot when it is on the little button. First thing I know I am going too fast.

That's what the boys back at the Chalmers plant call "acceleration." I call it "pep." That's my language.

I used to sell a lot of cars in days gone by in simply stating the price.

Now it is all different.

People are buying cars more intelligently. They want what they call ability. There are too many cars that look alike and have the same price tag on them. The only thing that separates them is ability. There's all the difference in the wide world between cars when you look at them this way.

One car is sluggish like a ploughing horse. Another has got a light foot and gets under way without taking a quarter mile to get into high.

Why, with this 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers I forget once in a while and actually start her on high.

There aren't many cars that ever do that.

Then she runs so everlastingly quiet I am always a little bit suspicious of her—like a fellow who doesn't talk much, but usually delivers.

She's got anything in this town beat. So far I have yet to meet her equal in "pep." She's got everything from get-away to a twister on a hill.

Then when you come right down to look at her, you will have to admit she's got blue eyes. She's beautiful.

The big-town people have all fallen for her this year. I got a letter from the factory the other day telling me they had shipped 18,000 since December 1.

And there are thousand of orders unfilled.

Take a friendly tip and get your order on file now. I don't want to see you disappointed by delayed delivery right in the best part of the driving season.

You folks who have driven a lot will see the difference in a jiffy. Come on down and try her out. She's there.

In these columns last week there appeared an account of a wedding between two well known young people of this neighborhood. The report was wrong, no such event having taken place. This kind of thing always proves embarassing to the parties mentioned, who naturally look to the office of publication to set the matter right. The Times places a great deal of confidence in its correspondents and does not deem it necessary to verify items of this kind, but hopes that care will be taken to avoid mistakes in matter submitted. The blame is always shouldered by the editor, and he simply issues this notice in the hope that all correspondents will take the hint and make sure of their statements before causing them to be put into print.

Why We Are Opposing A Government Armor Plant

To the People:

Some people say that the very fact that the Bethlehem Steel Company is so aggressively fighting the proposal to build a Government armor plant is conclusive proof that the Company is seeking to assure for itself the "vast profits" derived from private manufacture.

The fact is that armor making is the least profitable feature of steel manufacture.

The reason we oppose a Government plant is very simple. It is this:

Even though there is but little profit in the making of armor, we have invested over $7,000,000 in our armor plant;

That plant is useless for any other purpose; if a Government plant is built the usefulness of our plant is destroyed.

It would be good business for us to make armor for the Government at any price over and above the actual shop cost, RATHER THAN SACRIFICE OUR ENTIRE INVESTMENT.

We do not seek to save big profits; our purpose is very frankly to save our armor plant—itself built solely for the use of the Government—from going to the scrap heap.

To do that, we are prepared to agree for any period to any terms of manufacture which the Federal Trade Commission shall say absolutely protects the Government of the United States.

What Do You Know About The Maxwell Car?

THIS is the time of the year when more people are considering the question of "what car to buy" than at any other time of the year.

This community has its full share of people who will soon be driving their first car or a new car to replace the old one.

Now, we know that we are going to sell Maxwell Cars to a great many of these people—depending upon how many we are able to acquaint with the merits of the Maxwell.

The generous value offered in the car is so evident—its past record is so full of good performance—owners speak so well of it—that when the buyer knows these things, he is eager to buy a Maxwell.

In order to tell as many people as possible about the merits of the Maxwell Car we are going to spend a lot of money in the next few weeks in this paper advertising Maxwell merits to those who do not know them.

The reason—we want to sell as many Maxwells as possible this season. Our future allotments will depend upon how many Maxwells we sell now.

You may know that the Maxwell market is a buyer's market, not a seller's market—broadly speaking. The demand for Maxwells the country over is greater than the supply.

For this reason cars are allotted to dealers by the factory according to the size of the dealer's business.

We want to make a showing and be in a position to get a generous allotment of Maxwells hereafter. Because the more Maxwells are sold in any community, the greater is the future demand. We realize the opportunity to do an ever-increasing Maxwell business.

This is only the first of the several messages we are going to print—a few days apart—concerning the Maxwell Car. But we don't expect to be able to adequately present Maxwell merits in printed words alone.

If you are one who is going to buy a new car you will find it decidedly to your advantage to find out all you can about the Maxwell before you place your order.

Come in and talk it over with us and let us demonstrate the car to you. Then, don't take our word alone, but ask those who now own Maxwells.

Get "posted" about the Maxwell and you will realize more satisfaction and get more "value received" for your motor car money than ever before.

And we are just as willing to have you investigate other cars just as fully as you do ours. The Maxwell will not suffer by the comparison.

Why not start your Maxwell investigation today?

EDWARD D. RYDEEN
Clearbrook, Minn.
Candidate for
REPRESENTATIVE
of the 65th Legislative District
Comprising Red Lake, Pennington and Clearwater Counties.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Having at the urgent request of my neighbors and friends, filed as a candidate for election as State Representative from the 65th Legislative District, I respectfully solicit the support of the voters of Red Lake, Pennington and Clearwater Counties at the Primary Election to be held June 19th, 1916.

In soliciting your vote and support, I deem it incumbent upon me as a non-partisan candidate to submit my platform for your candid consideration and approval.

I advocate and if nominated and elected will earnestly support the following legislation: Businesslike economy and efficiency in the administration of the State's business affairs, and the enactment of laws that will do away with what is called the "spoils system" in all departments of state government, but I do not deem it a wise policy to hamper or restrict the activities of our State University, especially the Extension Department by inadequate appropriations.

Legislation for state aid roads and bridges.

Legislation that will prevent discrimination in our tax levies.

The Recall, and also the Initiative and Referendum Amendment.

I am in favor of county option but prefer state wide prohibition.

Equal sufferage for women.

The election of the President of the United States, the Vice President and the United States senators by direct vote of the people.

I firmly believe in the rule of the people and if elected shall support every measure that will tend to increase the power of the people in the local and state government and all measures which will tend to benefit the conditions of our rural communities; and, while endeavoring to be just and fair to all classes, I believe that farmers and laborers should be given that consideration which ther welfare may demand.

Respectfully submitted,
EDWARD D. RYDEEN.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FOURTH WILL BE ONE GREAT DAY

Arrangements Are on a Scale Never Before Attempted by a City in This Section.

WILL BRING BIG CROWDS

Many Thrilling Features Have Been Booked and Everything Provided For a Regular Old-Time Celebration.

To make this celebration a success, Committee heads and others must take hold and do their work promptly. Due notice has been given and their duties made plain. It is now up to them to make good.

The industrial parade on the Fourth of July promises to be one of the features of the big celebration, local merchants taking keen interest in the same, with prospects for a number of handsome floats and nearly every leading business establishment represented. While it takes time and money to get up a good float, it is the best indication of progressiveness possible and it is hoped that business men will do their part to make this feature a success and credit to the city. The committee has offered $10.00 for the best float and $5.00 for the most original and unique idea in floats as an incentive. The committee is receiving assurances which indicate something decidedly novel and attractive in this line.

Speakers Chosen.

County Attorney H. O. Kjomme has accepted the invitation to deliver the oration of the day and he will speak immediately after the parade at some down-town location, to be indicated later. Mr. Kjomme is a gifted orator and will give the public some red hot patriotism, right from the shoulder, in a 30 minute address, replete with "pep", patriotism and optimism.

Advertising Out.

The publicity committee has issued the large posters and one lot of the smaller bills and these have been sent out on the Soo and the Great Northern lines, every station to be billed, while autos are to be used in billing the inland towns. The band boys will take an active part in the publicity work and will visit some of the smaller towns this week with bills, advisiing the public of the big doings at the "Hub City," Thief River Falls.

An invitation to the St. Hilaire Commercial club to join the celebration has been extended. Red Lake Falls is to come up several hundred strong, a good sized delegation will be here from Crookston, while Grand Forks people have indicated that they expect to take in the celebration. The smaller towns all over this section of the state will furnish their quotas, and even if they are to celebrate at home, many will come down in the evening for the fireworks and big dance at the Auditorium.

Red Hot Game.

Red Lake Falls will meet Nason's Nobles (Thief River Falls) at the fair grounds on the afternoon of the Fourth, and a red hot game is anticipated. A large contingent of fans will come with the team and the local boys realize that they have a job on their hands to win the game. The committee has put up a purse of $100 to be played for by the rival teams. The game will be played immediately after the races, which will be the first on the afternoon program at the fair grounds.

All Should Decorate.

Every loyal citizen, every business man and all interested in making this city look gay and attractive on the day of the celebration, is urged and expected to decorate places of business, private residences and public buildings. No one person or any one committee can carry out all these details and as due notice has been given six weeks ahead, there can be no excuse on the part of anyone to fail to do his or her part. Bunting and flags will be on sale in large quantities by local merchants and the public is urged to get busy early.

Fire Run.

The fire department is planning to put on an exhibition run immediately after the parade and address. Some old building will be set on fire and the department will make a run down the principle streets of the city with an idea to establish a record for laying hose and reaching the fire in a short space of time. This will be a thriller, if the plans of Chief Paul Medderigh materialize.

Events On Time.

Fair warning is given by the committee that the events will be pulled off on time and those taking part must "mark their step" in order not to be late. The assembling of the parade will take considerable time and Jesse La Bree, in charge of this important feature, announces that it will start promptly at the time indicated. It is absolutely necessary for those entering the parade to be up and doing early and be at the point of assemblage ahead of the hour for the parade.

The Womans Club.

Attractive holiday head-dress has been ordered for the ladies of the Womans club, who are invited to aid in the celebration by appearing in autos in the parade. As general activities will all be directed from the Commercial club, this will be headquarters prior to the parade and the secretary will have two assistants, ready to aid in every detail and to avoid confusion at the last moment, where there is so much to be done and, lamentably, so few to actually do things.

Thrilling Races.

The auto races at the fair grounds promise to be decidely interesting. Fred Haug, in charge of the race program, states that he has already listed a number of local machines and that outside motorcycle racers and several racing cars are to be here. The latter will either go exhibition miles against time or in competition with cars of their class, as the races will so be arranged that cars are raced according to power and size in order not to give any advantage in this respect. Chairman Haug announces his committee of starters, timers and judges as follows:

Judges: P. W. Sharp, J. W. Mc Kinney, Frank Weiland. Starter: Jesse LaBree. The list of events has not been decided as yet but the races will be for stock cars, with one 10 mile free-for-all event and such other races as the committee decides upon. Motorcyclists who expect to enter the motorcycle race, should communicate with Mr. Haug or the Commercial club at once.

An open event for farmers is being planned, the cars to be driven by owners. The details of this event and list of prizes will be published next week.

Many Features.

A number of special feautres are being planned but mystery surrounds them and the press has not been "let in" thus far. If you are accosted by some gaily bedecked, lavishly painted and coy appearing damsel from the northland on the day of the celebration, do not get excited. Tell the wife it is only a joke.

If a host of Happy Holligans, in grotesque costumes cut antics about the streets, try and guess who they really are. And keep your eye on Uuncle Sam, for rumor has it that he is a certain dignified city official—there, we nearly let the cat out of the bag. No more said.

Boys and Girls.

The committee wants 200 boys and girls for the parade and they are invited to communicate early with Prof. J. H. Hay in order that they may know what is expected of them. Holiday hats and flags will be furnished and the youngsters are expected to come in their best bib and tucker and enter into the fun and frolic. The parade will start early, but all American boys and girls know what it is to get up early, do their little chores about the home, help mother and dad so that they, too, can enjoy the big holiday.

The Inner Secret of New Post Toasties

A glance at one of these new corn flakes reveals novel, little bubbles which are raised by the quick intense heat of a new process of manufacture.

These bubbles are an identifying feature of these—the only corn flakes with a self-developed delicious corn flavor—the only flakes that do not have to depend largely on cream and sugar for palatability.

Try some of the New Toasties dry—they're good that way—the children munch them like candy. But of course the delicious new flavour is more pronounced when the flakes are served with sugar and cream.

The New Post Toasties do not waste into "chaff" in the package, and they don't mush down in cream like other flakes. They're a vast improvment over old-fashioned corn flakes and have met with enthusiastic approval everywhere.

WILL DRILL TEST WELLS AT ONCE

L. S. Olson of Wylie, Lowest Bidder—Committee Appointed to Secure Options on Locations.

RAILWAY CROSSING GATES

An Ordinance Introduced Requiring Railroads To Provide These Safety Devises at Busy Intersections Within the City.

The city council at its regular meeting on Tuesday night awarded the contract for the drilling of test wells for water in the city to L. S. Olson of Wylie, at the following prices: First 100 feet $1.25, second 100 feet, $1.50, third 100 feet, $2.00; testing amount of water and sand pumping $1.25 per hour, all labor and material to be furnished by the contractor. A committee composed of Councilmen Ihle, Amble and Benson was appointed to secure options on properties for the location of the wells and to make any other preliminary arrangements necessary in order to get the work begun at once.

Those Railway Gates.

On motion of Councilman Amble, seconded by Councilman Bakken, the city attorney was instructed to draw up an ordinance requiring the railways entering the city to provide gates at dangerous crossings. This matter has been before the council on several previous occasions but action has always been postponed at the request of the railroads. The statement was made that certain safety devices promised by the roads at different times had not been forthcoming and that nothing was left for the council but to take this course.

The hitching post ordinance again came up for discussion, and the street commissioner was instructed to have the watering trough removed from the corner of LaBree avenue and Second street and placed at the new hitching yard. There is some opposition to this ordinance on the part of merchants along whose store fronts these posts are now located and the councilmen are not unanimous on the subject.

Want Incinerator Removed

A number of citizens residing near the incinerator were present and objected strenuously to this plant being maintained in their neighborhood. They claimed that garbage was allowed to lay around uncovered and that this proved a prolific breeding place for flies. The smell from the smoke emitted while the refuse is being burned was claimed to be poisonous and dangerous to health and the request was made that conditions be looked into and improved. The shooting of dogs in the same neighborhood by the poundmaster also came in for a scoring. A committee was appointed to look into the mater.

Charter Bills Hung Up.

The bills thus far incurred by the charter commission in the preparation and distribution of the new city code amount to $366.90. City Attorney Thoedore Quale stated that an opinion of the attorney general was to the effect that no more than $500 could be spent by the commission in the preparation of this charter, and that this sum must include the election. As the payment of the bills now presented would leave only about $135 of this sum for election expenses, he was of the opinion that it would be better to lay the matter over until all the accounts in connection with the matter had been presented and then make provision for meeting them. This opinion was concurred by in the council.

Bids July 11.

Engineer Walker estimated that the cost of the proposed sewer on the east side would be $1,739, and that the cost of installing the electric lifts to replace the water lifts now in use by the city would be $550. A number of matters of a strictly routine nature were attended to by the council and the usual grist of bills passed.

NEW CLOTHING STORE TO OPEN HERE NEXT MONTH

Charles Lieberman Secures Lease On Building Soon To Be Vacated By McGrail's Shoe Store.

Charles Lieberman, who was formerly connected with the clothing firm of Lieberman Brothers at 121-122 LaBree avenue north, and who severed his connections with the above firm April 1, by selling out his share, will open a first class men's and boy's clothing store in Thief River Falls sometime in July. Mr. Lieberman has secured a lease on the Christenson building soon to be vacated by by McGrail's Selz Royal Blue store, and will occupy same after July 1.

When Mr. Lieberman sold out his interest in the local firm he had no intentions of remaining in Thief River Falls, and made several trips with a view of securing a good location. "I have been as far west as Glendive, Montana, and as far south as Minneapolis," said Mr. Lieberman Monday morning, "and I never saw a better location than Thief River Falls, therefore, I shall open for business in this city."

Mr. Lieberman left Monday evening for Chicago and other eastern markets to purchase his line of goods for the opening. The stock to be carried by Mr. Lieberman will be of the best obtainable and he will strive to please all the trade at all times. He is a business man of high order and is an expert in the clothing business. During the time he was connected with Lieberman Brothers, he made a large circle of friends, who will be pleased to learn of his decision to stay in Thief River Falls.

LOCALS WIN FIFTH; LOSE THEIR FIRST

McIntosh Proves Easy Pickings, But a Snag is Struck at Warren

Manager Nason's proteges made it the fifth straight win for the season last Sunday when they pulled a "Garrison Finish" and defeated Mc Intosh by a score of 8 to 4. Al Nareson, who has pitched for Cincinnatti in some league or other and who is this season with the Lincoln team of the Western League, was on the mound for the visitors, but was chased to the tall grass in the eighth frame, being succeeded by Holton.

McIntosh scored two in the first frame, later increasing the total to four. The locals persistently clung to the "straw" and were finally rewarded when "Dutch" Hofmeister clouted out the longest hit ever made on the local diamond, scoring a home run and driving in another tally ahead of him—consequently there was no danger of losing the game. Menzel, on the mound for the locals, was in fine form, striking out nineteen and allowing but eight hits. Franklin at first base for the locals, made four errors, two of which were responsible for a part of the scoring on the part of the visitors. Narveson struck out three and allowed only seven hits.

The first defeat of the season for the locals came Wednesday, when the team played the fast Warren "semi-pro" aggregation at that place .The final score was 11 to 7—bad enough to insure a severe retaliation when the return game is played in this city at a later date.

NEXT MONDAY WILL DECIDE THEIR FATE

Indications Are That There Will be An Unusually Large Primary Vote Cast.

When the result of the primary election to be held on Monday next is recorded, the hopes and ambitions of quite a number of patriots will have gone glimmering. Their desire to serve the nation or state or county in an official capacity will have been passed upon by their neighbors, and they will have to abide by the decision.

The polls in the city will be open from 6 a. m. to 9 a. m. this givng everyone a chance to vote. And they should take advantage of this chance. One of the men coming through Monday's fracas will be the lucky chap in November, hence the primary is almost as important as the final election.

In the country districts the polls will open at nine o'clock and will close at the same time as in the cities. Because of this it is not likely that anything definite concerning the results will be known until Wednesday morning.

ADVISE AGAINST DAM PURCHASE

Committee Appointed by Mayor to Make Investigations Advises Against Buying.

DAM SHOULD BE REPAIRED

Recommend Further That Outside Power be Purchased Providing Same Can be Secured at Satisfactory Rate.

The committee of five citizens appointed by Mayor F. H. Gambel to investigate conditions and make a report the advisability of purchasing the Kretzschmar dam, last evening submitted the findings to the city council. The report is as follows:

"Thief River Falls, Minn., June 13, 1916. To the Honorable Mayor and To the Honorable members of the City Council:

Gentlemen:

The committee appointed by Mayor Gambell to investigate and make recommendations as to the purchase of the water power, the installation of an additional engine at the auxialiarly plant, and the changing of the present light plant from a direct to that of an alternating current, would report:

"From the best information obtainable in the limited time at our disposal we would not recommend purchasing the water power at this time, but urge upon the present owners the necessity and importance of their repairing the same at the earliest possible date.

"We further recommend that the council contract with outside parties for such additional current delivered on its switchboard as it might need, providing it can do so at a satisfactory rate.

"We believe that the council should carefully consider the question of an additional engine at the auxialiary plant, the necessity for the same to be determined by the result of the negotiations for outside current.

"We would not recommend changing, at this time, the present direct lighting system to that of an alternating current, excepting in the outlying districts, and then only after careful investigation by competent authority."

Signed:

W. W. Prichard
T. P. Hamre
H. S. Dahlen
T. L. Melgaard
R. McGinn

The committee having this matter in hand has worked and steadily to arrive at some conclusion with regard to what is best to be done. Superintendent Peterson of the Crookston electric light plant was called into conference on two occasions and the information received from him was deemed of much value. On Tuesday, J. H. Brown of Grand Forks, president of the Red River power company, was here conferring with the committee members, the object being to discover whether or not it would be feasible and advisable to secure power from that concern.

Is the Modern Way.

Mr. Brown stated that his company could furnish the required current at a cost of from one cent to one and one-half cents per kilowat. It would be necessary to transmit this over high tension wires from the power house at Crookston on direct current. If it were desired this current could then be converted to alternating by the employment of a transformer. The loss in transmission and converting would not be over 20 per cent, this being the average noted under similar circumstances.

Would Like to Furnish All.

The committee and the council have in mind the possibility of securing sufficient power in this manner to furnish the street lighting, the plant here being amply able to meet all demands for commercial purposes. It was the opinion of Mr. Brown, however, that it would prove a much more economical move to secure the current for all purposes from the same plant, as in such case the cost would probably be brought down to about one-half cent per killowat.

Mr. Brown stated that the tendency everywhere was to secure electric current from some large, centrally located station. In the east, and in Montana, Nevada and California, where there is ample water power, the current is delivered hundreds of miles away from the power plant, and everyone is finding the arrangement highly satisfactory.

To Consider Matter.

Mr. Brown left on the night train for Minneapolis, but will return on Friday, when the matter will be gone into in greater detail by the committee and the council.

BIG ATTENDANCE IS NOW ASSURED

"Telelaget's" Annual Convention Expected to be Most Successful in History of Organization.

2,000 PEOPLE EXPECTED

Program Includes Auto Ride to Points of Interest in Neighborhood and Reception to Delegates at Commercial Club Rooms

The committee in charge of the "Telelag" gathering here on June 23 and 24, have completed the arrangements for this monster meeting, and are now ready to welcome the delegates. It is expected that there will be in the neighborhood of 2,000 of these, making one of the largest gatherings of the kind ever held in the country.

President A. A. Trovaton of Barnesville, has sent to the local committee the program for the two days. The members and guests are requested to report to Secretary F. T. Lincoln at the Commercial club immediately upon their arrival in order that they may receive their badges and other credentials entitling them to consideration as delegates. The program is as follows:

June 23, at Auditorium

9:30 a. m.—Opening of meeting. Address of welcome by Mayor F. H. Gambell of Thief River Falls.

Opening by the president of the association.

The balance of the forenoon will be taken up by business affairs of the association, short addresses and musical numbers.

1:30 p. m.—All delegates will gather at the Auditorium for an auto trip to nearby points of interest.

8:00 p. m.—Norwegian songs and music. Brage Chorus, Dr. P. L. Vistaunent, director, will assist in the evening program. Short addresses and story telling will form part of the evening's entertainment.

June 24, at Auditorium.

9:30 a. m.—Meeting will be opened by president and the business session of the association is expected to take up the forenoon.

2:00 p. m.—Address by Congressman Halvor Steenerson, followed by a musical program.

8:00 p. m.—"Kapleik," (competitive violin playing) by some of Norway's foremost violinists.

A reception tendered the visitors by the citizens of Thief River Falls will be held at the Commercial club at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

All visitors are cordially invited to make free use of the Commercial club rooms during their stay in the city.

BIG BUSINESS BY NEW PRODUCE FIRM

Wisdom of Selecting Thief River Falls as Distributing Point is Being Daily Proven.

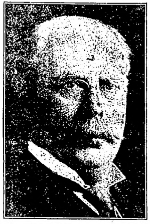
This city is fast assuming proportions as one of the greatest produce shipping centers in this section of the state. The Thief River Produce company, which has been in business here only about two months, has shipped more than twenty-five carloads of farm products of different kinds, and the receipts from all sections have been steadily growing. Two carloads of eggs per week has been the average since the concern opened, and as the fact that a certain market is established here becomes more generally known this amount may be expected to increase very rapidly.

On Saturday there were 3,200 pounds of butter of the grade known as "packing stock" received at the warehouse, for which 22 cents per pound was paid, and this item alone meant over $700 to the farmers of this neighborhood. This is dairy butter for which no sale has been found and, being kept on hand until it is no longer salable as a first-class article, must be gotten rid of at a somewhat lower price. D. C. Biddick, manager of the produce house, admits that dairymen receive better returns for their labor where they are able to take their milk and cream to a creamery, but even the present price for packing stock is sufficiently high to make the cow the most valuable producer on the place.

Eggs are a specialty of the concern. There is at present being shipped two carloads every week, the supply coming from every direction, but mostly from points west of here. Shipments are received from North Dakota as well as practically every community in Northwestern Minnesota. This is growing to be a tremendous business and goes to prove that chickens are a paying proposition in this section.

Mr. Biddick says that practically every farmer in the county is going to raise potatoes this summer, the acreage being much greater than during any other year. His concern has shipped in two carloads of seed and this has been secured by farmers in the immediate neighborhood. The amount of wool received also indicates that sheep are becoming common on the farms in the neighborhood. This staple is bringing a good price.

Seven men besides the bookeeper are employed at the ware house, and the business is of much larger proportions than is generally supposed.



Congressman Steenerson. Candidate For Re-election

CONGRESSMAN PAYS CITY SHORT VISIT

Mr. Steenerson Meets Old Friends and Speaks of Forthcoming Legislation of Interest.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson was shaking hands with as many of his old friends as the limited time at his disposal permitted him to meet Tuesday. Mr. Steenerson looks hale and fit and gives no indication that the outcome of his campaign is causing him any uneasiness. He was assured while here that he need not worry over this particular part of his district, as it was the intention to give him the biggest majority he has ever received.

The congressman was not here for the purpose of making a speech at this time. He was a visitor at the Commercial club rooms in the evening and met a large number of our people there, to whom he spoke of the things now before congress in which we are vitally interested. There are a unmber of these and Mr. Steenerson is giving them his best attention. Certain matters of importance are at present in such shape that a public discussion of them could do no possible good, but he promised to have something of much interest to impart after the primaries.

Mr. Steenerson will return on June 24 in order to deliver an address before the "Telelag" gathering here. and as this will be after the primaries, it is possible he may be more explicit as to the matters which concern us.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE; REMARKABLE ESCAPE

To have a big Hudson touring car turn completely over while filled with passengers and come out of the situation with no greater damage than a broken wind shiled, is an experience which but few are able to record. Nevertheless that is just what happened on Sunday on the state road just east of town.

T. L. Melgaard, cashier of the Citizens State bank, with Mrs. Melgaard, their children and Edward Brevick, teller at the bank, were returning to town along the road, which at this point carries a high comb and is but lightly gravelled. A slight rain had made the surface slippery, but the autoists had not deemed it of sufficient importance to put on the chains. When arrived at a point just east of town the rear end of the machine slewed around and turned completely over. The auto tipped in such a way that both sides rested against the banks of the ditch at the bottom, allowing the passengers to crawl out. No one was injured in the least, the only damage being a broken wind shield.

A block and tackle was attached and the over turned car righted, after which the journey was continued. It was perhaps of the luckiest escapes on record, and Mr. Melgaard believes that nothing but the fact that the car was moving very slowly at the time of the accident prevented consequences of the most serious nature.

ANDERSON FORCES ARE WARNED BY SENATOR SAGENG

Attitude of Former at Chicago Brings Public Letter From Ottertail County Lawmaker.

Senator Ole Sageng of Ottertail county, on Saturday issued a statement over his own signature utterly repudiating the claim that he was supporting A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls as a candidate for congress from this district.

The Anderson campaigners have been claiming the Senator's support for some time because of a letter written by the latter early in March to Senator Knute Nelson, complimenting the latter for his vote on the McLemore resolution. Much capital has been made of this communication, but Senator Sageng has since stated that the language was so plain that he preferred to allow people to gather their own inference from it.

When, however, Mr. Anderson, as delegate to the national Republican convention, voted for Senator George H. Sullivan as a member of the platform committee, Senator Sageng considered it due to himself as well as the people of the district to make his stand plain.

The letter, addressed to Mr. George W. Frankenberg, manager of the Anderson campaign, is as follows, and is self-explanatory:

Dalton, Minn., June 10, 1916.

Mr. George W. Frankenberg,
Chairman "Anderson for Congress" Committee, Fergus Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:

"Because of Mr. Anderson's action in voting for Senator Sullivan as Minnesota representative on the committee charged with the duty of formulating the principles of the Republican party in preference of J. F. Jacobson, I must request that your committee omit my name by way of endorsement in any lietrature hereafter published or circulated in support of his candidacy for congress.

"Knowing as I do the wide difference between the policies for which Jacobson and Sullivan have stood as representative leaders for years—a difference of which Mr. Anderson could not posibly have been in ignorance when he cast his vote—I must assume that he does not expect support from those who have stood for the Jacobson ideas of government and against the policies of Senator Sullivan.

"By turning down Jacobson and voting for Sullivan Mr. Anderson delivered the votes of the Ninth Congressional district in the ultra-standpat and liquor camps, but I shall be much surprised if they do not get out with a stampede on the 19th day of June.

Very respectfully,

O. O. SAGENG

PRINCESS THEATRE HAS NEW MANAGER

On Sunday evening the management of the Princess theatre will be taken over by W. H. Seitzler, who has purchased the furniture and equipment of L. M. Clancy and J. D. Heretage. The new proprietor is a man of long experience in the moving picture business, having formerly been the manager of the Princess theatre at Fargo. Recently he has been acting as manager of a musical comedy attraction at White City Park, Chicago, but his field is particularly that of the silent drama, he having devoted many years to discovering what is the best and most popular in this class of amusement.

Mrs. Seitzler, whose professional name is Miss Carlotta Stockdill, is a prima donna of note, and has recently closed an engagement with the Sullivan & Considine people, having appeared at all the theatres in this big circuit.

The new manager will put on the best pictures obtainable from the outset. He believes, from what he has been able to learn, that the people here will demand the best and that they will patronize any theatre that furnishes high grade attractions. Mr. Seitzler has begun the selection of his offerings for the balance of the summer and these will include some of the latest and most widely-known productions by the high-class producers.

Mr. Clancy, who has been the active manager of the theatre since early this spring, has enjoyed a very good patronage, but believes that he will be better suited in a larger field. He has not decided upon just where he will locate, and will probably take sufficient time before doing so to find exactly what suits him. Miss Heretage, who has been looking after her father's interest in the theatre, will in all likelihood return to her home in Virginia.

Where Is He At?

The supporters of A. G. Anderson of Fergus Falls as a candidate for congress in this district, should take their protege out and rehearse him. His action in voting for Senator George H. Sullivan as Minnesota's representative on the platform committee has thrown the temperance and woman's suffrage people of the district solidly against him—and this is not to be wondered at. Mr. Anderson's attitude on everything pertaining to politics has resolved itself into a sort of "comedy of errors," but this last move on his part rather caps the climax.

The Anderson people have been claiming the support of Senator Ole Sageng. This Otter Tail legislator is known as one of the foremost woman's suffrage advocates in the west, and at the last session of the legislature was author of a bill granting them the right of franchise. At that same session Senator Sullivan of Stillwater was the champion of the forces opposed to Senator Sageng's bill and was largely instrumental in its defeat, while Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle county was a strong supporter of the measure. At the Chicago convention Mr. Jacobson was the opponent of Senator Sullivan for the committee place mentioned, and Mr. Anderson voted for the latter.

What the people of this district are now asking is this: If Senator Sageng is supporting Mr. Anderson to such an unheard-of degree, why does the latter return the favor by voting for the man opposed most strenuously to Mr. Sageng and his measures? And further, does Mr. Anderson wish the people of the district to understand that he wants the kind of suffrage plank and temperance plank in the platform of the Republican party which he knows Senator Sullivan will advocate and support?

Fergus Falls newspapers state that the people there are surprised at Mr. Anderson's attitude and disgusted with his performance.

And will Mr. Eberhart also please explain? He is a candidate for the United States senate from the state of Minnesota, but as yet has not declared himself on a single issue among the many important ones confronting the American people. If his attitude at Chicago is any indication, however, he will be found just where the people all the time have expected to find him. Whenever he had an opportunity to vote on anything he was found right up among those representing the reactionary saloon element in the party, being particularly strong for the measures championed by Senator Sullivan. As the latter is known as the accredited representative of the breweries and all that these stand for in Minnesota politics, the voters will have no trouble in putting Mr. Eberhart and his candidacy under the proper heading. The people of Minnesota are not going to be represented in the upper house of congress by a man who comes so far from expressing their sentiments on this important question. It is likely Eberhart's views on many other matters are similary out of plumb—there is no way of finding out, as he has never expressed himself. It was sufficiently humiliating to be forced to admit that Ed Smith was the power behind the governor's chair while this was occupied by Eberhart—the people should see to it that no such implication attaches to a United Sates senator from the state.

The Republican Choice

Whatever the final outcome, there is no doubt but that the candidates most generally favored by the rank and file of the Republican party were nominated by the Chicago convention last week. In fact, there never was any doubt as to whether or not Justice Hughes could be nominated, the only question being as to his accepting the honor if it were tendered. Immediately after the convention Ex-President Roosevelt stated that if Justice Hughes announced himself as standing for the things for which the former has contended there would be no acceptance by him of the Progressive nomination, and the Republicans would again present a united front. This means that they will again be successful. Any other stand by Roosevelt would have made success at the polls impossible for either the Republican or Progressive nominee.

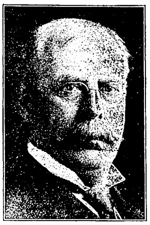
Immediately after being told of his nomination, Judge Hughes issued a ringing message accepting the responsibility of leading the party to victory and the country away from the ambiguous and, at times, humiliating position which it has occupied almost continually for two years. His utterances are of the intensely American kind, vigorous without being bombastic; conservative, yet firm. The upholding of American honor and prestage, the protection of the American farmer and laborer, and the encouragement of every kind of legitimate enterprise throughout all the land—these are the tenets upon which the Republician candidate will ask for the suffrages of his fellow citizens.

The candidate is ideal, the platform inspiring and the people in the proper mood for the acceptance of both.

Charles M. Start, for many years chief justice of the Minnesota supreme court says: "Mr. Kellogg was never false to any man or cause. If elected United States senator he would serve the public with like loyalty and fidelity." The verdict of the state press is that Mr. Kellogg is "fair, most able and most influential." The question is being put squarely up to the people in this way: "The candidates for United States senator from the state of Minnesota are all lawyers. If you had an important case to be tried and could secure the services of whichever of these men you might prefer, to which one would you intrust your business?" You are hiring a man to represent the state of Minnesota at the national capital for the next six years. There are a number would like the job. You can secure the services of the best man. That's Kellogg.

Nearly everyone who has given any though to the advantages of the city manager plan of government is its strong advocate. The people of the cities where it has been tried would not go back to the old haphazard way of doing business again under any circumstances, and this is the best evidence of its value. The Fargo Forum, for instance, says: "The commission form of government and the city manager plan are methods of eliminating the multiplicity of offices and of concentrating power in one or a few reliable hands. In other words, the people are putting their political eggs in one basket and watching that basket. The plan is proving a very gratifying success."

Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, in an address at the Washinton press club recently, said: "It is an unwise performance for any district to change representatives at short intervals. A new congressman must begin at the foot of the class and spell up. Of course, the more brains, tact, energy, courage, and industry he has the quicker he will get up. If he possess these qualities, and if his constituents will keep him in the house, he is certain to rise as the sparks are to fly upward. No human power can keep him down. It is only fair and rational to assume that every representative's constituents desire to see him among the 'topnotchers.' Do the people of the Ninth congressional district of Minnesota believe that they can be served better by a new man, or will they return Halvor Steenerson to congress? There is not much doubt as to what the answer will be.



What Makes a Congressman Useful?

"A man must learn to be a Representative just as he must learn to be a blacksmith, a carpenter, a farmer, an engineer, a lawyer or a doctor.

" 'A poet is born, not made,' says Horace, but congressmen---that are useful and influential congressmen---are made largely by experience and practice."

The above is from an address recently delivered by Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of the House of Representatives, before the Washington Press club.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson has represented this district during the past 14 years and has gained a position of influence and prominence in Washington. With each succeeding session his standing has been advanced until he is now generally recognized as the big, dependable man on the Minnesota delegation.

Will an untried and inexperienced man be in a better position to serve this constituency? No one for one moment believes that he will. Granted Mr. Steenerson's abilities and opportunities, he would still have to serve a similar length of time before he could possibly arrive at the station in which we now find Mr. Steenerson.

NOTES ON THE CONVENTION

Written for The Times

By MARTIN WIDSTEN

There were plenty of active candidates, who were willing and anxious to lead the party to a victory, and some of them were very big men, too, and in ordinary times would have looked good, but the delegates came with the express determination to run the convention themselves—and they did. The old guard bosses did not want Hughes. Also they did not want Roosevelt. There objection to Hughes might have been tempered somewhat if he had sent a man there with authority to make promises as to the disposition of the loaves and fishes, in the way of patronage, but he absolutely refused to be smoked out, and when it came to a choice of taking Hughes or Roosevelt, they surrendered.

That Teddy deliberately put on the Bull Moose convention and himself became a candidate for the Republican nomination with a view to influencing the selection of the Republican convention, and that he did both select the candidate and write the platform, is the opinion of many of the delegates—including your humble servant—who watched the proceedings. There isn't a man in the country who understands the game of politics better than Teddy, and that he undermined the position of the old guard and put them on the run is the general idea.

The Minnesota delegation voted for Cummins on the first and second ballots, and he was the only one of the "favorite sons" to hold his full strength after the first ballot, getting 85 votes each time, and being the fourth candidate in point of strength. The second ballot brought quite a slide from the favorite sons to Hughes and Roosevelt, the former getting the 32 Ford votes from Michigan and Nebraska, and an increase from nearly all the other states. That the Cummins delegations were about to go to Hughes, bringing him within a few votes of the landslide to him, though it was started by the withdrawal of Sherman, of Illinois.

I took a little interest in looking over the names of delegates in the convention, and found that almost 800 out of the 900 had names that might indicate that their ancestors came over on the Mayflower. Look for the Scandinavian names I found only eighteen, and on looking up a delegate from the south, named Peterson, discovered he was a gentleman of much color. The Holland Dutch were next in number to the old English and Scotch names, and there were some Irish, but not near as many as might be expected. In the southern delegations there was a sprinkling of "gentlemen of color," and then there was Kalanianole, who would have been king of Hawaii except for certain happenings in which your Uncle Sam was implicated. He dresses in the height of fashion and has great lung power, which he exereted rather impartially in favor of all the candidates, but made a special effort when Texas voted for Bill Taft. Take it all in all, the roll call of the convention shows that this country is run by native Americans, and that the adopted citizens of the country are not half as big a factor in politics as they think they are.

The two great showdowns were the suffragettes and the Bull Moose convention. In spite of the steady rain they were there for the purpose of creating enthusiasm, and stuck closely to the job. The suffragettes marched for hours in the rain, spoiling a great many thousands of dollars worth of millinery and dresses to show their great devotion to the cause. The Roosevelt adherents were the most earnest in the advocacy, and marched in bodies through the hotels and streets shouting at the top of their voices: "We Want Teddy."

The result of the convention seems to meet with much approval among those who have the votes to cast. The old management, which brought about the disaster of 1912, was put out of power, and the party goes to the country with a high grade man, who was in no way implicated in the candidate, and under the leadership of new men who represent the progressive thought of the nation.

It is highly probable that Charles E. Hughes will be the next president of the republic.

STEENERSON IN SPICY INTERVIEW

Congressman Makes Most Lengthy Statement of Campaign During Visit to Fergus Falls.

DOES NOT SEEM WORRIED

Discusses Opponent in Good Natured Manner But Puts Considerable Snap Into His Remarks—That Sageng Letter.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson was at Fergus Falls last week and while there gave out the longest interview credited to him during the campaign. He paid his respects to "endorsements" of a certain kind, while certificates of good character were referred to somewhat sarcastically . The Fergus Falls Journal prints the entire interview, and as it is of more than ordinary interest at this time, it is reproduced here:

The Journal's story.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson arrived home from Washington a few days ago, congress having recessed on account of the national conventions. Mr. Steenerson is making a brief tour of the district and arrived in this city Thursday evening. The "Tall Pine" always enjoys a contest and has gone through a large number of them since he was first elected to congress, and has always come out victorious.

At the present time, he is being opposed by A. G. Anderson, and Mr. Anderson's committee has been doing considerable work throughout the district. Congressman Steenerson's friends are confident that Mr. Steenerson will again win out by a good majority, notwithstanding the fact that the liquor men are leaving no stone unturned to defeat him because he got actively into the campaign for county option in Polk county and has voted and worked for the various temperance measures that have been before congress.

Congressman Steenerson discussed Mr. Anderson's candidacy in a good natured way today, but some of his remarks were decidedly pointed.. He said:

"The weakness of the A. G. Anderson publicity campaign is that it is apparently aimed and calculated to deceive the voter. A newspaper interview with Senator Nelson in Washington in which he gives Mr. Anderson a good character as an honest and trustworthy person, such as we often give young men leaving school, is made to appear as a strong endorsement of him for Congress. The Sageng "endorsement" is a letter written to Senator Nelson March 20, 1916, five or six weeks before Anderson was even mentioned as a candidate, in which Senator Sageng congratulated Senator Nelson on his vote on the warning question, and criticzed the other eleven members of congress from this state who voted the other way.

"Mr Anderson's name is not mentioned, and unless it is claimed that Senator Sageng had clairvoyant powers he could not possibly have had Anderson in mind when he wrote the letter. This letter appears in the advertisement under false, misleading headlines: 'Senator Ole O. Sageng endorses the candidacy of A. G. Anderson in a leter to Hon. Knute Nelson.'

"Senator Sageng has never endorsed Mr. Anderson for Congress.

"The most that could be said of the Sageng letter is that it criticized those members of congress from this state who disagreed with Nelson, but it does not by reason of that fact 'endorse' their opponents.

"Take Congressman Miller, for instance, who was a member of the committee that reported the warning resolutions, was in fact one of our leaders on the question, and who made a strong speech in its favor. He has been 'endorsed' by Senator Nelson in a letter to Mr. Hawkins and it will never be claimed that Senator Sageng has by his letter endorsed Miller's opponent. To disagree with Senator Nelson on a public question should not in the eyes of Senator Sageng appear to be an unpardonable sin, for he himself has for years taken the opposite stand from him on many important questions—notably woman's sufferage and the income tax—both of which Senator Nelson has opposed and for which I voted. Mr. Sageng forgot to congratulate me however..

"There are a whole lot of other endorsements from self constituted committees and the like, but the basic idea of the whole 'endorsement' campaign is that the people do not themselves know how to vote and must be told by someone who knows, and in whom they have faith. This method of campaigning will not be a success, for people prefer to do their own voting, and resent dictation from outside. I recall that when Mr. Tawney had got out of sympathy with his constituents on account of his opposition to the Roosevelt policy and administration, that although they covered the district with endorsements in favor of Tawney from President Taft and Senator Nelson, he was snowed under by Sidney Anderson by a large majority. People as a rule form their own opinions and will take no orders from outside.

"Mr. Anderson is strongly supported by the liquor interests and has carefully avoided committing himself on that question in his announcements. He circulates a newspaper clipping in which it is said 'he agrees with Senator Nelson in his recent announcement on temperance measures.' This may be good, but few people know what it is. Besides Nelson might die and then no one, not even Anderson would know where he stood, unless we are to infer from his recent action in voting for Senator Sullivan to write the Republican platform, that he would then depend on Sullivan for his course on temperance. People in this district will hardly agree to this."

TESTIMONY TAKEN IN 19 MUD LAKE CASES

Ninteen out of the twenty Mud Lake hearings, which have been conducted before U. S. Commissioner Wilhelm Michelet and Municipal Judge N. W. Tarrant, were finished last Saturday evening. Testimony in the hearing of Carl D. Newton and Joseph Boyeson over lots 4, 5, Sec. 13, T. 156 N., R. 42 W., will be taken before Judge Tarant next Saturday morning, June 17. This finished the cases. All the testimony in the twenty hearings will be forwarded to the land office at Crookston, where decisions will be made to determine the propriety of right to enter the land in volved in the applications.

The Mud Lake lands were opened April 12, 1916, and the question to be decided by the land office is who has the right—the "squatters" or those who settled on the lake bottom when it was officially opened?

LESS RED TAPE WILL BE RESULT

Under New Charter All City's Business Will be Conducted in Business-Like Manner.

MANAGER IS RESPONSIBLE

Every Department Except Police Will be Accountable to Him Directly and He will Have Power of Removal.

The new city charter to be adopted or rejected by the people of Thief River Falls at a special election on July 18, does not seem to be receiving all the attention it deserves at the hands of the taxpayers. Although supplied with a copy of the document, the ordinary citizen does not seem particularly will acquainted with its intention and provisions. This is to be regretted, as the matter is one of the most important ever coming up for consideration and one which will decide whether or not the people of Thief River Falls wish theirs' to be numbered among the progressive, wide-awake communities of the country or are satisfied to stumble along under an antiquated and worn-out system of municipal government.

Not the Commission Form.

The most common form of error found in connection with the proposition is that many people are under the impression that the city manager plan is the same as the commission form of government. The latter system has been tried out in a number of cities, and while it has been found an improvement over the cumbersome and unsatisfactory city department idea, has not yet arrived at such a stage of perfection as to be recommended in all cases. Under this system the different departments are presided over by a commissioner who looks after that particular branch of the government. In the larger cities this may work out satisfactorily, but it is not recommended for smaller communities where it is not feasible to hire a man to head each governmental division. Under the city manager plan, such as the new charter provides for Thief River Falls, one manager is employed to have charge of and supervision over all departments, except that of the police, this last being directly under the control of the mayor. This plan also provides for the retention of the city council, the manager being under direction of that body The value of this system lies in the fact that it centralizes responsibility in one man, he being held accountable for everything done by an employee or agent of the city. The manager may be removed by the council at any time that body finds cause for taking such action.

Where the Recall Applies.

The council members themselves will be subject to recall in case the people feel they are not being correctly represented. This fact meets the objection advanced in some quarters that the council might appoint an unsatisfactory man as city manager. The latter would be directly answerable to the council, the members of which, in turn, might be removed at any time by the people. The manager would have no part in the proceedings except to carry out the mandate of the council, make suggestions and formulate plans. The legislative function of the city government would be vested in the council as at present, but the execution of orders would be delegated to the manager. It is hard to see how anyone can find any objection to this way of doing business. It is the system which would be employed by any large private enterprise if the best results were aimed at, and the closer a municipality can be made to follow along the same lines the more successful it is likely to be.

The Raising of Maney.

In case the new charter is adopted and it is found necessary to raise money for public purposes, such as the acquiring of dam sites, telephone lines or any other public utility, the entire proceeding would be up to the council. That body would simply pass an ordinance looking toward the acquisition of such property, arrange for the issuing of bonds and make provisions for their sale. If within 30 days a petition is filed asking that the matter be put to a vote, this will have to be done under the referendum provision of the charter. If no such petition is filed the council will go ahead on the supposition that the project meets with the approval of the people.

That Salary Proposition.

A few pepole seem to think that an efficient manager would be a high priced luxury. This is the greatest mistake made in connection with this charter. Any man capable of doing the work expected of him would be saving the city a great deal more than the amount of his salary every year. Besides, there is nothing in the charter specifying that the manager must be an expert and that he must be brought from a distance. If the city has a man at the head of one of its departments whom the council believes capable of handling the work, there is nothing to prevent his being appointed manager and given control of things. Whoever the official appointed to this position may happen to be, he will only remain on the job so long as the council finds him satisfactory. A man capable of filling the bill would have to be paid a fair salary, but he would be earning it and saving more than its total to the city every year.

Read the Charter.

Do not vote against the new charter because certain of your neighbors have found things therein they do not approve or fail to understand. Read it yourself. Never has a proposition been presented to the voters concerning which there is less excuse for misunderstanding. Copies have been printed and distributed all over the city and it is the duty of every man to study the document carefully before casting his vote. If this is done there is hardly any question but that the proposition will be adopted by an overwhelming majority.

FEDERAL CROP REPORT FORECASTS SHORTAGE

Estimates For June 1 Indicate 13,750,000 Bushels of Wheat Less Than Last Year.

A summary of the June crop report for the state of Minnesota, compiled by the bureau of crop estimates, shows that there will be a shortage as compared with last yearr in nearly every item of farm produce. Spring wheat shows the most decided falling off, there being forecasted at this time a total of 58, 500,000 bushels, as against an estimated production for the state last year of 72,750,000 bushels. There is also a shortage as compared with last year of 385,000 bushels in the winter wheat crop, this being estimated at the time at 585,000 bushels, as compared with 722,000 bushels in 1915.

The June forecast for oats is this year 108,000,000 bushels, as compared with 134,375,000 bushels a year ago. The barley production is placed at 35,800,000 bushels for the present year against a total of 41,175,000 in 1915. Rye has fallen off about a million bushels, the estimate for the year being 4,920,000 bushels.

The hay condition is placed at 93, as compared with an eight year average of 91, pastures being estimated at the same figures.

	1916	1915
Wheat	$1.86	$1.39
Corn	.72	.64
Oats	.38	.48
Potatoes	.73	.39
Hay	8.88	7.20
Eggs	.19	.16

MAY VOTE FOR TWO BUT SHOULD NOT

Primary Law Rather Muddles Things But the Intent is Perfectly Plain.

By stating that each voter may mark his ballot for "as many candidates as are to be nominated," instead of "as many as are to be elected," the primary law makes it possible for a man to vote for two candidates on the non-partisan gallot on the 19th. The law reads:

"The voter shall designate his choice on the ballot by marking a cross in the small square opposite the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote. If he shall mark more names than there are candidates to be nominated for any office, or if for any reason it be impossible to determine his choice for any office, his ballot shall not be counted for such office."

That is the law as it now stands and as it will have to remain until altered by the courts or the legislature. This cannot now be done before the primary election and the statute will apply as passed.

Interested parties have asked for an opinion from Attorney General Smith and have received a reply to the effect that the proper way to mark the ballot is to vote for as many candidates as may be "elected" in spite of the fact that the law permits a person to vote for as many as will be "nominated."

WHITE EARTH INDIANS TO RECEIVE MUCH CASH

Over $700,000 to Be Divided Among Them By Verdict of Court of Claims.

More than $700,000 will be paid 10,000 White Earth reservation Indians before August 15, the United States court of claims on Thursday last having denied a motion for a new trial in cases involving the ownership of reservation properties. A treaty of 1889 attempting to consolidate all tribes in the state in the White Earth reservation provided for sale at auction of timber and land, the proceeds to be held in trust for 50 years and then divided among the Indians for relinquishments of their titles. After obtaining relinquishments the Indians claimed the government disposed of the properties under the general land act, contrary to the Nelson land act of 1889. Under a special enabling act the Indians sued the government and obtained a verdict for $711,000, which has been affirmed by the court of claims and now awaits distribution.

I Have a 3400 r. p. m Ready This Minute For You

This certainly is a great year for selling cars. Most everybody has had success. Some more than others, as is always the case.

Chalmers sales are running 900 per cent ahead of last year all over the United States. Mr. Chalmers' foresight in doubly providing against a shortage of materials has won a great contest.

It has enabled the Chalmers plant to keep on building cars when one or two have shut down or others have had to cut down on allotments to their dealers.

Here it is June and the great Chalmers plant is running day and night, three shifts, turning out more cars than ever before.

How long can Chalmers keep filling the demand?

I don't know. I know only this: the plant is turning out about 125 a day; Chalmers dealers are selling about 425 a day.

The only reason I or any other dealer can supply a car now is because during December, January and February the Chalmers plant worked day and night like Trojans and built about 125 cars a day when the dealers were selling probably only about 80. Soon these 425-a-day sales are going to eat up the surplus made during the Winter months.

I got a letter a few days ago from the Chalmers plant which simply said: "We have on hand orders asking for immediate shipment of cars whose value is in excess of $8,000,000."

I need not narrate the rest of the note which was so obviously subtle that I got the telegraph operators on the job right off.

I'm making my promises on delivery from day to day. I've got cars or can get them now. This may not hold good tomorrow.

Next week I shall cut my promises down still more. Remember, there are only two things that I concern myself with these days. One is to get you to take one ride in a 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers if you have not done so already. That's all I want. The car speaks in a language you'll understand.

The other thing is simply one of mathematics: If the Chalmers factory can turn out 125 cars a day and Chalmers dealers all over the United States are selling 425 a day, how long will the supply last?

Price still unchanged—$1090 Detroit.

Deeds, Not Words.

Thief River Falls People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,
For Thief River Falls kidney sufferers,
Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Thief River Falls people.

Ole Rude, jeweler, State St., W., Thief River Falls, says: "I was troubled with weak kidneys for several months, caused, I believe, by sitting constantly at the bench. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions. My back became weak and I had dull, nagging pains across my loins. I felt sore over my kidneys, as if I had been pounded. When I attempted to straighten or get up from a chair, my back felt as if it was paralyzed. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and a short time after I used them, I felt better. I haven't had any kidney trouble in some time."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Rude had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—J1-8.

The committee is planning upon a number of fun-provoking contests and stunts down town in the forenoon. These will be lively. The Thief River Falls band will give a concert in front of the Commercial club rooms at 8:30 a. m. sharp, introducing the events of the day. From that time on it will be one grand jubilee with King Joy and his retinue of joymakers in full possession of the city.

Parade at 1:00 p. m.

The grand industrial parade will form near the Auditorium at the corner of Main and Second streets at 1:00 p. m. sharp. and will proceed through the business section of the city, thence to the fair grounds. It will be headed by the band, and numerous civic bodies, the fire department and floats of progressive merchants, with an army of school children carrying flags and the boy scouts making up the ranks. All organizations are invited to participate in the parade and are urged to be prompt, as chairman Jesse LaBree advises that there will be no delay. The program at the fair grounds will start at 1:45 sharp and the parade must move on time.

Crowds Coming.

Everything points to a big attendance from other cities and auto parties from miles around will be here early to join in the festivities. The evening will be one grand carnival night, with crowds of merry-makers on the streets. The fireworks display from a floating platform on the river will be a feature. The dance at the Auditourium will close the celebration.

Red Hot Game

Red Lake Falls will meet Thief River Falls on the diamond immediately after the auto races and one of the best games of the season is assured. The visitors are coming with a firm determination to take back the major portion of that $100 purse and from all reports will be strengthened by some crack players and ready to put up a game well worth seeing. Tell your neighbors about the big celebration and be on hand to enjoy the sport. It will be worth while.

Why Not Face the Facts About Armor Competition?

To the People:

The policy of the United States Government for many years has made real competition in armor-making ineffective.

The Government might have asked the three armor plants for bids and let the entire tonnage to the lowest bidder. That would have made competition effective.

The result of such a course would have been to drive two of the three manufacturers out of business, and leave the country with facilities of only one plant in time of need.

The Government in fact has always asked for bids from the three manufacturers, but no matter what the price quoted, each year's business was divided among them.

Armor makers serve but one customer—the Government, just as a public utility serves but one customer—a community.

The solution of the public utility problem is regulation of rates.

The solution of the armor problem is for the Government to fix the price.

We voluntarily agree to accept any price fixed by the Federal Trade Commission. Isn't acceptance of that offer better than the destruction of an industry built solely to serve the Government?

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS

MARY PAGE, an actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock, and is defended by her lover Philip Langdon. Pollock has been pursuing Mary for many months endeavoring to win her love and her hand in marriage, but his attentions have been very unwelcome to her.

Knowing her stage aspirations, he has, unknown to her, financed her starring tour under the management of Daniels.

On the night of the murder, Mary leaves the banquet hall in the Hotel Republic and enters the Gray Room alone expecting to meet Langdon. She has been lured there by Pollock, who has been drinking.

A few moments later a shot is heard and Langdon and others, upon entering the Gray Room find James Pollock shot through the heart and Mary Page lying in a faint beside him with Pollock's revolver not six inches from the ends of her fingers.

At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Pollock had invaded her dressing room at the theatre, Langdon had come to her rescue, the revolver had been knocked from Pollock's hand and Mary had seized and retained it. She had put it in her hand bag the night of the murder intending giving it to Langdon.

Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

Nurse Walton describes the kidnaping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane.

There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky.

Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill Langdon.

Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

Maggie Hale, inmate of a gambling den, testifies that she was at the hotel and heard two men quarrelling in the Gray Room a short time before the murder. Her evidence seems to increase suspicion against Daniels.

Daniels privately informs Langdon that Mary Page did not kill Pollock and that if Mary is in danger of going to the electric chair he will tell all he knows of the case.

NEW CLEWS

"IF you please, Mr. Langdon, may I speak to you a moment, sir?" The deferential voice halted Philip as he was on his way from court to Mary's cell, and he swung about with the frown of one whose days are made up of unpleasant interruptions by strangers.

Langdon had been at the office most of the night looking up certain points of law and his temper was none too good.

"Well?" he snapped, and the pallid-faced man with the stooped shoulders winced and drew back a little.

"I'm sorry, sir, but I thought I ought to tell you, sir. It's—its' about the guns."

"The guns!" The frown faded from Langdon's face, and he looked down at the man with a sudden interest. "Who are you?"

"James Watson, sir. I am a waiter at the Criterion Club where Mr. Pollock resided. I also acted as his confidential man during my off hours, sir. You see, I am an extra, not a regular waiter in the dining-room."

Langdon Had Been at the Office Most of the Night.

Langdon drew a deep breath and laid his hand on the other's stooped and servile shoulder.

"This is not the place to talk," he said quietly. "You'd better come down to my office with me. I have a few minutes yet before the recess is over."

The man bowed, and Langdon, turning, led the way into the private room beyond the court-room, and waving the waiter to a chair, sat down himself on the edge of the table.

"Now," he said, "what about the guns?"

"Well, it's this way, sir," said James, twirling his hat in his nervous fingers. "I used to be in Mr. Pollock's room a lot, sir, and I knew all his guns. He had a lot of them—they were a sort of fad of his. There was two pairs of revolvers—duellin' pistols, he called 'em—but that there gun in court ain't one of those.

"I could see that she hated him."

"It was his own special one. He had the barrel sawed off extra short so it would fit easy in his pocket. He showed it to me, and said that if anybody ever did for him, they'd have to move quicker than he did. And then, sir, it was his own gun that killed him. Life's a queer thing, ain't it?"

Langdon nodded vaguely, too disappointed at the failure of this new hope to pay much attention to what the man was saying.

"I suppose," he said drily, "you won't mind telling that fact in court will you?"

He looked sharply at the waiter.

"No, sir."

The waiter hesitated a moment, then flushed and stammered, "I—I wish it might have been one of a pair, sir, if it would have helped the young lady; my wife and I admired her picture so. I took quite an interest, you see, being as how I knew him, sir. I'd seen her photograph in his room, too, and—I know what sort of a man he was. I ain't sorry he's dead, and I'd like to help if I could.

"One night I saw him grab her by the arm and I could see that she hated him and that he was makin' her life miserable by his attentions.

"I saw her that night, Mr. Pollock gimme a pass, and afterwards I saw him"—

He broke off abruptly, then leaned forward staring up at Langdon, the life-long servility of the man who serves falling from him for a minute as he said sharply:

"Mr. Langdon, Mr. Pollock had a fight with somebody over the telephone at the club that night, and he didn't go to the Hotel Republic alone!"

"What!"

Philip's exclamation was shrill in its excitement but before he could ask any questions that rushed to his lips, the bailiff rapped at the door, announcing that His Honor was ready to re-open court.

With a shrug of impatience Langdon gathered up the papers he had flung upon the table.

"I shall have to put you on the stand, and ask the questions I would like to ask now," he said to the waiter. "You don't mind, I suppose?"

There was a note of anxiety in his voice.

"That is what I am here for, sir," said the little man with a calmness that was not without dignity. "My wife is in the court, sir, waiting to hear me."

He spoke rather proudly; the attitude of a waiter seemed suddenly to leave him.

He was like a soldier who has hesitated, and then, having made up his mind to fight, goes invincibly to battle.

Langdon smiled, and clapped him on the shoulder in a friendly fashion that brought a flush of pride to the face of the older man.

"I'll have them here, sir, don't you fear."

Then he led the way out into the corridor again.

At the door of the witness room he paused a moment and opening it, called to Brennan, the detective, who had figured in the trailing of Daniels, and said quietly:

"I want James Pollock's chauffeur. If possible, have him in court within an hour or two."

"Yes, sir."

"And Brennan—get the carriage man at the Hotel Republic, too. The man who was on duty in front of the hotel on the night Pollock was killed. It's important. We must work quickly. There isn't a moment to lose."

"I'll have them here, sir, don't you fear."

And, snatching up his hat, Brennan set off down the corridor at a brisk trot, the waiter staring after him and nodding with pleasure at being able to comprehend the orders that the lawyer had given.

"They can prove all I say, sir," he said to Langdon. "I hope it will help. Shall you put me on the stand at once?"

"Yes," said Langdon: "I'm going to call you the first thing. You mustn't be nervous about it, though. It's not really such an ordeal as it sounds."

"I shan't be nervous, sir," said the waiter, but his face did pale a little when he saw the crowded room and the judge.

He acted like a man who had never been in a court-room before.

He took the oath firmly, however, and his voice, though a bit shaky, was clear as he answered Langdon's questions.

"I ought not to tell that, though."

His name, he said, was James Watson. He was forty-three years old and was employed as a waiter at the Criterion Club.

"You see, sir," he went on confidentially, "there is not enough work in the dining-room to keep us busy except at meal times. They keep one or two men on duty on account of orders for drinks, but the rest of us serve only at breakfast, luncheon and dinner. That leaves us some free time and we mostly have one or two of the gentlemen who live at the Club to look after. I was man for Mr. Pollock. That is, I looked after his clothes and attended to his wants in the way of valeting."

"Watson, when was the last time you saw Mr. Pollock?"

"After the theatre, sir, on the night when he was—when he died."

He uttered the last phrase almost in a whisper; and there was the awe in his voice of the uneducated at the mention of death.

"Did he dine at the club?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he seem uneasy aboat anything?"

Langdon was gaining confidence in this unrehearsed witness.

"Well, he had been drinking pretty heavily, and he was always ugly, if I may say so, sir, when he had been drinking. Maybe I ought not to tell that, though," the witness added, nervously putting his hand to his mouth. "He seemed excited, but I thought it was probably about the performance, sir."

"Did he say anything about carrying a gun that night? Think now, before you reply."

"No, sir," the waiter answered without the slightest hesitation. "But he swore when he came home that afternoon, sir, because his pet particular revolver had been taken away from him."

"Did he till you where or how he lost it?"

"No, sir, he did not. There was no reason why he should, sir, for I was only his servant."

"Was it one of a pair of revolvers?"

"No, sir. It was one he had had fixed especially to carry, sir."

"Watson, did Mr. Pollock telephone to anyone before or after dinner, that you know of?"

"Yes, sir. He went direct to the 'phone booth when he came in, and talked for a long time. He seemed very angry, and suddenly he shouted, 'Dash you, you'll do as I say or by —— I'll send you up. I've got the goods on you.'

"Then he seemed to realize that somebody might hear, and lowered his voice. There was another call for him while he was eating and he went out, and answered it. He seemed angry at first, then pleased. He was in a much better temper when he came back."

The witness wiped his brow, and glanced down at the spectators, as if looking for the sympathetic face of his wife.

In his excitement, and because the next question came so fast, he did not have a chance to see her.

"Watson, you say you saw Mr. Pollock after the theatre—where?"

"I had been to the show, sir, and was coming out when I saw Mr. Pollock just ahead of me. I thought he was looking for his limousine. I saw it and hurried up, intending to tell him where it was, when he caught sight of it himself. I was just behind him, therefore, when he stepped into it."

"Was there anyone in the automobile?"

"Yes."

"Could you see them?"

Langdon was overjoyed at the ready answers he was receiving.

If he had trained this man for a couple of days he could not have asked for better results.

"No. I could see an arm as somebody opened the door for Mr. Pollock, and I heard a voice say, 'It's all right, chief. It's a cinch.'

"Then the engine made such a noise I couldn't hear any more. You know how those machines do drown out everything sometimes, sir."

"Had you ever heard the voice before?"

"I couldn't say, sir. I didn't notice."

The bailiff came and whispered a word in Langdon's ear, handing him at the same time a slip of paper.

On it was scrawled: "Pollock's chauffeur, Carter, is in court. You can call him right away. I'll have the other here in a jiffy, Brennan."

With a smile of relief Langdon turned back to his witness.

"Was that the last time you saw Mr. Pollock?"

"Yes, sir."

"That is all, thank you, Mr. Watson."

And as the waiter stepped down with a smile on his face, Langdon said clearly:

"Call Frank Carter."

There was a stir through the court-room, and some commotion as the chauffeur got to his feet in confusion, and stared at Langdon.

"D'you mean me?" he asked bluntly; and when the court crier repeated the name, "Frank Carter!" he scrambled over the intervening spectators and went down the room excitedly.

He did not seem happy over the prospect of being made so conspicuous.

"You were Mr. Pollock's chauffeur, were you not?" asked Langdon, and the man nodded.

"Then will you please take the stand?"

Still looking somewhat bewildered at the sudden call, Carter took the oath, and Langdon, after the preliminary questions, said slowly, as if seeking to make a definite effect:

"Mr. Carter, you drove Mr. Pollock continually, did you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then you must have known most of his friends?"

"I did, sir, and some of his enemies," said the chauffeur grimly.

"Did you drive the limousine on the night Mr. Pollock was shot?"

"I did, sir," the witness answered readily.

He saw that he was important now, and, like most of his class, he rather enjoyed his sudden plunge into the limelight.

"Mr. Pollock went into the hotel alone."

"Did Mr. Pollock take anyone to the theatre with him?"

"No, sir."

"Did he give you any instruction about what to do after the theatre?"

"Yes. He said that I was to wait for him near the corner, instead of coming back after the show. 'I may need you,' he said, 'and I'd rather you'd wait. If you stay at the corner I can see you, whether I come out at the front of the theater or through the stage door.'"

"He took a guest back to the hotel with him after the performance, did he not?"

"No, sir."

The chauffeur was very emphatic.

"Do you mean that there was no one in the car except Mr. Pollock?"

"Oh, no—there was Shale. I thought you meant somebody else."

"Who is Shale?"

"Well, he's a sort of a pal of the chief's—that is, he used to be. I dunno exactly how to describe him. He and Mr. Pollock were in on some deals together, and when the chief wanted anything special done, he allus sent Shale. Folks called Shale 'Jim's jackal.'

"Mr. Pollock seemed to think a lot of him, though, and took him around a good bit. When he was good humored, he used to say he took Shale along because he knew what he was up to when he was with him."

"When did this man Shale join Mr. Pollock?"

"After the show, or, rather, during it. I had been off to get a snifter, and when I came back Shale was sittin' in the car smokin'."

"'I'm waitin' for Jim,' he says; and I says, 'Go as far as you like.' So he give me a cigar, and we sat there smokin' till the show was over and Mr. Pollock came out."

"Was Mr. Pollock surprised to see this man in the machine?"

"No. He was used to it. He seemed to have been expectin' him. I saw him looking about in the crowd as if he was huntin' someone, and when he saw Shale in the car he looked relieved."

"Did you drive direct to the Hotel Republic?"

"Yes, sir, we did."

"And Mr. Shale went in with Mr. Pollock?"

"Oh, no, sir. As soon as the car stopped he went off down the street and Mr. Pollock went into the hotel alone."

There was no doubt that both these unexpected witnesses had made a good impression.

The district attorney was not pleased; but Langdon, happy in the knowledge that the terrible ordeal for Mary Page was drawing to an end, left the court-room that day feeling younger and full of power.

Soon—soon—

But he hardly dared to dream his wonderful dream.

What Oen Merc. Co.
of Thief River Falls
have to say about cream separators this week

All Highest Prize Butter De Laval Made

THE most important butter scoring contests take place at the Annual Convention of the National Buttermakers' Association, held in recent years in conjunction with the National Dairy Show in Chicago. The first prize winners at every convention of the Association since its organization in 1892 have been as follows—all De Laval users.

1892—Louis Brahe
1893—C. W. Smith
1895—F. C. Oltrogge
1896—Thomas Milton
1897—H. N. Miller
1898—Samuel Haugdahl
1899—A. W. McCall
1900—H. T. Sondergaard
1901—E. O. Quenvold
1902—E. L. Duxbury
1904—L. S. Taylor
1904—J. C. Joslin, World's Fair, St. Louis, Grand Prize Butter
1906—A. Carlson
1907—A. Lindblad
1908—J. C. Past
1909—A. J. Anderson
1910—Albert Gamp
1911—A. J. Anderson
1912—A. L. Radke
1913—O. N. Petersen
1914—Thomas Sadler
1915—Emil G. Oman
(There were no national conventions in 1894, 1903, and 1905.)

When you use a De Laval Separator you not only get more cream but better cream as well

THE best evidence of this is that during the last twenty-five years butter made from De Laval separated cream has invariably scored the highest at all important contests and state fairs. Practically all the cream entered in the International Milk and Cream Show held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition, was separated by De Lavals, and every first prize, and most all the other prizes, were won by De Laval separated cream.

These facts are simply further proof of De Laval supremacy in everything that goes to make a good cream separator. Don't buy any separator until you give us an opportunity to let you see and try a De Laval. We will be glad to send one out to your farm on trial any time you say. Just phone, send a post card, or call and we will be glad to give you all the information you wish.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

MICHELIN

MICHELIN
Red Inner Tubes
have a world-wide reputation for durability for the following reasons:
1st: Michelin Red-Rubber Tubes are compounded of certain quality-giving ingredients which prevent them from becoming brittle or porous and which preserve their velvety softness indefinitely.
2nd: Michelin Tubes are not simply pieces of straight tubing with their ends cemented, but are formed on a ring mandrel to exactly the circular shape of the inside of the casing itself and consequently fit perfectly.

Serve
New Post Toasties

Here's the why:

The New Toasties have a delicate, true corn flavour—unmatched by any other corn flakes. Trial proves.

They are the meat of choicest white Indian Corn—first cooked and seasoned, then rolled into thin wisps and toasted by quick, intense rotary heat. This new patented process of making raises distinguishing little bubbles on each flake, and brings out their wonderful new flavour.

Re-elect Steenerson.

The Sunbeam.—While we have always stood as opposed against county option, yet Congressman Steenerson made speeches in favor of it last summer, when the fight was on, but we consider county option as a secondary matter, when it comes to electing a Congressman from the Ninth district of Minnesota to represent us at Washington. Now my friends who are with us opposed to county option, do not let us bite off our nose to spite our face, by electing a new member to take the place of Steenerson at this time, when there are so many questions of vital importance to this district before Congress. The record of the votes of course is that the optionists have got the majority in Pennington, Polk, Marshall, Ottertail, Becker, Clay Norman and Roseau counties, while the anti's have Red Lake. But do not let us let them have the credit of doing all the voting for the re-election of Steenerson. Let us show that we are liberal enough to consider the best interests of the Ninth district of Minnesota, by voting for the renomination of Congressman Steenerson.
